

Over The County

Julietta Record: Last Tuesday Julius Giese shipped a registered thoroughbred male Shorthorn calf to Wm. Rinehold at Davenport, Wash. It was less than six months old and cost the purchaser about $100. The calf was raised by Mr. Giese on his farm near Julieta.

Deary Press: A. L. McCormick, of the Weyerhaeuser Timber Company, at Tacoma recently stated that the logging camps of the northwest are gradually opening, and he expects the spring to see the lumber industry nicely through the depression. Present indications for the resumption of work in the Potlatch camps in the spring appear to be favorable. Camp Park is already running with all the aspects of a full fledged logging camp. Lower freight rates to the east will have the effect of speeding up lumber shipments and thus enable the mills to clean out their immense surplus stocks. No reason can be cited at this time for undue delay in the slow swing to better times. You can't hurry such an operation as that. The change must come gradually and of its own accord. There has already been a big change for the better.

Genesee News: Dr. C. F. Tuomy, who recently returned from a two-years special course at Rush Medical college, Chicago, and Dr. McGee of Moscow on Wednesday began the examination of all the pupils of the public school and a record of their physical condition will be placed on the back of their record cards.

This work is being performed by Dr. Tuomy and Dr. McGee free of charge and it will indeed add much to the record of the pupils aside from being of great help to the teachers in determining their capacity for work. The physical examination covers height, weight, headache, rheumatism, stomach, mouth breathing, eye, vision, eye defects, nose, throat, ear, lungs, heart, teeth, scalp, skin, nutrition, vaccination, mental age, etc.

Star-Mirror: Albert Illi, a farmer from the American Ridge district, near Troy, was in Moscow Thursday to bring in samples of seed which he had raised for the Washburn & Wilson Seed company of this city. Mr. Illi is a native of Switzerland, but has been in this country many years and has lived on his American Ridge farm for the past 10 years. He has only 25 acres cleared, but has demonstrated thoroughly what can be done on 25 acres. For several years Mr. Illi devoted his attention to truck farming and made good at that, hauling his products each week, in a Ford car, to Bovill, where he sold to the lumber camps. A year ago he decided that growing seeds would be more profitable and also more to his liking, and he entered into a contract with the Washburn & Wilson company. While he produces corn and beans, garden varieties of beans are his hobby. Yesterday he had on display samples of Yellow Dent field corn and of early white sweet corn. Both varieties had matured as well as any corn that one would see in the eastern corn states. Eighty per cent of the sweet corn was fit for seed. He also had samples of what is known as the Black Mexican, a black corn, which matures several weeks later than the yellow and white varieties. The samples on display at the local seed house were the blue ribbon winners at the Troy show.

The ridges in southern and eastern Latah county are especially adapted to growing corn, because of the air drainage. The abrupt canyons draw off the cold air, and the corn develops on these ridges as well as in the prairies of Illinois or Iowa.

Mr. Illi, in addition to making a good living from his 25 acres, is able to lay aside a clean profit of from $650 to $750 each year. He keeps from six to eight head of cattle and a few hogs on the place.

Mrs. M. O. Raby and daughter were Troy visitors the first of the week.

The Farmers' Account Book

County Agent Skuse has received a supply of Farmers' Account Books which are published and distributed at cost by the Extension Division of the University of Idaho. The price is 15 cents and books can be secured from Mr. Skuse. Many of these books were used by farmers of Nez Perce County last year.

This is the time when income tax reports will soon have to be made. The income tax Division has ruled that the summary pages of this book may be detached and submitted as an acceptable income tax statement in place of the blank which they have designated as 1040 F. This account book is of value, not only for determining the amount of net income for income tax purposes, but also for the farmer's own use in measuring his farming success.

The account book necessitates a record of only three things, the inventories at the beginning and end of the year, the cash receipts from farm business, and the cash expense for the necessary farm expenditures. By omitting the expenditures for the personal and household purposes the record is greatly simplified and yet furnished all the information needed for the determining the farm profit. No attempt is made to determine how much of this profit or loss is contributed by each crop or class of livestock, because this requires the keeping of a labor record and a feed record in addition. However, farmers who wish to keep this additional information may secure blanks for this purpose free of charge from the County Agent.

Merchant's Final Reward

Saint Peter stood at the gate one day, while a sad looking man approached that way; Pausing at the top of the golden stair, Asking permission to rest a while there. No thought of entering seemed to occur to him then, For he was a backslider since he couldn't tell when.

The sad looking man had been a merchant long years, A partner of his customers, in their joys and their tears, Attended their funerals, as each was called hence, And extended their credit beyond reason or sense. But last year they broke him, they said "he had failed," "And if he hadn't died, he'd sure have been jailed."

Saint Peter was attentive, his face showed deep guilt, As he questioned the stranger in true lawyer style. He knew what was right, and was a good judge of sin, And knew a storekeeper when e'er he walked in. At last his face softened, he said, "Why so sad," "Sure your life wasn't perfect, but it wasn't ALL bad."

"Your labors and worries are well known to me, For didn't I sell fish down by Old Galilee? And the ways I got skinned! I remember them yet, Though years have gone by and I've tried to forget; And I want to say here as with glad hand I greet, You are one of the boys that get favors from Pete." — Implement Record.

He has spent the greater part of the week unpacking his instruments and getting his equipment in first class condition and expects to be ready for business today.

Dr. Veon is a graduate of the Dental Department College of Physicians and Surgeons of San Francisco, class of 1916. He has practiced 2 1/2 years in California and had 7 months service in the dental infirmary at Camp Lewis. During the past 2 1/2 years he has practiced at Raymond, Wash. With his technical education and practically six years of experience he is certainly able to fulfill the requirements of his profession.

Dr. Veon is a young man. He has a wife and little boy, who are now visiting Mrs. Veon's parents in California. If suitable arrangements can be made for securing a residence they will come here some time next month.

School Notes

The Kamiah Basketball team played the Kendrick Boys Friday at the local gymnasium, one of the most exciting games of the season. The advantage was with the larger and heavier Kamiah Boys. Owing to the illness of some of the local boys substitutes were used, but they held their own for the score at the end of the first half was 10 to 11 in our favor. The second half was very exciting all the way thru but ended in Kamiah's favor by a score of 16 to 17.

The High School vs. Faculty game resulted in a total walk away for the high school girls. The score at the end of the first half was 1 to 10 in favor of the high school. The second half the Faculty team played a faster game but at the last the score was 7 to 15 in favor of the high school girls.

Saturday the Kendrick girls played Troy and were badly defeated. The smallness of the gymnasium along with the almost perfect team work of the opposing team were two factors to be overcome by our team. The game started by a basket for Kendrick but at the end of the first half the score was 14 to 4. The next half the Kendrick girls played better and made as many baskets as the opposing team but the score was still in Troy's favor, because of the lead they gained in the first half and the result was 17 to 28.

Miss Skattaboe, the county superintendent, was in Kendrick last week, visiting the school. She was making a tour of the county with the Health Crusade Cup won by the children of Idaho in 1921. This cup is very beautiful. It is made of silver and is gold lined. It stands 28 inches high, weighs 25 pounds, and is valued at one thousand dollars. The cup is given by the National Anti-Tuberculosis League to the State having the greatest number of Knight Bannerets. It must be won three years in succession by a state before it may be retained.

The State Examinations for the eighth grade will be held here on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of next week.

Operating a Still

Ed Deobald and Herman Schupfer have a still in their garage that nets about $1.50 a day, with no "overhead" expense. The still is made from two five-gallon oil cans and a piece of copper tubing which forms the worm. Instead of paying 75c or $1.00 a gallon for distilled water, they brew their own. The still is operated by the heat generated by the stove that warms the garage.

Let Road Contract

At a meeting of the Kendrick Highway commissioners last Saturday the contract for finishing the new grade around Powell hill was given to Columbus Clark of Julieta, who has agreed to finish the grade for $2,000. The price is believed to be a very reasonable one and could only be secured because of the fact that Mr. Clark has a number of idle teams that he wants to keep at work. He is also personally interested in seeing a first class road between Kendrick and Julieta and has always been willing to assist in obtaining it.

The contract calls for a road 16 feet wide and not to exceed 5 per cent grade. Such a road will be a marked improvement over the present grade which is narrow and steep. The completion of this short strip of road will be a big step toward a uniform grade and roadbed connecting the two towns.

The ultimate object in view is to get a first class graded road from the mouth of Cedar creek to the highway at Arrow. The accomplishment of this ideal depends upon the united efforts of the people of the Potlatch country. With a Main highway along the Potlatch to build to, there is no reason whatever why this country cannot have a splendid system of roads. The hardest fight is to get the start and the start will be made this spring and summer with the completion of the mile of graded road north of town and extensive road construction work between Kendrick and Julieta.

Mr. Clark expects to start the work some time within the next week or so and will rush it to completion so that his teams will be available for the spring farm work.

Moscow Poultry Show

The Moscow Poultry Association was recently organized for the purpose of giving the poultry keepers of Latah County and surrounding territory an opportunity to learn more about the poultry industry. A poultry show will be held on January 19-20-21, 1922, at Washburn & Wilson's Seed House, Moscow, Idaho. The University will have on display some of their various breeds of pure bred poultry. However, these pens will not be entered in the competition. It is also planned to have some talks on the various phases of poultry keeping.

Prof. Mitchell, head of the Poultry Department of the Washington State College, will judge the show. Ribbons will be given for first, second and third places and sweepstakes in each class. In addition, very liberal cash prizes are offered by Moscow merchants for the various classes.

Poultry raisers desiring to enter their birds in this show can obtain entry blanks and a premium list by writing to H. W. Hulbert, secretary-treasurer of the association.

American Legion Election

Because of the fact that the annual meeting of Canyon Post No. 66, A. L., was not very largely attended, the election of officers will be handled in a different manner than usual. The membership is widely scattered so it was thought best to mail ballots to each member, thus allowing even those at a distance an opportunity to vote.

Ballots will be sent to the members and with each ballot a list of those who belong to the local post. From this list names will be selected to fill the 9 offices, each voter writing the names which he selects from the list. In order to be a qualified voter it will be necessary to have dues paid up for 1922. Those who are in arrears may send the dues with their ballots.

The votes will be counted by the present executive committee at a future date.

The local post is in fine shape financially, so that there is every reason why the members should retain their memberships and keep the organization in good working order.

Taking Desperate Chances

It is true that many contract severe colds and recover from them without taking any precaution or treatment, and a knowledge of this fact leads others take their chances instead of giving their colds the needed attention. It should be borne in mind that every cold weakens the lungs, lowers the vitality, makes the system less able to withstand each succeeding attack and paves the way for the more serious disease. Can you afford to take such desperate chances when Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, famous for its cures of bad colds may be had for a trifle.—Adv.

The small attendance at the annual meeting of Canyon Post No. 66, A. L., did not do justice to the importance of the occasion. The success of the ensuing year's work depends largely upon the interest taken in this meeting. The choosing of efficient officers is an important step and the results of the annual election should come thru the votes of the entire membership of the organization. The local Post is putting into effect a convenient method of voting by mail so that those who were unable to attend the meeting here Monday night may have an opportunity of voting. It will be a big mistake to let your membership lapse or to fail to vote your choice of officers. The local Post has been a live organization and in order to continue to function it must have the loyal support of its members.

Judging from the bank statements in this issue of the Gazette there is no occasion for alarm concerning the financial condition of the Potlatch country. The statements show the banks to be in a healthy condition, which is a good foundation for better business during the present year.

The man who sends away from his home town for his letterheads or any other kind of printing can hardly expect to cultivate the buy-at-home spirit in others. When the home town print shop is equipped to do any kind of printing and can compete with any western printing house on price, there is no good reason why the work should be sent out of town.

Most of the advice to farmers comes from the big city papers, the said advice being written by a space filler who probably never saw a live farm.

Good roads reduce the cost of hauling. Lands adjacent to good roads become more valuable. Population increases. Social conditions improve. The reduction of time on a good road is equivalent to a decrease of distance. A good road makes the farmer and user largely independent of the season of the year or weather conditions. Where bad roads prevail farmers are forced to move their crops, not when the market price is favorable, but when the roads are favorable. It is common for the farmer to find that he cannot haul his products to market when prices are highest because the roads are impassable.—Ex.

CAMPAIGN FOR BETTER SIRES

Department of Agriculture is Aiding Movement by Issuing Number of Publications.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

In response to many requests for information to be used in starting better-sires movements in various localities, the bureau of animal industry, United States Department of Agriculture, has prepared a list of available publications and other material in the department. It has also furnished data useful to persons interested in legislation for restricting the use of mongrel sires.

Except when the open range is involved, however, or there is need to control inferior sires from running at large, specialists of the bureau prefer a continuance of educational work to legislation. They place emphasis on the fact that the work, although in-

Webster —Man's Man

CHAPTER IX.—Arriving at Sobrante, Geary welcomes Webster and is instrumental in helping his friend's "guest" ashore. The latter is known to Webster as "Andrew Bowers." Geary houses him at Mother Jenks'. Webster gets the idea that Geary and Dolores are in love, and with the intention of giving Geary every chance he smugly contradicts the girl's statement that they have met before.

CHAPTER X.—Webster receives a warning conveyed by "Don Juan Cafetero," really John J. Cafferty, Irishman of good qualities fallen through overindulgence in liquor, that there is a plot to assassinate him. Webster makes a firm friend of Cafferty. Later, the American is insulted by a Sobrantean army officer and publicly ridicules him. A challenge to a duel is accepted under such stern conditions that the Sobranteans withdraw it.

The Doctor and the Colonel immediately rose and bowed like a pair of marionettes. Webster turned to Ricardo.

"Have you had any experience in revolutions, my son?" he asked.

Ricardo nodded. "I realized I had to have experience, and so I went to Mexico. I was with Madero through the first revolution."

"How are you arming your men?"

"Mannichers. I've got 20,000,000 rounds of cartridges, 25 machine guns, and a dozen three-inch field guns. I have also engaged 200 American ex-soldiers to handle the machine guns and the batteries. These rascals cost me $5 a day gold, but they're worth it; they like fighting and will go anywhere to get it—and are faithful."

"You are secretly mobilizing in the mountains, eh?" Webster rubbed his chin ruminatively. "Then I take it you'll attack Buenaventura when you strike the first blow?"

"Quite right. We must capture a seaport if we are to revolute successfully."

"I'm glad to know that. I'll make it my business to be up in the mountains at the time. I'm for peace, every rattle out of the box. Gentlemen, you've cheered me wonderfully. I will now go home and leave you to your evil machinations; and the good Lord and the jiggers willing, I shall yet glean a night's sleep."

He shook hands all around and took his departure.

Mother Jenks was waiting for Webster at the foot of the stairs. He paused on the threshold.

"Mrs. Jenks," he said, "Billy tells me you have been very kind to him. I want to tell you how much I appreciate it and that I stand willing to reciprocate any time you are in need."

Mother Jenks fingered her beard and reflected. "Ave you met Miss Dolores Rucy, sir?" she queried.

"Your ward? Yes."

"Ow does the lamb strike you, Mr. Webster?"

"I have never met many women; I have known few intimately; but I should say that Miss Dolores Rucy is the marvel of her sex. She is as beautiful as she is good, and is as intelligent as she can be."

"She's a lady, sir," Mother Jenks affirmed proudly. "An' I done it. You can see with art a heye wot I am, but for all that, I've done my dooty by her. From the day my sainted 'Emery—'e was a colonel o' hantillery under President Rucy, Dolores' father—'escaped from the burnin' palace with 'er an' told me to raise 'er a lady for the syke of her father, as was the finest gentleman this rotten country'll ever see, she's been my guidin' star. She's self-supportin' now, but still I ain't done my whole dooty by her. I want to see 'er married to a gentleman as'll maintain 'er like a lady."

"Well, Mrs. Jenks, I think you will live to see that worthy ambition attained. Mr. Geary is head over heels in love with her."

"Aye, Willie's a nice lad—I could wish no better; but wot 'e's got 'e got from you, an' where'll 'e be if 'is mine-doesn't p'y big? Now, with you, sir, it's different. You're a bit older'n Billy, an' more settled an' serious; you've made yer fortune, so Willie tells me, an' not to go beatin' about the bally bush, I s'y, wot's the matter with you an' her steppin' over the broomstick together? You might go a bloomin' sight farther an' fare wuss."

"Too old, my dear schemer, too old!" John Stuart replied smilingly. "And she's in love with Billy. Don't worry. If he doesn't make a go of this mining concession, I'll take care of his finances until he can do so himself. I do not mind telling you, in strictest confidence, that I have made my will and divided my money equally between them."

"Gord bless you, for a sweet, kind gentleman," Mother Jenks gulped, quite overcome with emotion.

Hastily Webster bade Mother Jenks good night and hurried away to escape a discussion on such a delicate topic with Billy's blunt and single-minded landlady. His mind was in a tumult. So it was that he paid no attention to a vehicle that joggled by him with the cochero sagging low in his seat, half asleep over the reins, until a quick command from the closed interior brought the vehicle to an abrupt halt, half a block in advance of Webster.

Save for an arc light at each end of the block, the Calle de Concordia was dim; save for Webster, the carriage and the two men who piled hurriedly out at the rear of the conveyance, the Calle de Concordia was devoid of life. Webster saw one of the men hurriedly toss a coin to the cochero; with a fervent "Gracias, mi capitán," the driver clucked to his horse, turned the corner into the Calle Elizondo and disappeared, leaving his late passengers facing Webster and calmly awaiting his approach. He was within 20 feet of them when the taller of the two men spoke.

"Good evening, my American friend. This meeting is a pleasure we scarcely hoped to have so soon. For the same we are indebted to Lieutenant Arredondo, who happened to look back as we passed you, and recognized you under the arc light."

Webster halted abruptly; the two Sobrantean officers stood smiling and evidently enjoying his discomfort. Each carried a service revolver in a closed holster fastened to his sword-belt, but neither had as yet made a move to draw—seeing which, Webster felt sufficiently reassured to accept the unwelcome situation with a grace equal to that of his enemies.

"What? You two had little boys up this late! I'm surprised," he replied in Spanish. He feigned his arms, struck an attitude and surveyed them as might an indignant father. "You kids have been up to some mischief," he added, as his right hand closed over the butt of his automatic, where it lay smuggled in the open holster under his left arm between his shirt and coat. "Can it be possible you are going to take advantage of superior numbers and the fact that you are both armed, to force me into a duel on your terms, my dear Captain Benavides?"

By a deferential bow, the unwholesome Benavides indicated that such were his intentions. "Then," said Webster, "as the challenged party I have the choice of weapons. I choose pistols."

"At what range?" the lieutenant asked with mock interest.

"As we stand at present. I'm armed. Pull your hardware, you pretty pair of polecats, and see if you can beat me to the draw."

Captain Benavides' jaw dropped slightly; with a quiet, deliberate motion his hand stole to his holster-flap. Lieutenant Arredondo wet his lips and glanced so apprehensively at his companion that Webster was aware that here was a situation not to his liking.

"You should use an open holster," Webster taunted. "Come, come—unbutton that holster-flap and get busy."

Benavides' hand came away from the holster. He was not the least bit frightened, but his sense of proportion in matters of this kind was undergoing a shake-up.

"In disposing of any enemy in a gun fight, so a professional killer once informed me," Webster continued, "it is a good plan to put your first bullet anywhere in the abdomen; the shock of a bullet there paralyzes your opponent for a few seconds and prevents him from returning the compliment, and in the interim you blow his brains out while he lies looking at you. I have never had any practical experience in matters of this kind, but I don't mind telling you that if I must practice on somebody, the good Lord could not have provided two more delightful subjects."

He ceased speaking, and for nearly half a minute the three men appraised each other. Benavides was fidgeting; Webster's glance never faltered from the captain's nervous hand.

"You would be very foolish to draw," Webster then assured Benavides. "If I am forced to kill you, it will be with profound regret. Suppose you two dear, sweet children run along home and think this thing over. You may change your mind by tomorrow morn—"

The captain's hand, with the speed of a juggler's, had flown to his holster; but quick as he was, Webster was a split second quicker. The sound of his shot roared through the silent calle, and Benavides, with his pistol half drawn, lifted a bloody, shattered hand from the butt as Webster's automatic swept in a swift arc and covered Arredondo, whose arms on the instant went skyward.

"That wasn't a half bad duel," Webster remarked coldly. "Are you not obliged to me, Captain, for not blowing your brains out—for disregarding my finer instincts and refraining from shooting you first through the abdomen? Bless you, my boy, I've been stuck for years in places where the only sport consisted in seeing who could take a revolver, shoot at a tin can and roll it farthest in three seconds. Let me see your hand."

Benavides sullenly held up that dripping member, and Webster inspected it at a respectful distance. "Steel jacket bullet," he informed the wounded man. "Small hole—didn't do much damage. You'll be just as well as ever in a month."

He helped himself to Arredondo's gun, slipped out the cylinder, and slipped all six cartridges into his palm. Similarly he disarmed Benavides, expressed his regret that circumstances had rendered it imperative to use force, and strolled blithely down the calle. In the darkened patio he groped along the wall until he found the swinging rope by which he had descended from his room—whereupon he removed his shoes, tied the laces together, slung them around his neck, dug his toes into the adobe wall and climbed briskly to his room.

The next morning Webster waited until Dolores appeared and then accompanied her into the dining room for breakfast.

"Well, how did you pass your first night in Buenaventura?" she inquired, in the manufacture of breakfast conversation.

"Not very well. Jiggers bit me and woke me up, and finally I fell into a trance and had a vision—about you. After that I couldn't go to sleep again. I was fairly bursting to see you at breakfast and read your palm. I've just discovered a wonderful system."

"Show me," she flashed back at him and she extended her little hand. He picked it up gravely and with the dull tinge of a fork made a great show of tracing the lines on her palm.

"You are about twenty-four years old, and your ancestors were pure-bred Castellans who came from Madrid, crossing the Atlantic in caravels. Ever since the first Rucy landed on this coast the family has been identified with the government of the country in one way or another. When you were quite a little girl, your father, Don Ricardo Rucy, at that time president of Sobrante, failed to suppress a revolution and was cornered in the government palace, which was set afire."

"Through the bravery and devotion of a cockney gentleman, Colonel Henry Jenks, an artillery officer in your father's army you were saved from perishing in the burning palace. Colonel Jenks turned you over to his spouse, now known as Mother Jenks, with instructions to raise you a lady, and Mother Jenks has carried out those instructions. Colonel Jenks and your father were executed, and Mother Jenks sent you to the United States to be educated. You had a brother, Ricardo Luis Rucy, older than yourself by seven or eight years. I should judge. In some mysterious manner you and your brother lost track of each other, and at the present moment he believes you perished in the flames that gutted the government palace."

"You are of a proud, independent nature; you work at something for a living, and inasmuch as you haven't been able to set aside a great deal of money from your earnings, you are planning to terminate your visit to your native land at an early date and return to the United States for the purpose of getting back to work. These plans, however, will never be consummated."

"Why? Because you are to be married to a nice man and live happily ever afterward, and about sixty days from now, if all goes well, I, John S. Webster, am going to introduce you to your long-lost brother Ricardo. You will first see Ricardo riding at the head of his victorious rebel troops as he enters Buenaventura. He will be the next president of this wretched country, if, fortunately, he is not killed in the revolution he is now fomenting against his father's ancient enemy. Your brother does not know you are living and it will be a proud and happy day for me when I bring him to you. In the interim, what do you purpose having for breakfast? Ham and eggs sunny side up, an omelette or a cereal?"

He released her hand and favored her with the boyish grin that always had the effect of stripping the years from him as one strips the husk from a ripe ear of corn. She was gazing at him in wide-eyed amazement.

"Is my brother really alive?"

"He was as late as midnight last night. Do you recall the chap I saved from being assassinated in New Orleans?"

"Yes."

"Your worthy brother. And do you recall the chauffeur whose passage to this port I was forced to pay?"

"Yes."

"The same individual. I sent him ashore in the launch with Billy, and he has been housed at El Buen Amigo, but left early this morning for the back country to open a recruiting office."

She reached across the little table and squeezed his big brown hand impulsively. "You're the most wonderful man I ever knew. And does my poor brother know I am living, Mr. Webster?"

"No—and I'm not going to tell him. I think it will be much nicer to restore you to each other on the steps of the government palace on the day when the Rucy faction comes into its own again. That will make his victory all the sweeter. By the way, where was Ricardo when your father's ship of state went on the rocks?"

"At school in a military academy in Kentucky."

"It is a marvelous mix-up, which Ricardo can doubtless explain, Miss Rucy. I know he believes his sister perished with her father. Mother Jenks didn't know where he was and couldn't communicate with him—and there you are. However, little old Jack Fix-it will bring you together again in due course. In the interim, how about those eggs? Straight up—or flip 'em?"

She beamed across at him. "We are going to be such good, true friends, aren't we?" she urged. He almost shivered, but managed a hypocritical nod. "While we have only known each other twenty-four hours, it seems a great deal longer than that—probably because Billy has told me so much about you, and you're—so comfortable and easy to get acquainted with, and I—I can't very well express my gratitude for what you've done—for what you're going to do." Her voice faltered; she smiled roguishly through the tears of her emotion. "If I were only Billy, now, I could put my arm across your shoulders and settle the matter by saying: 'Johnny, you old horse-thief, you're all right!'"

"The best thing to do would be to cease puffing me up with importance. And now, before we climb out of the realm of romance and the improbable to the more substantial plane of things for breakfast, just one brief word of caution. Now that I have told you your brother lives and is in Buenaventura, forget it until I mention it again, because his presence here is his secret, not ours."

"All right, Calliph," she agreed. "I think I shall call you that hereafter. Like the late Caliph Haroun Al Raschid, it appears you have a habit of prowling around o' nights in queer places, doing good deeds for your subjects. But tell me about my brother. Describe him to me."

"Not now. Here comes the head waiter with a cablegram for me, I think."

How Not to Take Cold

Some persons are subject to frequent colds, while others seldom, if ever, have a cold. You will find that the latter take good care of themselves. They take a shower or cold sponge bath every day in a warm room, avoid over heated rooms, sleep with a window open or partly open, avoid excesses, over eating, becoming over heated and then chilled and getting the feet wet. Then, when they feel the first indication of a cold, they take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy without delay and it is soon over.

There will be a special term of district court of Nez Perce county at Lewiston, January 30, at 10 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bolon and family left Tuesday for Orofino, where they will make their home. Mr. Bolon has a position with the Clearwater Hardware Co. Stewart Compton is manager of the company.

George Barnum's name appears in the list of instructors of the Air Service Mechanics School at Chanute Field, Rantoul, Ill. The Gazette is in receipt of a copy of the "Flying Circus", which gives a number of interesting views of the flying field and other features concerning the school.

Mr. and Mrs. Ira Havens of American ridge spent Sunday in Moscow with relatives.

Gus Ziemann of Southwick went to Moscow the first of the week to visit his son, who is slowly recovering from blood poison in one of his ankles.

The value of gold, silver, copper and lead mined in Idaho in 1921 is placed at $15,208,000 by the United States geological survey.

Aaron Westling arrived here Thursday of last week from the Craig Mountain district to visit his brother, A. Westling.

Will Rich of Southwick called at the office last week and stated that there was a mistake in the name in the write-up of an arrest made in Nez Perce county. It was stated in the Gazette that Jesse Rich was arrested and Will said the name should have read Jesse Rice. We are glad to make the correction, as the article in last week's paper might have been applied to Jesse Rich of Leland, who was in no way connected with the affair.

Mrs. Julia Flesham and four children returned last Saturday from Turon, Kansas, where she spent the past four months visiting at her old home. She stated that prospects for a wheat crop were not good in the vicinity of Turon, as there had been practically no rain there this fall. Mrs. Flesham will make her home in Leland.

Miss Wade, book-keeper for the Kendrick Hardware Co., spent the week end at her home in Lewiston.

One of our exchanges tells about a man who was arrested, charged with racing. "I wasn't racing", he exclaimed. "But," he temporized a moment later, "I passed a couple of fellows that were."

Halvor Nelson of Farmington, Wash., was transacting business in Kendrick this week.

Mrs. John Waide and son, Darrell, went to Lewiston Tuesday afternoon to visit friends.

Bobby, who being kept after school several times, was later than usual in getting home one evening. His father met him at the door, asked the reason for his being so late. "The teacher kept me in late," answered Bobby, "and its all your fault, too." "How's that?" inquired father. "Well, the other night I asked you how much a million dollars was, and you said 'a hell of a lot of money,' and that ain't the right answer at all."

The little son of A. W. Jones was taken to Lewiston the first of the week to have some surgical work done on the bones of his face. He was injured some time ago in Montana, while helping to put up hay. A tug came loose, allowing the end of a single tree to strike him in the face. The injury has never entirely healed.

Miss Laura Pemberton retruned Tuesday afternoon from a visit with relatives in Lewiston.

The annual meeting and election of officers of the Farmers Hardware Co. was held at the store the first of the week.

Because an Arkansas jury sentenced a man, convicted of murdering an editor, to 99 years in prison, and a man convicted of killing a lawyer got off with 7 years, the Topeka Capital is blissful; says it proves way down deep in their hearts the people think more of editors than they do of lawyers.

Dr. Otteraaen is working up a splendid practice in Kendrick and Juliaetta and the surrounding country. He is a good doctor and it hasn't taken the people of the community long to become aware of the fact. He has been busy right from the start.

Miss Edith Compton returned from Orofino Wednesday morning, where she has been ill with inflammatory rheumatism. She expects to return to Boise next week to resume her work as teacher in the city schools.

G. G. Pickett, attorney for Kendrick, was here last week to meet with the council and talk over with the members the necessary procedure concerning the abatement of several buildings which were condemned by the council some time ago. He will take the necessary legal steps to have the buildings eliminated.

During her visit here last week Miss Lillian Scattaboe, superintendent of schools of Latah county, stated that the school work in Kendrick was progressing very nicely and that the people of this district might well feel pleased at the good work that is being done. The school is running smoothly and both the teachers and pupils are apparently very much interested in their work. The discipline is above the standard.

Mrs. Katherine Hunter of Coeur d'Alene visited at the home of Mrs. H. B. Hull this week. Mrs. Hunter is a former resident of Kendrick and has many friends in the community. Her son and daughter are attending the University of Idaho.

Postmaster Brown is in receipt of a circular from Mrs. Sam Griswold of Camp Point, Illinois, asking aid in finding her son, Emerson Griswold, who is 23 years old, and who, after returning from service in the World War, left home in April, 1919 to see the west. He was heard from in Washington and later in Oregon. The last word received from him by the grief-stricken mother was in June, 1920. The mother will pay a reward of $50 to anyone giving her information which will put her in communication with her boy.

DAIRY

MILK DELIVERED TO CITIES

Figures Announced by Department of Agriculture on Total Cost to Ultimate Consumer.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The total cost of milk delivered to the consumer's door in Columbus, O., during the first six months of 1920, ranged from 11.3 cents up to 15.3 cents per quart, if the costs of one company which does business in "certified" milk are omitted, according to the figures recently announced by the United States Department of Agriculture. The cost of the raw milk delivered at the dairy ranged from 8.7 cents to 10 cents per quart. The total cost of operating the dairy plant, including the pasteurizing and bottling of the milk, ranged from 1 cent to 1.4 cents per quart, and the cost of delivering the milk from the dairy to the consumer ranged from 1.61 cents to 3.9 cents per quart.

The item of administrative expense varies widely, being as low as two-tenths of a cent per quart for one small company and as high as 1 cent per quart for a large concern.

Two of the seven companies covered were small concerns which produced their own milk supply. The cost of producing the milk for these companies in 1920 was 8.9 cents per quart, which is very similar to the price paid for milk by the larger concerns.

One of the items of cost which has attracted most attention among students of the milk business is the so-called "bottle loss." The department's study indicates that for the companies covered in Columbus this item ranges from one-tenth to two-tenths of a cent per quart.

Great difficulty was experienced in getting any satisfactory information concerning the shrinkage which takes place in the handling and delivery of milk, but according to the best data available this item amounts to between 2.3 per cent and 5.5 per cent of the total volume of milk.

Columbus is a city of 237,031 population, which is reported to consume about 27,000,000 quarts of milk per annum. This milk is supplied by over 2,000 producers, from 15 different counties, and is transported to Columbus from a territory having a radius of 35 miles. Conditions appear to be fairly representative of many Middle Western cities.

The investigation covered seven companies, which sold about 16,500,000 quarts of milk and cream in 1920, or approximately 95 per cent of the total quantity consumed. The companies ranged in size from a very small one-wagon concern up to the largest, which operated 40 milk routes.

From the point of view of the farmer and the consumer, the important question is, What does it cost to handle the milk from the farm to the consumer? The cost of raw milk was between 63 per cent and 75 per cent of the total cost of the milk as it reaches the consumer.

During the period under study the retail price of Grade A milk in Columbus, as quoted by the dealers in, ranged from 15 cents to 14.5 cents per quart, though during 1920 the two small dealers sold their milk, which comes from tuberculin-tested cows, for 15 cents per quart, at the same time the wholesale price of milk ranged from 12 cents to 12 1/2 cents.

The average number of customers per route in 1920 ranged from 169 to 207, and the number of quarts per wagon ranged from 178 to 378, the average being 262. It is noteworthy that the most profitable company was the one having the largest average wagonload.
