

Over The County

Julietta Record: A crew of ten men under the supervision of Frank Geer are at work on the road one mile this side of Arrow. They are making a new road for about a half-mile parallel with the railroad, thus saving to the traveling public the danger and inconvenience of two railroad crossings. They are also cutting out a very rough piece of road that is hard to maintain and which, during high water is impassable. Mr. Geer handles the work like an old timer, and the highway commissioners are to be congratulated on being able to secure the services of such an able man. We believe from the manner in which he is handling the work that he will give to the road district value received for every dollar spent.

Genesee News: Jack Barnes, local manager of the W. W. P. Co., reports his company as busy repairing the power lines running out of Spokane into the Palouse country, which supplies electricity to Genesee. The juice is shut off now most every night from midnight until 5 o'clock and a part of each Sunday.

Most of the work being done is the installation of new insulators. The company recently shipped into Spokane three car loads of new insulators and the old insulators are being replaced as rapidly as possible. Some idea of the enormous cost of this work may be understood from the fact that it costs $22.50 to replace the three insulators on each pole. This is at the rate of $7.50 each. But the W. W. P. Co. is making every effort to give the users of juice good service and is sparing neither time nor expense.

Troy News: A check on the desks rebuilt by the Manual Training classes shows 96 desks remodeled. This means nearly $1000 saved to the district and almost $200 earned by the boys. Above the value in dollars and cents is the value to the school in better conditions for work and the ability which the boys have acquired in the use of tools. Nor should we ignore the helpfulness of learning the fact that some thing of use and beauty can be made from what is old and thrown away.

Deary Press: When you ask a fellow what he is doing to while away the winter, chances are he will say "hauling pulp." The pulp wood business has become a pretty important one here all of a sudden. White fir—which couldn't be given away a few years ago—is being cut into 16 foot lengths, hauled to town and loaded on cars at $7.50 per cord. It is shipped to Millwood near Spokane where the Inland Empire Paper Co. manufactures it into print paper.

Star-Mirror: There is much discussion in various localities about the good accomplished by the county agents. Some communities favor them and some are opposed. The usefulness or uselessness of the county agent depends on two things, first the ability of the agent and second the support he is given by the farmers. In Latah county there is no doubt about the county agent being a good investment. That is largely due to the fact that O. S. Fletcher, Latah county's agent, is a man of wonderful ability, an incessant and tireless worker, and that he has "made good" in every respect. No one doubts that Mr. Fletcher is a good investment for Latah county, and that the farmers are getting better returns as a result of his work. But Mr. Fletcher could not accomplish this unless he had the loyal support of the best farmers of Latah county. In every district the best farmers, the men who are advancing and want to advance, are supporting the farm bureau and the county agent. That is team work that brings results.

It is said that Rainbow trout in the ordinary season will begin laying eggs as early as April 15, continuing until as late as May 15, depending upon climatic conditions and the elevation of their waters.

Purchased Fine Hogs

Last Saturday A. N. Rognstad went to Pullman to attend the Whitman County Duroc Jersey Breeders' Consignment sale, with the idea of buying some good stock. He took County Agent Fletcher with him to strengthen his own judgment in the selection. The trip resulted in the purchase of two fine sows, one of them a gilt 10½ months old weighing 300 pounds. She topped the sale. Thirty-one of her half sisters sold for an average of $1370 each in S. Dakota last summer. The other sow weighs something over 500 pounds and her family tree includes some of the best of the hog family. Mr. Rognstad has been attending stock shows in Lewiston and Spokane for several years with the idea in mind of becoming familiar with the good points of the Duroc Jersey breed and with the intention of starting a herd of the very best stock obtainable. He believes now that he has the foundation of a herd that will be second to none in the country. While the initial investment in the two hogs was a large one, Mr. Rognstad believes there will be a big demand for the better grade of stock in the Potlatch country and that he will have no trouble in disposing of his surplus stock next summer and fall.

The play will be given at Troy tonight and a repeat performance will be staged here the following Friday. The title of the play is "A Poor Married Man," and as the title would indicate, is a comedy.

The Troy Post is being assisted in arranging the details of the performance here, by the local Legion post. There ought to be a good house to greet the performers from our neighboring town.

Mrs. Frank Roberts, who went to Iririgon, Oregon, several weeks ago to visit her daughter, Mrs. Jesse White, is expected home soon. She wrote home that George Frederickson, a former resident of American ridge, had to sow his alfalfa three times last year. The wind blew the sand over the seed, covering it too deep. After the alfalfa comes up and gets well rooted it makes four or five crops a year but it is sometimes difficult to get it started. Mrs. Roberts said the Powell family, who formerly lived on the place now owned by E. E. McDowell, are getting along nicely.

The Silver Lining

Annual Farm Bureau Meeting

Well Attended Meeting Held in Moscow Last Saturday

Eighty-five farm bureau members, representing over three-fourths of the organized communities of Latah County, attended the annual county-wide business meeting of the farm bureau which was held in Moscow on Wednesday, February 3rd. The work of the past year was reviewed and plans made for the coming year.

County projects for 1921 were selected and leaders elected as follows: Organization, N. Williamson, Moscow; pest control, Frank Benscoter, Kendrick; livestock improvement, R. E. Nordby, Genesee; wheat improvement, George Sievers, Moscow; weed control, Frank Gustafson, Moscow; poultry improvement, S. A. Ross, Farmington; bean and potato improvement, Erick Oiler, Troy; land clearing, J. E. Johnson, Harvard; Columbus Clark, Julieta, was elected executive committee chairman at large, and W. A. Fiscus, Potlatch, was elected leader of the crop reporting project.

Officers were elected as follows: President, N. Williamson, Moscow; vice-president, W. W. Davis, Palouse; secretary, R. E. Nordby, Genesee; treasurer, F. M. Gustafson, Moscow.

The farm bureau members present voted unanimously to recommend that the farm bureau increase the annual farm bureau membership fee to $2.50 per year so that the Latah County Farm Bureau may join the state and national federations. Of this membership fee 50 cents will go to the American Farm Bureau Federation, $1.00 will go to the county organization and $1.00 to the state federation. The question of increasing the membership fee will be submitted to the various communities of the county for a referendum vote. Meetings will be held in all communities during March.

This action followed the address of W. B. Kjosness, assistant state leader of county agents, who spoke for W. S. Shearer, president of the Idaho Farm Bureau Federation. Mr. Kjosness told of the work of the Idaho Farm Bureau Federation and explained that that body adopted a new constitution at the annual meeting in January. He also told of the work of the American Farm Bureau Federation. Mr. Kjosness stated that Mr. Shearer had a wonderful message for the farmers, and gave a summary of the message and report as given to the state meeting in January by Mr. Shearer. Following is the exact report as given by Mr. Shearer:

"There will be a concert of thinking, planning and fighting by the American farm forces such as we never have seen or known. This is the message I have to bring you from fifteen hundred farmers who met at Indianapolis last month in the convention of the American Farm Bureau Federation.

"Before I went to Indianapolis I had attended meetings of county and state farm bureaus in which we had discussed better and more profitable production and I wondered in what way we could discuss nationally such problems as pests, rodent control, soil conservation, etc., but in twelve conferences covering four days, I got an entirely different conception of what farmmen are going to attempt and to do in a national way. Questions of pests, fertility, etc., were not discussed. What were the problems discussed? I will touch on only five or six of the most important.

"1. Never till now have the farmers had a national mouthpiece. The American Farm Bureau Federation proposes to give the farmers a national voice so that some one can go before Congress and government officials and represent the farmers with authority. Commercial bodies, a few years ago, formed the United States Chamber of Commerce which is the national voice of commercial organizations. After only those few years this body has a fund of $800,000 a year. What could the farmers do with $800,000 a year? It is marvelous what the American Farm Bureau Federation did last year with less than $100,000.

"2. The federal banking system has functioned well for the people for whom it was created and organized—the merchants. The American Farm Bureau Federation proposes that this system shall function for the farm forces of the country as easily and naturally as for the merchants. Three months ago, of the rediscount of the federal banks only one tenth of one percent was classed as farm paper and a large part of that represented not your note and mine, but notes given by farmmen to implement houses.

"President Howard says that if we cannot so amend and organize our financial system that it will be just as available for the use of the farmers as for the merchants, there is but one thing to be done—to organize our own agricultural banking institutions.

"3. The third great problem is transportation. In hearings in which the railroads were allowed to fix a valuation on which the government would guarantee them an income of six percent, Clifford Thorne, representing the American Farm Bureau Federation, for the love of the work, faced men whose fees were larger than the salary of the president of the United States. The committee had practically committed itself to a twenty billion dollar valuation but Mr. Thorne saved the farmers of this country one hundred million dollars a year in freight charges by obtaining a reduction of this valuation.

"4. The American Farm Bureau Federation proposes that distributing agencies should be operated honestly and economically. Stress is placed on the word "honestly". The spread between the producer and the consumer must be reduced. As I went through Spokane on my way east, I learned of a carload of cauliflower for which growers in Oregon had obtained eighty cents

Fourth Lyceum Number

The fourth lyceum number will be given Friday evening, March 18, by the Kendrick school. It will be a "Stunt Festival", each grade having a part in the entertainment.

The managers of the various theatrical companies of the school are now rehearsing some of the best short sketches obtainable in the theatrical world today. Miss McKinnon with her little folks of the primary department, are going through some fantastic acts. Miss Malloy, with the next two higher grades, is rapidly developing her young people for the part they are to have in the festival. Miss O'Connor, of the fifth and sixth grades has a treat in store for you with her able group of youngsters. Miss Little will have the young folks of the seventh and eighth grades give the citizens of Kendrick a short sketch of the American people which will cause your pulse to beat faster. Miss Lowery will have charge of the high school section and no doubt will afford you a good laugh or two and thus relieve your chronic case of indigestion.

Remember the date of this entertainment is Friday, March 18, and that all money derived therefrom will be used to defray the expense of the lyceum course, the last number of which will be next month.

Farm Bureau Meeting

There will be a farm bureau meeting at the City Hall in Kendrick, Tuesday, March 8, at 9:30 a. m. A meeting for American ridge community will be held on Tuesday afternoon, at the American ridge school house. These meetings are held for the purpose of starting the 1921 campaign against the ground squirrel.

a crate but which was retailing in Spokane at $4.80.

"5. A system of marketing is proposed by which food products would be released to consumers as needed, not by speculators but by producers or their representatives, and the board of trade eliminated.

"The American Farm Bureau Federation is tackling problems that we cannot solve for ourselves. Even if all of us in Idaho should unite it would be useless unless we acted in connection with the national organization. The wool problem of Idaho is to become the problem of the corn grower of Kansas and the problem of the fruit growers of California. Only by this unity of interest can these problems be solved."

Bridge at Arrow

Tribune: The contract was awarded Friday by the state highway commission at Boise for the construction of two bridges on project No. 33 of the Lewis and Clark highway, between Arrow and Spalding, to the Lord Construction company, for $19,600. The next lowest bid was from the Houser Construction company for $20,800.

The contract calls for work to be commenced on the bridges not later than March 20. One of the bridges is to be over Potlatch creek, at Arrow, and will be of wood and steel construction, 128 feet long. The other will be a 5-foot concrete bridge over Catholic creek.

The completion of these bridges will mean the finishing of a stretch of four miles of road between a point two miles east of Spalding and one-half mile this side of Myrtle. This leaves a gap of seven miles remaining to be completed on the project between Hatwai creek and the beginning of the Spalding-Arrow project.

Huffman Traded Farm

H. T. Huffman traded his farm this week to F. A. Sparber of Lewiston, for two residences in Lewiston and a money consideration. The Huffman place joins the town limits of Kendrick on the southwest. It consists of 12 acres of land and is well improved. The new owner expects to take possession of the place in the near future. Mr. Huffman is undecided just what he will do but expects to remain in this locality for a while at least.

Has Two Gold Medals

M. V. Thomas has two gold medals which he prizes very highly. They were won at the St. Louis and Portland expositions a number of years ago. He took first prize at both of these world's fairs on club wheat raised on his ranch on American ridge. He raised the wheat himself and took first prize in competition against the world. This is not only a great credit to Mr. Thomas but it is a splendid past achievement of the Potlatch, which is worth mentioning occasionally.

Foreign Advertising Representative
THE AMERICAN PRESS ASSOCIATION

It seems that the tendency of the times points toward standardization along a great many lines. The present method of putting articles of every day use on the market requires an army of salesmen. For instance, in the wholesaling of paper, four representatives make this territory about every thirty days. Their overhead expenses may be figured at approximately $10 per day, or a total of $40 per day. One salesman could easily represent a company carrying everything needed in the paper line, at a saving of $30 per day on just the sales end of the business. The same is true of many lines of business.

The country merchant is having less difficulty today in competing with the big mail order houses than for many years. We learn through an authoritative source that the business done in this community with the catalogue houses during the past six months or more is approximately 75 per cent less than a corresponding period of the previous year. Mail order houses are now using an enormous amount of newspaper advertising space in an endeavor to recoup their fallen fortunes. They used to advertise the "power of the low price" but the country merchant can undersell them now on the average bill of goods.

This is just the right time of year to drag Old Gus Gloom out on the sidewalk, knock him in the head and throw him in the middle of Main Street. We don't need him here and it would save the bother of burying him.

One of the strongest arguments in favor of roads surfaced with crushed rock is that they can be repaired so easily. If at any time sections of the road bed go to pieces, a few wagon loads of crushed rock will repair the damage. With a little attention and repairing there is no reason why crushed rock roads should ever wear out, providing they are put in on a good grade and are well drained.

FORDSON

For thirty-five years Henry Ford, a farmer's boy, has been working on the problem of a successful tractor for the farm, and for the past fourteen years has devoted much time and a vast amount of money to the development of the present Fordson Tractor. Today that tractor is in use on nearly 200,000 farms and if you have any doubt as to the satisfaction it gives to those who are using it, call in or send and get the booklet, just issued by the Ford Motor Company, and called "The Fordson at Work" and read the testimony which is there given by the multitude of owners of Fordson Tractors. No evidence can be more conclusive than that of the man who actually knows by personal experience and this is the line of testimony carried in this little booklet. If you cannot call for it, write, drop us a postal and we will mail it to you without charge. It is so valuable you ought to have it because it is the open door through which the farmer will pass from the hard working drudge to the comparative comfort of the manufacturer. The Fordson makes it possible for the farmer to plan and direct, while the machine will do the work. It presents the widest latitude for the farmer to exercise his brain power and plan how he can get the most from the soil, knowing that the Tractor will do the hard work, do it better, do it quicker, and therefore do it more profitably. This means not alone in the cultivation of the soil, in the harvesting of the crops, but in a hundred and one different demands that are made for labor—cutting of ensilage and the filling of the silo; cutting of wood; operation of the washing machine; in the lighting of the house with electricity; supplying the house with running water; bringing to the farmer's wife and daughters the convenience of the city, relieving them of much of the hard, unpleasant part of housework. The price is within the reach of any progressive farmer—only $865.00, including pulley, extension rims, fenders, canopy top and filled with fuel and lubricating oil, and we have a competent man to instruct you in handling it.

Dr. H. Ohandjanian, Armenian President

Eriwan, Armenia: Dr. H. Ohandjanian, President of the Armenian Republic, has sent an urgent cablegram to Charles V. Vickrey, General Secretary of the Near East Relief, 1 Madison Ave., New York City, requesting immediate assistance to prevent the starvation of the Armenian people before the next harvest can be gathered. President Ohandjanian's message reads:

"Owing to hail, rain and field mice, the harvest in Armenia fell below expectations. Standing crops appeared well, but owing to poor seed, returns were not as good as was expected. Maximum returns 140,000 tons, only sufficient for eight months for one and a half million people. Food crisis critical and intensified by new Turkish invasion of Armenia. It is estimated that 100,000 peaceful inhabitants of Sarikamish and Kars region have been forced to renew the life of refugees and flee towards the interior of Armenia. There are also large numbers fleeing from Bolsheviks in Azerbaijan and Southern Russia, and coming to Armenia. Farmers, fearing famine, are unwilling to sell crops, thus leaving the cities foodless. In addition to the Armenian crops, ten thousand tons have been purchased from neighboring countries.

"In order to save Armenia it is necessary to secure flour from America, 50,000 tons, maximum requirement. In the name of the Armenian Government and the Armenian People, I beg that you use your wide influence in order that the Near East Relief may secure and ship the flour needed. I am sure that in this serious crisis the Near East Relief will not fail to continue its aid to Armenia in her struggle for existence.

"H. OHANDJANIAN, "President of Armenia."

GOB DESCRIBES ARMENIAN HORRORS

"You can't realize what a sight it is to see the refugee camp at Batum," Petty Officer George Porter, of Racine, Wis., writes his family, telling of the work of the Near East Relief in the ports along the Black Sea.

"The people are dying off little by little. There are workers of the relief organization here, but they don't seem to be able to take care of them all. They were the ones that made the camp. The families all live in grass huts, just high enough to sit up in, and they are covered with blankets. There is disease everywhere and the smell is terrible. I'm glad we didn't stay long, as I couldn't stand it, and you know when I can't stand anything there are few that can. I am sorry for these refugees, but we can't help any. They don't want money though they would sell their lives for some clothes and food. They don't stop praising the Americans.

"Trebizonde was another Armenian town, but it was completely wiped out by the Turks, who are now in control of it. The Turks massacred all the Armenians over fifteen years of age and kept all under that age to bring them up as Turks. The city looked as if it was shot to pieces. Samsoun is the same as Trebizonde, so you can see what kind of country we are travelling through. I am sure glad that we are leaving Russia and Armenia because I am sick of what I have seen. I think that these tourists who are trying to see ravished Armenia will be sorry they ever came over. These relief workers are nearly dead from work. They are the people who can tell the U. S. something about this country."

The Near East Relief, 1 Madison Ave., New York, is now appealing for funds to continue the work so graphically described by the young American sailor.

FARM INVENTORY IS INDEX TO PROGRESS

Practicable Way of Answering Important Questions.

Bulletin Recently Issued by Department of Agriculture Enables Farmer to Determine Exactly His Financial Status.

What is the net worth of your farm business? Is it more or less than one would imagine from a casual inspection of your farm? Do you know for sure whether you are going or coming in financial standing?

These are important questions to the farmer, and questions that are not so easily answered as would at first appear. Farming is an intricate business, and one in which returns from investment are sometimes long delayed, so that progress cannot be accurately measured by the amount of money taken in a given time. Sometimes cash income may be almost wholly attributable to reduction in other assets, so that in reality the result is like taking money from one pocket and putting it in another.

The farm inventory, or property list, offers the only practicable way of answering these questions. Once the farmer has made a complete list of all his assets and liabilities and has balanced them he knows just what his net worth is, and when he has made such a list annually he knows each year whether he has gone forward or back, and just how much has been the increase or decrease in the net worth of his business.

The United States Department of Agriculture has just issued Farmers' Bulletin 1182 entitled "Farm Inventories," in which are given detailed instructions for making an inventory of farm property and revising such a list from year to year. By using the simple system described in this bulletin any farmer can determine exactly his financial status and lay the foundation for a permanent system of accounting. Without the farm inventory as a basis no system of accounting that might be chosen would be of any great use to the farmer.

ESSENTIALS FOR BEST EGGS

Proper Proportions of Sound Grains, Oyster Shell and Clean Quarters Are Necessary.

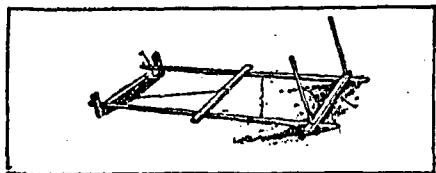

Just because an egg is freshly laid by an apparently healthy hen it cannot be assumed that it is a good egg. Hens that are forced to obtain the greater proportion of their living as scavengers and given a poor range to work on cannot produce eggs of as good quality as can a flock which regularly is fed a good ration.

Eggs lacking protein have a watery white and the shell is apt to be thin, owing to the partial absence of such lime. Such eggs, besides being of less value as food, are more than likely to bring forth puny chickens of low vitality, subject to white diarrhea and an early death. With proper quantities of wheat, bran, clover, oyster shell and sound grains in the ration fed to laying hens, eggs with firm shells, rich in protein and delicately flavored are sure to result, providing, of course, that the flock is given clean nests and runs and is kept free from mites.

on the ground. Two crosspieces are firmly fastened to the poles and two uprights at the rear prevent the corn from sliding off. Several shocks of corn can be loaded on this and drawn to the feeding yard or barn.

MUCH FARM PRODUCE IS MARKETED DIRECT

Many Farmers Are Making Good Use of Motortrucks.

Producers Living Near Cities Often Can Sell Advantageously to Consumers—Middleman's Profit Is Eliminated.

A large amount of farm produce is marketed by the use of motortrucks. While a relatively small amount of this marketing is done direct to consumers, many persons have made use of motortrucks in their direct marketing. Producers who live near to cities often can market advantageously direct to consumers if they obtain orders for sufficient produce at one time to warrant the use of a truck. This can be done especially in seasons when consumers desire sufficient apples, potatoes and similar articles for a winter's supply.

A man who lives near Providence, R. I., for several months every autumn obtains orders for sufficient produce to require two or three trips a week with a motortruck. His orders are obtained from old customers and by advertising. Double or return postal cards are sent to old customers. The first half of the card gives information and prices, while the return card bears the address of the producer on one side and an order blank on the other. All that is necessary for the consumer to do is to fill out the blanks with proper quantities, prices and total amount, sign his name and address, and mail the card.

New customers are obtained by the recommendations of old customers and by advertising. Small but attractive advertisements are placed in newspapers. Consumers are requested to order by postal card or telephone. Payment for produce is collected upon delivery.

The loads of produce average about one ton in weight. Apples, potatoes and cider are the principal articles sold. About 15 or 20 stops on routes about 25 miles in length are made in disposing of a load of produce.

This method of marketing requires more time than to market wholesale, but many persons who are located favorably, can market in this way at a slight additional expense and deliver to the consumer produce which is loaded at the farm and not handled until it is delivered in the consumer's cellar. In this way less waste occurs than in many other methods of marketing.

Effects of Constipation

Constipation causes a stoppage of the sewerage system of the body. The poisonous refuse matter that should be carried away is retained in the system and often poisons the blood and causes numerous disorders. No one can afford to neglect his bowels. A dose of Chamberlain's Tablets will afford relief. Avoid drastic cathartics as they take too much water out of the system and their use is likely to be followed by constipation.—Adv.

PART II.—One evening he is engaged by Beacher Tremont, notorious profligate, to drive him and Madge Van Teller to a hostelry known as "Greenwood." Aware of the evil nature of the place, Randolph drives the pair to Greenwood cemetery.
Infuriated, Beacher gets out of the cab and Randolph leaves him there, taking the girl (who has awakened to a realization of her folly) to her home. Madge recognizes him.

Chapter III. Continued

"The effect of her words on Tomlin-son was electrical.

"Miss Imogene Pamela Thornton?" he asked, as he suddenly straightened and let go of his supports.

"Yes," said Pamela, gazing at him in undisguised surprise. "How did you know?"

"Why, miss," said the old man, "I'm Tomlinson. Excuse me for saying so," he added, a pale flush in his withered cheeks, "but many a time in the old days Maggie let me take you on my knee. A mort of worry you have given us, miss."

Quick tears rose to Pamela's eyes.
"Oh!" she cried. "You knew Maggie?"

"In a manner of speaking, I did," stated Tomlinson sonorously. "Kissed her; but she never let me get as far as hugging, poor girl! She said she knew she wasn't here for long enough."

Laughter bubbled into Pamela's eyes alongside of the tears, but, in spite of it, the next moment she was crying softly.

"Poor M-Maggie!" she sobbed.

Tomlinson bobbed his head up and down in formal sympathy, too old to worry much over woman's weeping.

"I understand that she must 'ave went," he said. "Else you wouldn't be alone, miss. Will you have your breakfast in bed?"

"Oh, could I?" sniffed Pamela, and then her eyes fell on the clock. "No, I can't," she decided for herself. "You see, Tomlinson, I only pro-promise to stay until ten."

"I'll be getting your bath ready, then, miss," said Tomlinson, and withdrew.

Half an hour later Pamela was enjoying a lonely "tray"-breakfast, placed at her command before the couch, which faced the friendly fire in the big living-room. Without being a mind-reader, it is possible to surmise that she ate very slowly, in the vain hope that Mr. Randolph would pop in, with or without Father Christmas, and joining her in the meal, banish a baby Mr. Gloom that was hanging round.

While she was still toying with her food she heard the bell ring and Tom-linson's voice saying, in deep, respectful tones: "Miss Thornton will see you, sir. She is in the sitting-room."

Pamela dropped her egg-spoon and stood up, back to the fire, just in time to face a neatly dressed, pink-cheeked, bright-eyed, bald-headed little gentleman, who stood, poised but alert, in the open doorway, like a bird about to peck at her to see if she were the real thing.

"Miss Thornton?" he asked, in a peculiarly liquid voice.

Pamela nodded her head twice.

"I am Mr. Borden Milyuns," continued the molten voice, and the bright eyes studied her face expectantly.

Pamela puckered her brows in an effort to meet that expectancy halfway, but failed.

"Are you?" she asked doubtfully, and with a mental reservation against Mr. Robert Hervey Randolph for out-raging the traditions of childhood by sending a Father Christmas in this dapper form. "Won't you sit down?" she added politely.

Mr. Milyuns hung poised for a second longer, and then advanced on the couch decisively, sat down on one end of it, and waved his hand at the other.
Tomlinson slipped in and out, bearing the breakfast-tray away. Pamela accepted Mr. Milyuns' silent invitation and seated herself, but tentatively, as though she could only stay for a minute.

"Make yourself comfortable, my dear," said Mr. Milyuns; "I'm going to talk to you for some time."

"You can't," said Pam; "not here. I only have the flat for six minutes longer. That is, I only pro-promise to stay here until ten." Her eyes wavered half expectantly, half wistfully to the door.

The bird-man smiled.

"We'll see about that," he said. "I'm sorry you don't remember me. If you are indeed Miss Imogene Pamela Thornton, I used to take you on my knee often, many years ago."

Pamela could no longer be startled by such announcements.

"That's what Tomlinson said this morning," she remarked. "Ever since last night, everybody I meet seems to —to know my real name. I don't understand it."

"Please trust me," said Mr. Milyuns,
"and you'll soon understand a lot more than that." He drew a slip from his pocket. "Now, do answer me carefullly. Tell me the addresses of the first four places you and Maggie lived in after your father died."

"I can't remember the first," said Pam, but, after a second's thought, rattled off the names of three streets, and located addresses approximately by describing nearby corners prominent to a child's mind for one reason or another. "Those are the next three," she said. "After that, we went—"

But Mr. Milyuns was satisfied.

"That's enough for formalities, my dear. I'm convinced that you are the person for whom the firm of Milyuns, Branch & Milyuns has been searching for years. Do you remember your great-uncle, Asa Thornton?"

"Yes," said Pamela, a vague wonder and terror in her eyes; "but I didn't know he was real."

"Didn't know he was real!" exclaimed Mr. Milyuns. "What do you mean?"

"Maggie used to say," explained Pamela, "if you're not good, your great-uncle, Asa Thornton, will catch you, and he hasn't cut his finger nail's since your poor father married your dead mother." Pamela shuddered.

"You'll have to forget all that," said Mr. Milyuns soberly. "Before your great-uncle died, he repented very effectively of the way he treated your father, and left you an income of ten thousand dollars a year."

Pamela sat up very straight, and then sank slowly into the pillows at her back.

"Ten — thousand — dollars — a year!" she repeated slowly.

Mr. Milyuns nodded.

"Beginning with today. There is no accumulation waiting for you, because, by the terms of the will, Mr.
Randolph was allowed the entire income up to such time as you should be discovered. That provision was quite natural, if you will remember that Mr.

Asa Thornton had been searching for you unsuccessfully for some months before he died."

Pamela sat up straight again.

"I want to understand you," she said with a sudden dignity that increased Mr. Milyuns' admiration, already decidedly on the upgrade. "You mean that, with my appearance, Mr.
Randolph's entire income completely disappears?"

Thomas A. Edison Says:

"After religion, music should be considered first in every man's home."

Another great American says:

"A man, to do his family justice, should spend 5 per cent of his earnings for the pleasure and attainment of music."

An Edison Phonograph, with Edison Recreation, will give you every type of music that the world knows today, and the cost will be a great deal less than 5 per cent of the average man's earnings.

But remember, no other phonograph can give you music as the New Edison can. Why not come in and let us demonstrate this truth to you? Your favorite selection will be played for you, gladly.

Kendrick Furniture Company

Mr. Milyuns nodded.

"You have guessed it in one," he said flippantly.

"I don't need ten thousand dollars a year," said Pamela promptly. "You will please tell Mr. Randolph that I shall only take half."

Mr. Milyuns smiled.

"I'll try to carry out your orders," he said blandly, "but I'll have to find Mr. Randolph first. Let me add that you apparently don't know the young gentleman very well."

"What do you mean by that?" asked Pam.

"Well," said Mr. Milyuns, taking another scrap of paper from his pocket and handing it to her, "read that. It was left at my house this morning by a taxi-cabman, who didn't wait for an answer. You see that Mr. Randolph has handed over to you in perpetuity this apartment, Tomlinson, and all the other fixings. It doesn't look very much as though he intended to come back in the near future."

"But I want him to!" cried Pam.
"I— I've been expecting him. I didn't half—half thank him for—"

Tears of disappointment clogged her throat.

"There, there!" said Mr. Milyuns, leaning over and patting her hand. "I understand just how you feel, because Bob is one of the straightest, openest, most lovable young devils that ever went his own way through a delighted world."

Pamela nodded her head up and down in silent confirmation of all those kind words. She began to like Mr. Milyuns. She raised pleading eyes to his face.

"Won't you please find him for me?"
"My dear," said Mr. Milyuns, so promptly that if she had asked for the house and lot on the northwest corner of Fifth avenue and Fifty-seventh street, he would have promised it to her before he could stop himself. "I will.
I haven't proved myself much good at the game, but I'll find Bob for you if I have to start a detective agency of my own. In the meantime, what are you going to do? I suggest that you accept these premises until the truant turns up—only, of course, we must get you a companion."

"A companion?" asked Miss Thornton. "But I have that already.
Tomlinson is a dear."

"Tomlinson is splendid in his way," admitted Mr. Milyuns, "but he isn't quite a woman. You can't live here chaperoned by a mere male."

"Can't I?" said Miss Thornton, with a new edge to her voice and something in her eyes that made them look as though they were passing in review all the unchaperoned years since first she made her debut as an independent scullery-maid at Mrs. Blunkum's feed-house. "I shall change nothing here," she concluded. "When Randy—Mr.

Randolph comes back, he shan't find his place cluttered with females."

Mr. Milyuns turned on her a gaze that was complex with admiration and a realization that he was on the way to biting off more than he could chew.
He decided to sidestep.

"Can you be in this afternoon?" he asked.

"Oh, yes," said Pamela, involuntarily glancing at the door and betraying a half-formed intention to watch that portal night and day until death or Mr. Robert Hervey Randolph arrived;
"I'll be in. Why?"

"Mrs. Milyuns and my daughter Eileen will call on you at about five," explained Mr. Milyuns. "Just one more matter and I must go," he continued. "Your income amounts to something over eight hundred dollars a month, I shall pay it in advance until you get settled and have a chance to catch up."

"Please send me only half," said Pamela, as she rose to say good-by.

Mr. Milyuns took her hand, dropped it, and started toward the door; but before he got there, he stopped and turned.

"My dear," he said, losing for the moment his birdlike, chirpy pose, "I don't want you to think of me as just your banker. I knew your father and your mother, and their fathers and mothers before them. I am fond, by old usage, of every drop of blood that runs in your veins. You won't forget that, will you?"

Pamela stared at him, swept toward him, threw her arms round his neck, hugged him, dropped her face on his shoulder and wept. Mr. Borden Milyuns stood very erect, his bald head held high, his pink cheeks puffed out, and his eyelids blinking at the rate of fifteen to the dozen in a vain effort to fan back an amazing lachrymatory inundation.

"There, there!" he said, patting Pamela on the back. "Who would have thought it, you adorable, lonely little girl?"

Pamela threw up her head and smiled through the sudden summer shower.

"I know it was ridiculous," she said,
"but I couldn't help it. You made me like you all of a sudden, and I just had to, because you've had a bath and you look so clean inside and out." She kissed him as she broke away.

"I see; I see," said the astounded Mr. Milyuns, and beat it.

At two minutes after five the doorbell rang again. In spite of the fact that it was almost exactly the hour which Mr. Milyuns had set for the arrival of his wife and daughter, Pamela couldn't help hoping—but in vain. It was with a slightly resigned air that she received Mrs. and Miss Milyuns instead of Mr. Robert Randolph.

Mrs. Milyuns flew to her, set hands on her shoulders, searched her face with eager shrewd eyes, and said:

"Borden indeed told me the truth about you, my dear. May I kiss you?"

Pamela extended one cheek to the salute while her eyes wandered off to size up the tall, blonde, cool young person that she surmised must answer to the name of Eileen Milyuns. Being the product of two shorts, how on earth had she managed to grow so long? Her face was regularly beautiful, as though it had been carefully made to order like her clothes. She appeared as passive as a Palmer snowscape.

After a little skirmishing for position, the three ladies seated themselves in a triangle, into the center of which the well-trained Tomlinson ran a ten-wagon.

"Now," said Mrs. Milyuns, having emptied and put down her cup, "let's forget the sheer romance of the situation, my dear, and get down to practical problems. The first of all things, as you must realize, is the necessity of getting you a companion. Would you care to be our guest in Madison avenue until you can pick one out?"

"I would put clothes ahead of a housecat," murmured Eileen.

Her mother ignored the remark and kept her eyes fixed on Miss Thornton's perplexed face. That young lady seemed in no lack of something to say but rather in search of words and the plunging courage necessary to the saying. She drew a long breath and delivered herself of the following:

"Really, it's most awfully kind of you, but, as I told Mr. Milyuns, Tomlinson is such a dear that I am going to continue him as my companion."

"Tomlinson!" exclaimed Mrs. Milyuns, and then smiled indulgently for the first time during the interview, being under the impression that at last she had run into something appropriately naive in the bearing of her new charge. "Of course you can keep him on, but you must realize that you can't live here without a woman in the house."

"Oh, yes, I can," said Miss Thornton, a little breathlessly. "I have a feeling—I can't explain it exactly—that this apartment is a one-woman setting.
As I said to Mr. Milyuns, I don't want to clutter it with females."
