SHORT LOCAL ITEMS OF MORE THAN PASSING INTEREST

Arrives From Italy

It was a sad homecoming for all concerned last Friday afternoon when Mjr. Robert Olsen and two small children, Mark, 3, and Janice Faye, 3 months, got off the plane at the Spokane airport. A brief message a week before told of the tragic death of Mrs. Olsen (nee Irene Peters).

Now the full story was learned, how she had been killed instantly in a head-on collison with a gasoline tanker truck Sept. 27, at Verona, Italy, where Mjr. Olsen was stationed. She was on her way to pick him up at the base when the accident occurred. Her car was demolished, but the truck driver was uninjured. Mjr. Olsen and children left Verona, Italy, on Oct. 2, but were turned back due to entry trouble. This was finally cleared and they got away on Thursday, Oct. 3, arriving in Spokane, Friday afternoon, where they were met by Gordon and Leo Peters, Mrs. Bernadine Peters and Mrs. Vera

On Saturday Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Peters, who had been waiting in Spokane with other members of the family brought Mjr. Olsen and the children, and Mrs. Sylvia O. Peters here Thursday over-night and Friday to their home.

Word has been received that the body of Mrs. Olsen will arrive in Lewiston, Friday. The funeral will be held Monday at 2:00 p. m. in the Brower-Wann Parlors, with interment in Normal Hill cemetery.

Untreated Water Is Farm Problem Treatment Units Are

ard of millions of rural and suburban families is the possible pollution of raw, untreated water drawn from private well systems.

This problem is assuming greater proportions than have before with the growing exodus of more than 2,000,000 persons a year from dense urban population centers to newly developed suburban areas.

Invisible pollution of raw water is a daily threat, even to deep wells that have escaped contamination for years. And water-borne diseases are not detected by sight, taste or smell.

Another water problem in many areas of the country is mineral damage which causes lime scale.

Safe water within arm's reach is possible with low-cost home chlorinating units.

To solve both problems of pollution and mineral damage, modern industrial chemistry and technology have combined to produce simple household water treatment units effective and economical enough for the private well owner. A typical unit will purify 75,000 gallons of water a day, an ample supply of water for a whole family, even enough for today's modern farm uses of water, and sufficient for dairies and small business.

We Are Using More Water Than Ever

With three-fourths of the earth's surface covered with water, it seems a paradox to explain that "water, water everywhere," no longer holds true.

"Nor any drop to drink" would be a more likely paraphrase for our nation is confronted with a serious water shortage, according to a report by National Livestock Producer magazine.

Water tables have shrunk from 25 to 50 feet within the past 10 years in many sections of the country. In the West, water is being pumped from depths as great as 600 feet.

It isn't true that we have less water today than we used to have. We just use more in our daily activities.

Only two decades ago, the average person used about 128 gallons of water a day. Now he uses an' average of 145 gallons daily.

When you consider the industrial and farm uses of water, we need 1,200 gallons of water daily for each man, woman and child.

We must set a goal for making better use of the perpetual supply of water falling from our skies. Only 27% of the rain that falls in the 17 Western States is put to use. The rest runs unused toward the Only 8% of the water available in Eastern States is used. A tremendous total of 825 billion gallons a day runs off into the sea.

In the meantime, research is continuing on the desalting of water from oceans and converting brackish water to a usable form.

Hold Tight

Wire solder holds better, lasts longer than twine when used as fastener on sacks of poultry or stock foods. Stitched through the sacks as shown, solder stays always in place.

Commandments of Safety

- Treat every gun with the respect due a loaded gun. This is the first rule of gun safety.
- Guns carried into camp or home, or when otherwise not in use, must always be unloaded, and taken down or have actions open; guns always should be carried in cases to the shooting area.
- Always be sure barrel and action are clear of obstructions, and that you have only ammunition of the proper size for the gun you are carrying. Remove oil and grease from chamber before firing.
- Always carry your gun so that you can control the direction of the muzzle, even if you stumble; keep the safety on until you are ready to shoot.
- Be sure of your target before you pull the trigger; know the identifying features of the game you intend to
- Never point a gun at anything you do not want to shoot; avoid all horseplay while handling a gun.
- Unattended guns should be unloaded; guns and ammunition should be stored separately beyond reach of children and careless adults.
- 8 Never climb a tree or fence or jump a ditch with a loaded gun; never pull a gun toward you by the muzzle.
- Never shoot a bullet at a flat, hard surface on the surface of water; when at target practice, be sure your backstop is adequate.
- 10 Avoid alcoholic drinks before or during shooting.

Watch That Fertilizer

U. of I. — Applying commercial fertilizers without first having a soil test to determine the soil's needs is like going on a "blind date," says Charles G. Painter, extension soils specialist for the Universtiy of Idaho.

wasting your time and money.

With the soil test, it's easy to know what your soil needs, and what it doesn't need. The latter is important, Painter says, if the farmer is to avoid putting expensive fertilizers on soils that do not need them.

The weak link in the soil tests is that they do not give an accurate diagnosis of the soil's nitrogen level. Tests that will accurately show nitrogen content have not been perfected. To make up for this, many county agents have put in demonstration plots on local farmer's fields to show the effect of nitrogen on crops. Other farmers visit the plots to determine the needs of their own fields in the light of their cropping history and crop rotation.

"The more I see of what can be done with a good soil test, the more I become convinced that every farmer should test annually or at least every two years," Painter declares. "With a good soil sample, a good test of that sample, and wise use of returns from "It may work out all right," Paint-the test, farmers can save money and er points out, "but you are often make money on their fertilizer pro-

Low Cost Silos: Plastic Covers

They're Airtight and Cut Surface Spoilage

Plastic covers may be the means making low-cost time and labor-saving silos more popular than ever among the Nation's dairy farmers, the U.S. Department of Agriculture said today.

Studies have shown that covers of either black polyethylene, vinyl, or neoprene-coated nylon can provide air tight seal over the silage and thus greatly reduce surface spoilage of the contents, according to scientist of USDA's Agricultural Research Service. .

Greater spoilage because of relatively large surface area has been the major disadvantage of horizontal bunker, trench, and stake type silos as compared with the conventional upright types. Even this disadvantage has not prevented their construction and use by many farmers because of lower initial cost, ease of filling by mechanical means and ready accessability of the silage either for self or mechanical feeding,

Reduction of surface spoilage and other storage losses in such silos by means of airtight plastic covers, however, adds materially to their desirability. Use of plastic covers in USDA experiments has reduced surface spoilage and total to the equivalent of surface spoilage in upright silos.

The hazard of air leakage through punctures in the cover or when the cover is rolled back for feeding, was practically overcome in the experiments by spreading a 2 or 3 inch layer of sawdust or other similar weighing material over the cover.

Leptospirosis Major Health Problem

That "ole swimming hole" may hold more than memories-if any livestock in the vicinity have leptospirosis. Dr. L. E. Hanson of the University of Illinois College of Veterinary Medicine warns that leptospirosis may be spread through surface water and streams contaminated by urine from infected swine, cattle, sheep and field ro-

A major livestock disease leptospirosis causes greatest losses in cattle and sheep through abortions, mastitis and poor weight gains. In swine, it causes abortions, stunted growth and occasionally death of older pigs.

There have been instances in which humans have been infected with leptospirosis after swimming in pools contaminated by animals having the disease.

Since the organism is readily spread through surface water, it's very important not to introduce the disease in the first place. One way to prevent infection is to have every new animal tested by the veterinarian before adding it to the herd.

If the disease gets started in one group of animals, isolate them from the healthy animals, and make sure that no water drains from one group to the other.

Quick Repairs

Plumbing pipes that suddenly spring a leak can be temporarily repaired with a piece of garden hose. Use a 2-in. length and slit it along one side. Slip the hose directly over the leak and secure tightly with clamp.

October 6 to 12, Fred O. Stedman, postmaster, said today. Commenting on the establishment of International Letter Writing Week, Mr. Stedman pointed out that each year since 1938 the post office department has joined in the observance of this week — an annual event celebrated to emphasize the meaning and value of letter writing as a symbol of American freedom. "As a result of its success," Mr. Stedman stated, "National Letter Writing Week will be conducted on an international basis this year for the first time. International Letter Writing Week is based on the idea that written communication between people in all countries of the world will contribute toward the building of Men, if you believe marriage ls a share-alike partnership, then let your wife try out those power tools she's been buying you for Father's Day or your birthday.

We're not suggesting that you turn your workshop hideaway into a social gathering spot, but you can ease your mate's burden by showing her how to speed up several time and energy consuming chores.

The ordinary portable electric drill, for example, can be fitted with a wire brush. With it, your wife can quickly clean up a charcoal-blackened barbecue grill, normally a tedious, arm-wearying job. It's best to mount the drill horizontally, so she can manipulate the grill with two free hands. Don't use the electric tool near water, naturally, or with wet hands.

Wire brush attachment makes power drill a kitchen aid.

Put a wool bonnet or cover on your drill or sander and your partner will actually enjoy polishing furniture. She'll discover that there's little comparison between the mirror-smooth finish provided by power polishing and hard-rubbed surfaces. And she'll find it easier to keep highly polished surfaces clean.

She may be so pleased you can percuade her to shine up the car, too. Just make sure she always uses a wax made for use with electric tools.

Now, maybe you're beginning to see the potential of mechanizing the missus. She'll zip through ordinary chores and start taking on chair and table refinishing jobs. With a sander, she'll even think it's fun.

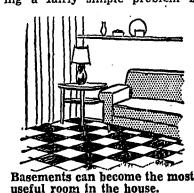

After some practices, you'll be able to share major jobs with her. Besides getting them done faster, you'll get new satisfaction out of your modern "power partnership."

Basements can be wonderful They provide a place for storage for workshops, for recreation rooms. They also provide problems-some simple to remedy and others that call for much effort and materials.

Sometimes, by correctly solving a fairly simple problem in the first place you can avoid more serious trouble or cost later. Before putting tile on a concrete floor, for example, check every condition of your present cellar before buying a thing. Tell your dealer any peculiarities that exist, especially moisture conditions, even if they seem unimportant. The answer to the following "simple" question from a reader may prevent a poor tiling job.

Q.—"We moved into a house with a painted basement concrete floor. We're thinking of putting in a recreation and utility room with asphalt tiling. Can we put the adhesive over the painted floor?"

A.-No, unless the paint is so badly worn that there in no paint "skin" left to prevent adhesion. If the paint job is in pretty good shape, you can't tile over it as is. Mix two pounds of household dye in a gallon of hot water. Soak sawdust in this solution and spread over the painted area. After about 12 hours scrub the floor with hos water. Then scrape off the paint-it should come off easilywith a wide, sharp piece of steel. Wash again with clean water. When it's dry, you can proceed with normal preparations for tiling.

HOME DESIGN HINT: IF you're planning to add an enclosed porch to your dwelling vou'll keep inside house ventilation and lighting at their best by putting all or part of the porch at a corner. You'll get more porch exposure that way as well, meaning more comfort in hot weather.

"That's easy," replied the prospective home owner. "We want something to go with an antique door knocker my wife picked up in Mexico City last winter."

These chilly, damp fall days remind us that the fuel oil tanks need watching — or, if you pre-fer, we'll watch them for you and keep them always full. Come in and talk it over Sales Day, or just phone us at 1251.

Says a modern philosopher: "To be happy with a man, you must love him a little and understand him a lot; to be happy with a woman you must love her a lot and try not to understand her at all."

Yes, we handle chains, chain tighteners, and many other winter necessities.

A sign in a butcher shop, directly over the meat grinder declared: "Go ahead. We don't mind you sticking your nose in our business."
