The people should understand the real purpose of any change, and the method upon which party leaders thought of attaining it should be open and free from suspicion.

The constitution should not changed. It should not be changed in Washington. It should be changed by the people alone.

Justice for All! The effort to establish and maintain an independent and uncontrolled judiciary long antedated the adoption of our federal constitution. If the people make a mistake, they will correct it. The dangers which we encounter are not the amendments which may be proposed and made by the people but amendments to the constitution through usurpation by congress or by the executive.

Coming for a Long Time.

The legislative and the judicial departments have been invaded by the executive where opportunity and inclination have arisen. Efforts of the executive to take over in some measure the law-making power is not entirely of recent growth, nor is it characteristic of any particular administration. It is an evil of long standing. It is one of the subtle and dangerous demands of bureaucracy made under the guise of efficiency and public interest which nothing less than eternal vigilance can restrain and apparently no power canvholly prevent.

But the attempts to encroach upon an independent judiciary have been Both Parties to Blame.

Neither of the old parties has hesitated at different times to disregard the guarantees of the constitution or to denounce and assail the supreme court when its decisions failed to sustain

When the supreme court held that a citizen in private life could not be tried by a court martial and that every and more universal happiness have citizen accused of crime was entitled been the portion of the masses since to his day in court, a perfect storm the year 1789 than in all the 5000 years broke upon the court—this time from republican leaders. The republican leader of congress declared: "Whenever I am not alarmed by any proposal to the decision of the supreme court, in change the constitution by constituthe judgment of congress, is subversive tional means. I will accept the judg- to the rights and liberty of the people , it is the solemn duty of congress

Guided by Constitution.

What had the court decided? Nothing more than that the plain provisions of congress, upon the executive and upon the courts. These were the grounds proper to advise disregard of the constitution and defiance of the court.

And yet it is a demonstrable truth that the supreme court has thrown the shield of the constitution about the rights of the citizen when all other appeals for relief have failed him. When war, or mob passion, or political zeal or selfish schemes have carried men beyond reason or justice, the court, when called upon, has interposed to avert great wrongs.

Just Someone's Discontent. In the last analysis, every question affecting the personnel of the supreme court and its interpretation of the fundamental law, arises from someone's discontent with constituted authority. If the executive finds it difficult or believes it impossible to allay that discontent by means that lie withtra-legal means to effect a change? The sober and informed judgment of the people will answer in the negative.

"Not all the false prophets on earth can convince the American people, said Henry Ford, "that the American way is a bad way or that it can not succeed. It is the real hope of all humanity even now. We are not willing to saddle America with European fallacies and failures. And it is remarkable how many of them have been offered for our acceptance."

The Western Range Occupies two-fifths of the total land area of the United States and constitutes one of its major sources of wealth, yet the public knows less, and is less concerned about its condition and conservation than of any of our other natural resources.

No 289 (74th Cen. 2nd Session) the department of agriculture has submitted to congress a 620-page report on the range problem of the western United States.

Its preparation was left largely to the forest service (dept. of agriculture; and a large number of specialists participated and incorpotated information obtained by many years of research on range and watershed problems and also from surveys made during the past 30 years. The following article is taken, largely, from data submitted in said report.

"A Great but Neglected Natural Resource."

The western range has never been fully and clearly recognized as one of our great natural resources along with forests, soil, wildlife, coal, oil, iron and other minerals.

It is not surprising, therefore, that the intrinsic value and importance of the range resources to the west and to the entire country has been seriously underestimated or entirely overlooked. eral public, many conservationists, and even many western stockmen have no real appreciation of the extent to which the.. range.. has.. been.. neglected.. and already affected and will in the future continue to affect human welfare.

Outside of the range country the general public, and even many conservationists, have gained much a what they know from fiction. They topography, soil and climate. Nearly half of the national forest range and 12 per cent of private ownership falls in this category. Probably not much over 5 per cent of the entire range area is in a thoroughly satisfactory condition.

An outstanding cause of range depletion has been excessive stocking and some 17.3 million animal units are now Neither is it surprising that the gen- grazed on ranges which it is estimated can corry only 10.8 million.

The Virgin Range.

Before agricultural settlement by the white man, the virgin range comprised abused, what the consequences have the western two-thirds of the United been, and how these consequences have States. If non-grazable lands such as mountain tops, almost barren deserts and dense forests, are excluded, it encompassed nearly 850 million acres. As might be expected for so alrge an area, there 'were tremendous variations in sulted in correspondingly great difsome places the range was a natural grassland that stretched for mile upon mile without bush or tree to break the monotony of the landscape. Other acreas, less extensive, were brushy, the intermingled grasses and weeds being inconspicuous though present in considerable quantities. Cattlemen resorted to force in many localities, sometimes scattering bands of sheep, sometimes driving them over precipices, and in some places setting up deadlines that sheepmen were warned not to cross. PLANS LARGE POWER

SUNNYSIDE, Wash.—Pacific Power & Light company plans to install 50 miles of new power lines in the Yakima valley in 1937, and predicts 500 rural customers will be added to their list of patrons, according to L. R. Sheehy, district manager.

The proposed extensions will be started as soon as road conditions permit, he said. Heavy pole trucks cannot be taken over the soft roads in lower valley districts at this time.

The company put up about 30 miles of rural lines in 1936 and added 300 customers.

VALLEY DEALERS DENY CHARGES OF RACKETEERING

PROSSER, Wash.—Charges of racketeering in the potato business made by the federal trade commission in pressed for funds and were disposed Washington, D. C., last week, probably referred to transactions in eastern cities, Yakima valley dealers declared, saying that trading in the Yakima valley was on a small margin.

> Dealers generally add $1 a ton to his cost for potatoes when shipping to the coast and $2 or more when shipping to the middle west, because of the greater risk of shipping there,

> Dealers providing the grower with seed potatoes usually require the return of two tons of potatoes, at harvest time, for one ton of seed furnished.

Except for unsatisfactory crop conditions in parts of Germany and excessive rains in some sections of France new crop prospects are fairly favorable in Europe.

In the United States, with rapidly diminishing stocks, prospects for winter wheat are better than a year ago and trade agencies forecast a crop around 100,000,000 bushels larger than the 1936 harvest.

Wheat greened up materiaaly in the main part of the belt where moisture was adequate but a large portion of the southwestern plains was still badly in need of moisture. Conditions in the soft winter wheat area were mostly unfavorable because of wet soil and some heaving.

Pend O'Reille County Goals Set at Meet DEMONSTRATION SCHEDULED

Fend Oreille county 4.H club met at the courthouse in Newport, Wash., Febmary 20, for its regular county club meeting and annual achievement program. One hundred and fifteen club members and leaders attended.

The meeting was presided over by County President June Murphy Deschand of Cusick. The club pledge was given in unison followed by reading of the 4-II club creed by Barbara Carpenter. Clara Blake read "A Country Girl's Creed," and Joe Berendt rend "A Country Boy's Creed."

Reports Are Given.

The remainder of the program, prior to lunch, included a report of the 4-H booth at the county fair, report of the 1936 health project, "My Trip to the International Show at Chicago" by Loel Hansen, "My Showmanship Experience at Portland" by Ted Schwab, "The Home Economics Judging Contest at Portland" by Evelyn Sontag.

Group luncheon was held at noon. Individuals or clubs brought sandwiches, cake and a cup and spoon. The county 4-H club served hot soup.

After lunch community singing was enjoyed, following which the 1936 achievement pins were awarded by County Agent Valley W. Long.

New Goals Adopted.

The goals adopted for 1937, in addition to the regular program, were a larger enrollment of boys' clubs, more participation in demonstration contests, every clothing club to enter a few contestants in the dress review at the county fair, the continuation of the health project, and each girls' club group to submit a few articles to he put into a traveling judging kit. Besides these goals, it was also decided that Pend Oreille county should participate in more of the state contests than they have in the past.

SAINT PATRICK'S DAY In spirit with the sons and daughers of Celtic origin all over the world the Inland Empire's Irish kinsmen will, in a few days, honor the memory of a good old man who did much and died about 1500 years ago.

By some, Saint Patrick has been regarded as a benign, legendary character of renown. But he never was a myth for his work and accomplishments were so tangibly apparent that his name and fame endure today, in a momory that is as green as the very velvety grass and shamrocks of the isic that so proudly claims him.

Patrick was really not an Irishman. His history is somewhat vague, because time dims facts, and history slipped on details in the centuries that have passed. But it is known that he was of noble parentage, evidenced by his novel and worthwhile use by the 4-H name, Patricius, or patrician, as Latin club members of Pend Oreille county. has it. > > WARNS AGAINST KITES NEAR ELECTRIC LINES operatives.

Parents should caution children to refrain from flying kites near any electric lines, according to a warning received from John B. Kisken, safety engineer for the Washington Water Power company.

"Children should be cautioned to fly kites only in open spaces where there is no danger of the kite or string get ting into an electric line," stated Mr. Fisken. "Of course kites should never be flown with any kind of wire, no tected in any movements to secure matter how small. And even a damp cotton string is sometimes a conductor of electricity. Therefore, to play safe, children should be warned against fly ing kites anywhere near a line."

Nation's Farmers Ask 14 Point Plan For U. S. Farm Aid

A fourteen point program aimed at mutual protection of producer and consumer and parity income for farmers was unanimously adopted by a group of national farm leaders at Washington, D. C., February 8 and 9 and recommended to Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, according to information reaching F. E. Balmer, extension director, State college of Washington.

Carl C. King, Whitman county farmer, was one of a committee of 18 which drew up the recommendations to submit to the general group.

Several of the recommendations are interesting to Washington farmers including: (1) The establishment of the "ever normal granary plan" for the maintenance of adequate reserves of "food and fiber" through crop loans; supplemented by benefit payments for diversion, if necessary.

(2) Reenactment and strengthening of the marketing agreement provisions of agricultural adjustment act.

(3) The principle of actuarually sound crop insurance. (4) Retention of section 32 of the AAA which authorizes federal purchases of surplus commodities for distribution to areas of under-consump-

(5) Continuation of the agricultural conservation program, and postponement of its administration by the several states until 1940.

(6) Legislation to encourage holding of farm units by owner-operators.

(7) Encouragement of farmer co-(8) A system of federally controlled and regulated warehouses and terminal markets.

(9) Federal grades, standards and inspection of basic and non-basic crops not included in present regulations.

These recommendations are based upon 12 "premises" enunciated by the farm leaders. These specifically point out that the consumer must be proparity income for farmers or to adjust production.

3426 WOMEN WORK FOR WPA; HUNDREDS OF HOMES AIDED

Stating that 3426 women taken from relief rolls are now employed by the works progress administration on various projects, Don G. Abel, Washington state administrator, points out that women's work accounts for only approximately 11 per cent of the work load in the state of Washington, whereas the national average is 18 per cent.

At present, Abel stated, 2374 females are employed in 74 sewing-room units, while hot lunch projects, housekeeping aid projects and readers' projects account for the bulk of the others.

FLYING KITES

Dear Children:

Now that March is here....with windy days and kite-flying.... I want to give you a few tips....and ask you to remember them.

Never use any wire for kite-flying....and never fly your kite near the electric lines, because the kite might get into the lines and you might be injured. Even a damp cotton string is a conductor of electricity....so be careful and always fly your kite in an open space where there are no electric lines.

I certainly don't want any of my little friends to be injured while playing.

Her first NBC role was in Samuel Dickson's "Tales of California" series, and she plays in "Death Valley Days," Chief Quinn dramas, "Sperry Sunday Special" and other dramatic offerings.

All kinds of roles, from comedy to tragedy, interest her, but she admits she prefers a character part to all the appealing heroines on the air.

SYNOPSIS

Driving west to marry Katherine Grant, Joe Wilson is arrested on suspicion of being one of the kidnapers of a young girl. Infuriated townsfolk storm the jail. Katherine, learning of his arrest, arrives as the jail has been fired, and faints. Dynamite tears off the door of his cell, and Joe escapes back to Chicago, legally doad. The actual kidnapers are caught. Joe sends his brothers west to file murder charges against members of the mob, but the district attorney can't find one person who will admit Joe was in the jail when it was burned-and he has nobody. But they learn that Katherine saw Joe at the cell window as the jail burned.

CHAPTER V. THE CLINCHING EVIDENCE

Because of the nation-wide promipence that had been given by the newspapers and the radio to the Peabody kidnaping and the burning of an innocent man in the jail, Judge Daniel Hopkins permitted the trial to be broadcast. . . . Joe Wilson could not remain so far away as Chicago; he came to Capital City and went into hiding in a room his brothers had found for him. He had a radio put in so he could listen in on the trial.

Witness after witness was called by the district attorney in the attempt to prove the presence of the men charged with murder in the mon that had stormed, burned and dynamited the jail. The state's witnesses swore to alibis for the men on trial. Even Sheriff Hummell swore—though the perjury came hard to him-that he had not recognized any members of the mob. He said they must have been men from out of town. The hostess at an unsavory inn testified that four of the defendants-Dawson, Piper, Lopez and Durcafe of the inn. Defense attorneys objected to almost every statement or question from the district attorney. The judge threatened several times to have the court cleared; a hillbilly was thrown out of the room; fined for contempt. A defense lawyer insisted that the state produce facts instead of tittle-tattle.

"I did not put these representative citizens of Sage on the stand except, on their oaths, to tell the truth," said the district attorney, "and, so help stand," said the district attorney. them God, they are all liars! I shall After the preliminary questions and you."

After Judge Hopkins had heard the attorney's arguments on the admission of this mysterious evidence, a contraption covered with a sheet was wheeled into the courtroom by two attendants. It proved to be a motion picture projection machine. Against the back wall had been arranged an improvised the flames." screen. The judge warned the spectators against any demonstration and ordered the district attorney to proceed.

"State's exhibit A," said the district attorney, "A film record taken by Ted Fitzgerald at Sage in the regular course of his employment as a newsreel cameraman. Defendant No. 1, Kirby Dawson, known as 'Bubbles' Dawson, who, according to the testimony, was in the Green Light Inn all during the commission of this crime."

A picture was thrown upon the door of the jail. Dawson was the lead- fied that they cleaned it up and kerosene on a pile of broken desks, chairs and crates in the jail itself. A stop-action picture was called for by the district attorney; it revealed Dawson clearly, unmistakably, an expression of sadistic joy on his face.

Dawson glared at the screen, his mouth half open with fear. The other defendants squirmed uneasily. The mob-Mrs. Sally Humphrey throwing delicti, your honor, I move that this a lighted rag; Frederick Garrett fighting the firemen who attempted to extinguish the flame, for possession of the hose. Defense attorneys tried to shake her testimony, to get her to admit that she was so unstrung and nervous that she expected to see Joe Wilson in that jail and that what she thought she saw was nothing but a hallucination. They were unable to shake her.

Gardenias Are Fussy

The gardenia is a great favorite but it is one of the most difficult flowers to keep growing through the blooming stage in the house, says W. R. Beattie, sonior horticulturist of the bureau of ; plant industry. United States department of agriculture.

he says, from persons who have been you gather form itself into a plan on unable to grow gardenias successfully. Paper. In the first place gardenias are a hothouse plant and require a fairly high temperature and humid atmosphere and no attempt should be made to grow them out doors except from Charleston, S. C., southward including all of the Gulf coast region and on the Pacific coast, Los Angles is about the northern limit for their outdoor culture. Growing gardenias as potted plants, says Mr. Beattie, requires a great deal of attention and often ends in failure when they are grown in the average to grow earlier. home or apartment where the air is usually too dry.

Another point emphasized by Mr. Beattie is that gardenias grow best in acid soil. Acid leaf mold—as from the pine needles or oak leaves-may be used in potting the plants, making the soil more acid. The soil should be loose and fibrous and lime should never be added. Better results generally are obtained when a teaspoonful of aluminum sulphate is mixed with each gallon of soil. The plants need as much sunlight as possible and for this reason Mr. Beattie suggests that they be kept at a south window.

By J. S. Carver, Head of Washington State College Department of Poultry Husbandry.

The question of feeding baby chicks is very important since good chicks in the spring mean good pullets in the fall, and in order to raise the largest number of healthy and vigorous chicks, the feed which they consume must insure rapid growth, health, vigor, and high liveability. When a chick ration satisfies these requirements, the other factors in successfully raising chicks rest with management and disease con-

Don't Feed Too Soon.

Baby chicks which are purchased from a hatchery should be fed as soon as they are placed under the brooder. Chicks which are hatched at home should not be fed until they are 48 hours old. There are a number of combinations of feed which may be supplied, each giving equally satisfactory results. But poultrymen are interested not only in good reults but also in the economy of the feed which is used.

Feed Price Varies.

The cost of feeds is somewhat different on the Pacific coast than in any other section of the country and because of this, the chick starting rathan they would be in the middle west or eastern sections of the United States. The chick ration recommended by the poultry department of the State College of Washington, together with the feeding schedule, may be obtained by writing for Poultry Pointers 14 to the extension service, State College of Washington, Pullman, Wash.

Mash Is Nourishing.

Most of the important nutrients are carried in the mash, whereas the seratch provides primarily carbohydrates, which are energy producing. Thus, by increasing the amount of scratch grain, the ration is more and more diluted so that as the chicks begrowing chicks and developing pullets In the four years since Editor Gene are met, yet the cost of the ration is kept at a minimum.

Give Them Greens.

The use of an abundance of succulent feed cannot be overemphasized. The cost of succulent greens is negligible, yet this feed is rich in protein and vitamins A, G and D, which are all very essential for the well-being of the growing chicks. Feeding all of the The Amarilla trobute, he said, "has green feed that the chicks can possibly
