

GYPSUM FOR POTLATCH FARMS

Interesting Article by A. N. Rognstad of Bear Ridge

It is quite generally believed that land plaster is a direct fertilizer only and that it is a recent discovery.

History relates that it was used on the legumes by the Jews in Palestine, B. C. The reason it has not been used very much in this country is probably because the legumes such as the alfalfa and clover's have not been grown very extensively until the last quarter century.

Landplaster (the commercial name) is finely ground Gypsum Rock. Gypsum is chemically known as Calcium Sulphate or Lime Sulphate. The Sulphate form is the only form in which the higher plants can use sulphur.

Pure sulphur when applied must first be changed in the soil to the acid, then into the sulphate before it can be used.

In Latah and Nez Perce counties, our soil, commonly known as Parouse Silt Loam, was found to be so deficient in sulphur that amounts obtained in soil analysis were unweighable.

The legume family of plants seem to respond most readily to the application of gypsum because they require so much sulphur in their makeup. Alfalfa for instance requires 65 pounds of Sulphur Trioxide per acre and to supply this amount of sulphur about 150 pounds of gypsum is needed.

I have used three varying amounts of Gypsum on alfalfa, 100, 150 and 200 pounds and found that 150 pounds gave the best results. There was no increase in yield on the 200 pound plot over the 150 pound plot.

The Oregon Experiment Station found that sulphur fertilization of alfalfa increased the protein contents over 100 per cent and since the protein content gives alfalfa its chief value, that alone is sufficient, regardless of increased yield to justify its application.

Last year I got a yield of approximately 3 tons of alfalfa per acre on land treated with Gypsum and one ton on the untreated land. I also got an increased of 200 pounds beans per acre by the application of 100 pounds of Gypsum. I am trying it this year on peas and clover. A co-operative experiment was also started here this year to determine the effect of plowing under varying growths of alfalfa with varying treatments of Gypsum on subsequent wheat crops.

Gypsum, therefore, owing to the fact that it is a source of sulphur is a direct fertilizer.

It is also indirect fertilizer, acting as a stimulant on the insoluble mineral compounds, releasing Potassium and Potash. This is one of the most valuable benefits from Gypsum fertilization. It also acts as a stimulant on the nitrogen-fixing bacteria of the soil and the nodule forming bacteria of the legumes to such extent that the root system becomes 3 or 4 times as large and extensive. For this reason there can be no ill effects from the continual use of Gypsum. The increase in the nodule forming bacteria and root system will much more than offset the plant food released thru this stimulating process.

If possible landplaster should be applied in the fall, anytime after the first fall rain and before deep freezing. This gives it a chance to wash down and around at the roots before spring, thereby giving maximum returns the first year. The life of one application is as long as the same field should be left to alfalfa in one rotation. I have one plot 5 years old that gave as big increase the 5th year as it did the first year.

The best method of applying outside of using a fertilizer drill or attachment, is with an ordinary cogwheel type of feed grain drill. Other type feeds do not work so

Income Tax Facts

The new requirements of the income tax law that returns shall be made of gross income of $5,000 or more regardless of the amount of net income upon which the tax is assessed, necessitates careful computation on the part of the taxpayer. "Gross income" includes practically every dollar received by the taxpayer during the year 1921 in salaries, wages, commissions, rents, royalties, interest on bank deposits, cash dividends on stock, "or income from any source whatever." "Net income" is gross income less certain deductions provided for by the act, including all business expenses incurred in the conduct of a business, trade, profession, or vocation.

Certain expenditures, however, are not deductible as in business expense when made for the purchase of articles more or less permanent in character, or for permanent improvement of property. For example, a merchant would not be allowed to deduct the amount expended in the erection of a new store, or a farmer the cost of a new tractor or thrashing machine, since such investments are held to be capital investments. The law expressly prohibits the deduction of family or living expenses, such as rent for a dwelling, repairs to a dwelling, cost of food and clothing for the family, education of children, servant's wages, and similar items. Amounts spent during the year 1921 for any of these items are not deductible.

School Notes

The pupils of the 5th and 6th grades gave their teacher, Miss Steward, a birthday party Wednesday afternoon. Games were played in the gymnasium and refreshments were served in the domestic science room. All the teachers were invited to the lunch. Everyone had a nice time and Miss Steward received many birthday remembrances.

Returns from the Eighth grade state exams have just been received. Claribel Mocre passed in geography and history. Victor Gentry passed in geography. Other grades indicate that a large amount of work remains to be done before the spring exams.

The 3rd and 4th grade room are proudly displaying their new Health Crusade pennant, which they recently won in a tournament. The Health Crusade banner is on exhibition in the 7th and 8th grade room. It is to be awarded to the room making the best record in the present tournament.

About 50 new books have very recently been added to the library. They are for the most part "juvenile" the very good reading for even older people. The eagerness of the children to get hold of them shows need for new books, as many have read all of the best old ones.

Friday evening basket ball games bid fair to be two of the most interesting games of the season. The local teams are making special effort in preparing for the games as both teams are determined to even up the one sided scores which resulted from their games in Troy. The school is trying to make this game pay the expense of the program Monday evening. Let's have everybody come and support the team, support the school, and support the program for Lincoln's birthday anniversary.

well. The fertilizer usually requires constant stirring in the drill box to insure even feeding and for that reason two men are really required to operated the drill. Drilling into the ground is not necessary as the first rain will quickly wash it into the soil.

With the growing importance of maintaining the soil fertility, in some cases of even bringing it back, the ideal conditions for growing alfalfa and clover in the Potlatch country, the extensive use of landplaster will make them profitable to grow both as hay and as a soil builder.—A. N. Rognstad.

The Cow And The Pig And The Hen

President A. H. UPHAM

The farmer smiled as he passed them by,
The cow and the pig and the hen;
For the price of wheat had gone sky-high,
And the cow and the pig and the hen
They ate up grain he could sell at the mill,
They needed his care when nights were chill.
He swore of them all he'd had his fill—
The cow and the pig and the hen.

These barnyard cattle had had their day,
The cow and the pig and the hen.
He could get thirty bones for a ton of hay—
No need for the cow or the hen.
He never would milk another cow,
He hated the sight of a grunting sow,
And raising chickens was work for the frau,
Goodbye to the cow and the hen.

They gave no heed to his jeer or frown,
The cow and the pig and the hen,
Whatever goes up, said they, comes down,
The wise old cow and the hen.
The hen laid eggs the winter through,
The cow gave milk and the piggy grew,
But hay dropped down from thirty to two—
Oh, the cow, the pig and the hen!

Now he sits and sighs, as he counts his cost
For the cow and the pig and the hen.
He almost cries for the milk he's lost,
The cow and the pig and the hen.
He'd tend them gladly in mud and rain,
And lessen his acres of hay and grain,
If he only could buy them back again,
The cow and the pig and the hen.

Death of Leah Smith

The community was deeply shocked to learn of the death of Miss Leah Smith, who died at Lewiston, Tuesday afternoon, after a lingering illness. Her death has cast a shadow of sadness throughout this section, where she was so well known and so universally admired for her many sterling qualities. Her life of splendid service in the Linden community, which was her home for many years, still survives her. As a rural teacher she was one of the most successful in the county as her efforts were always directed toward better conditions and more pleasant surroundings for her pupils.

The following account and tribute to Miss Smith was published in the Lewiston Tribune:

Miss Leah Smith passed away at the home of J. B. McCulley yesterday afternoon as a result of Bright's disease with complications. Her death was not entirely unexpected as her condition had been considered serious for some time. She had not seemed much worse at the end than she had been previously.

The deceased was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jordan P. Smith of Linden, Idaho, both of whom passed away several years ago. She was born March 3, 1895, and was the second child of a family of six children. She is survived by two sisters, Anna, attending the Lewiston normal school, and Eva of Linden, and three brothers, Ben L., James and George, all of Linden.

She attended the Palouse high school and afterward the Lewiston normal. After teaching two years near Palouse, two years at Linden and one year at Green Creek, she returned to the normal to complete her education when she was stricken with her fatal illness.

Those who knew Leah Smith feel that it is given to few young people to have done so much in such a short number of years. She was always happy, cheerful, friendly, industrious to a fault and loyal to all that stood for good in the community. Her teaching was for the good of the state as well as for the children. Even in the face of death, her spirit was serene. Her many friends at the Normal school and throughout the city will miss her greatly.

The funeral will be held at 11 o'clock this morning at the Vassar chapel. The remains will be taken on the 12:15 train to Linden, for interment.

Federal Highways

What the new federal highway appropriation to be expended under the direction of the bureau of public roads, United States department of agriculture, will mean to the country is accurately gauged in a synopsis prepared by the bureau, showing the use to which the $275,000,000 previously appropriated by congress has been put. Up to December 31, $212,077,246 had been put to work in projects either entirely complete or under construction. To match that amount the states appropriated $285,733,312, making a total of $497,456,558.

If placed end to end the roads to be paid for by this money would encircle the earth at the equator and extend as far as New York to San Francisco on the second lap. The total mileage of roads under construction and complete, the department's records show, was approximately 27,000 miles. Of this mileage 9,555 miles was in projects entirely completed. The balance of 17,445 miles was in projects which were still under construction but reported 69 per cent complete October 31. In those projects there was the equivalent of 12,000 miles of completed roads, so that the completed road to date was more than 21,000 miles, or nearly enough to encircle the globe.

Prior to five years ago the federal government took no active part in the road construction of the country. Today about one-third of all roads under construction are being aided financially by the federal government, and the construction is subject to inspection and approval of federal engineers.

Mielke Has Great Layers

After hearing the story of Gus Birchmier's White Leghorns in last week's paper, it began to look very much as though they had the record in this locality, but this week Fred Mielke of Cameron comes to the rescue of the Wyandotte family. He has 27 Silver Laced Wyandotte pullets and during the month of January they laid 35 dozen and 3 eggs. A few days during the month Mr. Mielke gathered 20 eggs a day, which, we'll tell the world, is going some for a cold month like January.

Dr. Jones, eyesight specialist of Spokane, was here the first of the week. He expects to return at a later date.

Lincoln Day Program

A slight change has been made in the plans for the Lincoln Day Program, which will be put on by the Kendrick Schools, Monday night, February 13. It was first announced that it would be held in the high school auditorium, but as the prospect is that a very large crowd will attend, it was later decided to have it at the Methodist church.

Everybody is most cordially invited to attend the program. It promises to be a most interesting affair. The address by President Upham, of the University of Idaho, will be the feature of the evening. This will be Kendrick's first opportunity to hear President Upham and as he is considered one of the very ablest speakers of the West, it goes without saying, there will be a good crowd to hear him.

No admission charge will be made. Following is an outline of the program:

- America - Audience
- Led by Glee Club
- Presentation of bust of Lincoln by Kester Dammerall, vice-pres. of last year's class.
- Accepted by president of student body - Nell Ameling
- Lincoln's Gettysburg Address, Buford Hogan
- "O, Captain, My Captain" Audrey Stanton
- Song "America, the Beautiful" Glee Club.
- Address President A. H. Upham

Mrs. W. M. Blenden

The funeral of Mrs. W. M. Blenden was held last Thursday at the Big Bear ridge hall, Rev. Baile having charge of the service. The large crowd which gathered for the last sad rites, showed the high esteem in which Mrs. Blenden was held by her friends and neighbors. After the sermon at the hall the burial service was held at the Wild Rose Cemetery.

Celestial Parajee, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Allen Woods was born in Cowley County, Kansas, January 30, 1873, and died at her home on Big Bear ridge, January 30, 1922.

In August 1894 she was married to W. M. Blenden and to this union nine children were born, seven of whom are living. They are Mrs. Frank Gilky, of Pleasant Dale, Sask., Canada; Mrs. Wallace Emmet of Kendrick; Mrs. Thomas VanMouken of Genesee; Mrs. Horace Comstock of Troy; Louis, Ruth and Marvin, who are at home.

Mrs. Blenden had pleural pneumonia in 1904 and never recovered her health afterwards. On January 30, she was taken suddenly ill and died before medical aid could be secured.

Mrs. Blenden was held in the highest esteem and was respected by all who knew her. Her cheerfulness and optimism during her suffering gained for her the love and respect of all her friends and neighbors.

Juliaetta Record: Columbus Clark, county commissioner from this district, who is attending a session of the county commissioners at Moscow, was home Tuesday during a recess of the board. Mr. Clark states that the board has considerable business on hand and is disposing of the various matters before it as rapidly as possible giving time for due consideration of the business being transacted. Among the transactions completed is the purchase of a new 16-27 horsepower Case engine, for road work. The new engine cost $1,750, but against this the old engine was turned in at $520. Besides considerable other old machinery which could no longer be successfully used, has been sold making more than enough in all to pay for the new engine. The new engine will be shipped from Spokane and will be unloaded at Juliaetta about the first of March to be used in road work in the spring, when considerable work is planned to be done to the roads in general.

Genesee News: According to a detailed report in the Kendrick Gazette, Kendrick is to have a new modern moving picture and show house which will be second to none in any town of Kendrick' size in the state. The stock has all been subscribed and the company is to be incorporated for $5,000.

The house will have a stucco front, sloping concrete floor, stucco walls and ceiling; glass enclosed ticket booth, and a stage 18x16 feet. It will be furnished with a motor driven picture machine, opera chairs and all up-to-date equipment and ventilator.

It is unnecessary to say that Genesee needs something on the same order where people can go and be comfortably seated.

Deary Press: The logging operations at Camp Park are attracting nation-wide notice, on account of the interesting and novel methods employed. The Timberman, published in Portland, has written for photographs and a full description of the operations, and last week the Pathe people had camera men on the ground taking pictures for the screen.

Star-Mirror. Browning Robbins, wanted on a charge of burglary in connection with the alleged burglary of the Robbin's pool hall, was arrested and taken to the Latah county jail Sunday night by his father, Grant Robbins, chief of police of Moscow.

No arraignment of Robbins had been made up to a late hour Monday afternoon. He is charged with burglary in a warrant sworn out by Prosecuting Attorney John Nisbet in which Robbins is alleged to have broken in to the Robbin's pool hall and stolen between $23 and $25 from the two cash registers.

Devere Frantz, also alleged to be implicated with Robbins in the alleged robbery and under arrest on a charge of burglary, was arraigned Monday before Judge Adrian Nelson and was released on a $500 cash bond which Frantz furnished.

The regular monthly council meeting was held at the city hall Tuesday evening. Nothing but the general routine business was transacted.

A Judicious Inquiry

A well known traveling man who visits the drug trade, says he has often heard druggists ask a customer, who wished to buy a cough medicine, whether it was for a child or an adult and if for a child, they almost invariably recommended Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. The reason for this is that they know there is no danger from it and that it always cures. There is not the least danger in giving it and for colds, croup and whooping cough it is unsurpassed.—Adv.

It will be gratifying to the farm bureau members of Latah and Nez Perce counties to learn that their respective county agent has been honored with an important position in the University of Idaho extension division. O. S. Fletcher was named permanent chairman of the northern Idaho division and W. W. Skuse, secretary. We believe there have been no other counties in the state more fortunate in the choice of county agents than Latah and Nez Perce counties and the action of the extension division would indicate a recognition of their ability.

Farmers lost 3½ billion dollars in 1921. The final report of the U. S. Department of Agriculture puts a value of only 5,676 million dollars on last years crop production, compared with 9,075 million in 1920; 13,689 million in 1919. The 1921 value is the lowest since 1908, at that time the things the farmers buy were 35 to 50 per cent cheaper than they are now. However, the ray of hope is offered that the depressed condition of agriculture has reached bottom, from now on will improve.

In spite of dire prophecies that Kendrick is in for a flood before the snow leaves, there seems to be no more danger than during the ordinary January or February thaw. The snow is melting very slowly so that the creek has risen but little. Kendrick has only had one flood and at that time there were contributing causes that have since been removed.

Government data issued by the Department of Commerce conclusively proves that the price of American farm products varies, not according to volume of exports of those products (that is, by the amount the American farmer sells in the foreign market but by the amount of those products consumed in the United States. The rise and fall of farm prices is in almost direct proportion to the rise and fall of domestic consumption of those products. When American working classes are not employed and they are compelled to cut down on their living, the consumption of farm products declines and with the decline of consumption there is a decline in price.—Star-Mirror.

Don't Be Discouraged

Remember this:

When Abraham Lincoln was a young man he ran for the legislature in Illinois, and was badly swamped.

He next entered business, failed, and spent seventeen years of his life paying up the debts of a worthless partner.

He was in love with a beautiful young woman to whom he became engaged—then she died.

Later he married a woman who was a constant burden to him.

Entering politics again, he ran for Congress and was badly defeated.

He then tried to get an appointment to the United States Land Office, but failed.

He became a candidate for the United States Senate, and was badly defeated.

In 1856 he became a candidate for the Vice-Presidency and was again defeated.

In 1858 he was defeated by Douglas.

One failure after another—bad failures—great setbacks. In the face of all this he eventually became one of the country's greatest men, it not the greatest.

When you think of a series of setbacks like his, doesn't it make you feel small to become discouraged, just because you think you are having a hard time in life?—Selected.

Star-Mirror: Edward Solberg of Troy, who carried away several prizes at the poultry show held in this city in January, reports an excellent record of 12 trapped Barred Plymouth rock pullets. He received from the pullets 277 eggs, or an average of 23 eggs from each during the month of January. The pullets were bred by Mr. Solberg from stock imported from the Oregon Agricultural College, two years ago. This strain has become noted for excellent laying, a barred Plymouth rock hen from the Oregon college winning high score over all breeds in the all-northwest laying competition, conducted at Pullman in 1918-19. Mr. Solberg informs The Star-Mirror that he has decided to specialize in the breeding of high grade Plymouth rock cockerels.

CHAPTER X.—Webster receives a warning conveyed by "Don Juan Cafetero," really John J. Cafferty, Irishman of good qualities fallen through overindulgence in liquor; that there is a plot to assassinate him. Webster makes a firm friend of Cafferty. Later, the American is insulted by a Sobrantean army officer and publicly ridiculed. A challenge to a duel is accepted under such stern conditions that the Sobranteans withdraw it.

CHAPTER XI.—Webster secretly visits "Andrew Bowers" at Mother Jenks'. He learns that "Bowers" is Ricardo Rucy, son of the assassinated president, brother of Dolores (whom he believes dead), and that a revolution is contemplated. Next morning he tells Dolores that her brother, of whom she has no recollection, is in the country, plotting the overthrow of President Sarros. Very much in love with the girl, but believing that her affection has been bestowed on Geary, Webster leaves to investigate the mine which he has come to finance.

error in the government survey, will be filed. It will be claimed that the concession given your friend, Geary, is, by virtue of erroneous government surveys, the property of a citizen of Sobrante. The courts here do as Sarros tells them. You are to be kicked out, busted, and despairing, and your nicely equipped little mine will be taken over as a government monopoly and run for the benefit of the government, to-wit, Sarros and his satellites. We had to cook up a dirty deal like that to save your life. Of course, now that I have warned you in time, you are safe. We schemed a proposition, however, that worked both ways. It enabled us to save you and to save us, by permitting the shipment, free of suspicion, of arms for the rebels that are to attack the city from within. Naturally I had to cache their arms within the city—and that was a hard problem until you happened along. Thank you, fairly godfather."
"My thanks are due you, Ricardo. I'm for you, first, last, and all the time, and against this Sarros outfit. By the way, how do you purpose moving your machine guns?"
"We'll have to carry them, I guess."
"Well, I'll have a small auto-truck delivered in Buenaventura by that time. You might arrange to armor it with sheet steel; and with a couple of machine guns mounted in it, and a crew of resolute Americans behind the machine guns, you could caper from one end of the city to the other and clear a path for your infantry."
"Thank you, my friend. I'll borrow the motor truck and arrange to armor it. That's a bully idea. Are you bound for Buenaventura now?"
Webster nodded. "Then," Ricardo suggested, "I'll meet you in my room at El Buen Amigo next Wednesday night at 11 and explain the details of my plans to you if you care to hear them. I think they're air-tight myself, but somehow I think I'd feel more certain of them if you approve them."
"I'll be there, Rick, and the day you run that outlaw Sarros off the grass you'll know why I am for you."
"Good-by, old man. You will never know how grateful you have made me."
Rucy shook hands with Webster and rode off through the timber, leaving John Stuart Webster to pursue the even tenor of his way, until at length he arrived once more in Buenaventura and sought accommodations at the Hotel Mateo. And there, as he entered the lobby and gazed through a glass door across the patio and into the veranda, he saw that which disturbed him greatly. In a big wicker rocker Dolores Rucy sat, rocking gently and busily stitching on a piece of fancy work!

Billy Geary gone back to the United States, and Dolores was still in Buenaventura! "Amazing! Why, what the devil did Billy mean by letting her have her own way like that? Of course, they hadn't been married, or she would not now be out there on the veranda, and, of course, they hadn't quarreled, because that was an impossibility, and, of course, Billy had departed alone for the U. S. A., else he would have returned to their camp in the hills back of San Miguel de Padua.

"Well, I know what I'm going to do," Webster decided. "I'm not going to be led into temptation while Billy's not on the job—so I'll not put up at the Hotel Mateo after all. I'll just sneak around to El Buen Amigo and fix it with that old Mother Jenks not to tip off my presence in town to Dolores Rucy until I can get the lay of the land and see what the devil has happened to all my well-laid plans."

He retreated out the front door and called a carriage, into which he was about to step, bag and baggage, when Don Juan Cafetero came rushing up in great excitement. "Sure, where are ye goin' now, sor. Is there no room for ye in the Hotel Mateo?"

"Their beds have jiggers in them, and I just remembered that," Webster fibbed. "Hop in, John, and we'll drive around to Mr. Geary's lodgings in El Buen Amigo."

"But I come t'rough the patio just now," Don Juan explained, "an' you should I meet but the young laddy."

"You infernal scoundrel! Did you tell her I was in town?"

"Sure I did, sor. An' why not?"

"None of your infernal business. You've spoiled everything. You're a muddle-headed monkey and I've a great notion to let you get drunk again. Take the baggage back into the hotel."

Don Juan Cafetero, greatly humbled and rebuffed, stepped aside and watched Webster stride back into the hotel. "God love ye, sor," he mumbled, "knowin' what I know, is it likely I'd let ye make a monkey out of yer or yerself? Ye made yer plans wif' Mis'her Geary wif'out consultin' her. Now go, ye grand big devil, an' find out why she kicked yer schame to smithereens." And with a solemn and knowing wink at the duffle bag, Don Juan picked that article up and followed after his master.

CHAPTER XIII.

John Stuart Webster's agile brain was the repository of many conflicting emotions as he bathed, shaved, and changed from his soiled khaki field clothes to a suit of ducks before presenting himself before Dolores.

Had Billy's courage forsaken him at the last minute, with the result that he had gone back to the United States without having settled the question of Dolores' future? Had he proposed and been rejected, or had he proposed, been accepted, and had his plans for an immediate marriage vetoed by Dolores?

In either event, why had Billy failed to leave a note for him at the Hotel Mateo, or mailed him a letter to the Globo de Oro at San Miguel de Padua, advising him of the change in the plan of action outlined for him by Webster?

In the simplicity of his single-hearted devotion Webster was puzzled to understand how any woman in her right mind could fail to fall in love with Billy Geary. A man he was, from heels to hair, and a man with prospects far above the average. To Webster's way of thinking, the girl who married Billy might well count herself fortunate.

Dolores greeted him with unaffected pleasure. "Well, Calliph!" she said. Just that. It made Webster sensible of a feeling of having returned to her after an absence of several years. "I'm so glad to see you, Miss Rucy," he replied, and added boldly, "particularly since I didn't expect to."

She knew what her reply would lead to; nevertheless, with that dissimulation which can only be practiced in perfection by a clever and beautiful woman, she answered with equal boldness: "Indeed! Pray why?"

"Well, for a pretty good reason, I think. A few weeks ago, after examining Bill's concession very thoroughly, I told him he was a potential millionaire. Now, while I disclaim any appearance of braggadocio, when John Stuart Webster, E. M., makes any mine owner a report like that, he is apt to be taken very seriously. And having made Bill a potential millionaire and arranged to give him three or four months' vacation back home, I had a notion he'd present to you a very valid reason why you should accompany him."

"You are very frank, Calliph."
"That's because I'm curious. He had a certain dream, and told me about it, and I did my little best to make it come true."

"I think I understand, Calliph. It would be very difficult, I think, for anybody to meet Billy without being attracted toward him. He's one of the dearest, most lovable boys in the world—and he did do me the signal honor of asking me to marry him. So there!"

"Well, and why didn't you?"

She smiled at his blunt insistence on forcing the issue. "For a number of excellent reasons, Calliph. In the first place, he wanted me to marry him immediately—and I wasn't ready to leave Sobrante, while Billy was. Indeed, it was highly necessary that he should leave immediately, for the sake of his health, and I had Billy's interest at heart sufficiently to insist upon it. You seem to forget that when a girl marries she must make some preparation for the event, and if she has any close relatives, such as a brother, for instance, she likes to have that relative present at the ceremony. You will recall, Calliph, that I have a brother and that you have promised to introduce me to him very shortly."

"Well, and Why Didn't You?"

"By Judas, I never thought of that, Miss Rucy," the repentant Webster answered. "In fact, I wasn't thinking of anybody's interest in this matter but Bill's."

"Not even of mine, Calliph?" reproachfully.

"That goes without saying. Could I have done anything nicer for you than fix it for Bill so he would be in position to marry you? Here you are, practically alone in the world—at least you were when Bill met you and fell in love with you—and I know that boy so well I was convinced, after meeting you, that his future happiness and yours would best be conserved if you married him. I realize this is a most unusual conversation—"

"Quite to be expected of an unusual man, Calliph. And I do not think you were one bit presumptuous. It was wonderfully dear of you, and I am profoundly grateful that Billy and I have such a true, unselfish friend, whose first thought is for our happiness. Of course, you realize how bad I felt to think I couldn't accede to Billy's plan. Billy's such a dear, it quite broke my heart to disappoint him, but a little temporary unhappiness will not ruin Billy, will it? It makes me feel blue to talk about it, Calliph."

"Not at all, not at all, Miss Rucy. Bill is one of the impulsive, whirlwind kind, up in the clouds today and down in the slough of despond tomorrow. He'll survive the shock. However, I'm glad to know everything will come out all right. Seeing you here gave me a momentary chill; I thought a cog had slipped somewhere, so I helped myself to Cupid's license and asked. A man cannot learn very much from a woman unless he asks questions, can he? I mean on the subject of love."

She smiled a little, wistful, knowing smile. "No, Calliph," she answered seriously, "somehow the Master of Things ordained that on the subject of love man must do all the talking."

"Yes, but on the other hand, woman has the last word—as usual. However, the only thing in your case and Billy's that worries me is the thought that since Bill left his magnet behind he will be drawn back here before he is in the kind of shape, physically, that I want him to be in before he relieves me on the job so I can go away."

"Do not worry on that point, Calliph. I am your ally there; between us both I think we can manage him."

"Fine business! And with those few kind words we'll dismiss William until you care to talk about him again, although if you're as deep in love as Bill you'll not stay off the subject very long. Hope you haven't been into mischief."

"I haven't been idle. I've made several dresses for Mother Jenks and done a lot of fancy work and begun the study of my mother tongue. If my brother should become president of this country, it would ill become his sister not to be able to speak Spanish. By the way, Billy told me you were going to remain up in the hills quite a while yet. What brought you back to town so soon?"

"Expected I'd have some freight arriving shortly."

"How long will you remain in Buenaventura?"
"Considering the fact that he was no longer subject to temptation, since the object of his temptation was now definitely promised to his friend, Billy, Webster suddenly decided to remain until the political atmosphere should be cleared, although prior to his conversation with Dolores he had cherished a definite plan to go back to the hills within 48 hours."

"I'm going back," he replied soberly, "after I have kept my promise and introduced you to your brother in the government palace. If I cannot introduce him to you there, the title to our mining concession will be clouded, in which event it will not be necessary for Billy or myself to fuss with it further."

He related to her the information gleaned from her brother two days previously.

Care of The Teeth Dr. H. R. Veon

How do you keep your food balanced upon your teeth while you chew it? Why, by the wonderfully accurate team work of your tongue and cheeks. Your tongue, cheeks and lips place your food in the proper position—first between the incisor teeth in front to be cut up, then between the cuspids for the tearing of fibers that may be present, then over the bicuspids for heavy crushing, and last upon the molars to be ground to the finest mesh. When the food is ready to be swallowed, the tongue carries it back to the pillars of the throat. Don't you realize that the loss of a tooth interferes with this wonderful process? Keep your teeth healthy.

Decay of the teeth is called caries. Caries is the most widely distributed disease in the world. The bacteria that produce tooth decay are nourished by the food and mucus that is left to decompose about the tooth.

These bacteria grow rapidly. Their product is lactic acid. The lime that gives the tooth its hardness is dissolved away, so that a cavity is formed.

It is not exactly correct that "a clean tooth never decays", but it is so nearly true that those who do not keep their teeth clean invite caries and so do themselves a great injury. Keep your teeth clean and be on the safe side.

The grooves in the teeth are the meeting places of the sections of enamel that come together to form the tooth. If the development of the enamel is not quite perfect when the tooth erupts, a very inviting spot for decay is present.

Every tooth should be carefully examined two or more times each year, and if there are any faults in development or any cavities, they should be attended to. This is one method of preventing decay. The other method is the careful brushing of the teeth morning and night regularly.

The bacteria of caries or tooth decay are always waiting for an opportunity to go to work. Whenever you neglect your teeth, you give the bacteria a chance and it is very difficult to get rid of them.

Do your part by keeping your teeth clean and having the cavities filled.

GLEANINGS

Charles Riggle closed his school near Park last week. The people with whom he was boarding moved out of the district, so there was no place within a reasonable distance where he could stay. The attendance at the school was very irregular, due somewhat to the deep snow. It may be that the district will decide to have school there during the summer months and if so, Mr. Riggle will return and finish the term.

Mrs. A. C. Deeter writes from Bakersfield, California that she and Mr. Deeter are having a splendid time. They expect to spend month on the beach near Los Angeles. They like it so well at Bakersfield they may decide to stay there as Mr. Deeter has relatives there.

Last week Ira Gentry took his little daughter, Irena to Moscow for medical attention. From there they went to Spokane where Irena underwent an operation on the mastoid bone. The operation was entirely successful although she was in a very critical condition for a time.

Two powerful colored stevedores, who had some sort of falling out, engaged in unloading a vessel at a St. Louis dock. Uncomplimentary remarks and warnings of intended violence were exchanged whenever the two passed each other with their trucks. "You jest keep on pestication around wid me," declared one of the men, "an you is gwine to be able to settle a mighty big question for de scientific folks!" "What question dat?" asked the other. "Kin the dead speak."

Seven candidates for initiation into the local Woodmen lodge came from Park last Saturday, making the trip in a bobsled. They left at 8 o'clock in the morning and didn't get to Kendrick until 6:30 in the evening and had to change teams at Linden. The snow was so deep it made traveling difficult.

Jake Alber of Texas ridge was in Kendrick on business, Wednesday. His place is located about a mile east of the Buckhorn school house, which is quite a distance from Kendrick, but the good sleighing helped to shorten the trip. Mr. Alber said the deepest snow for the winter in his neighborhood was about 24 feet.

Now comes E. C. Babcock of Texas ridge and says his hens are laying more eggs than his neighbor's, Gus Birchmier. E. C. has 23 hens, most of them White Leghorns and the rest, just hens. Last month he gathered 19 dozen and 9 eggs. Gus got 26 dozen and 8 eggs from 35 White Leghorns, which isn't so bad, but since Fred Mielke and Mr. Babcock have entered the race he has dropped to third place.

George Riggin pleaded not guilty Monday morning before Judge Steele of the Latah county district court at Moscow, to a charge of having intoxicating liquor in his possession. The date of the trial will be set later.

He found plenty of feed but there was no indication that many birds were feeding there. He saw but one pheasant and only a few tracks of quail in the snow.

The "Bull Pine Orchestra" of Big Bear ridge will play for a dance to be held at Leland the evening of February 14. The dance will be given at the I. O. O. F. Hall. The same orchestra will give a dance at the Big Bear Ridge Hall, Friday evening, February 17.

N. F. Sturgis of Spokane, member of the Near East Relief work, was in Kendrick Thursday for the purpose of buying a carload of beans to be sent to the starving people of Europe.

Doc Heppler of Potlatch ridge lost three horses recently. He had turned them out to the straw stack and didn't pay any attention to them for a day or so. When he looked for them they were gone, so he presumed they had been stolen. A week or ten days later he found their carcasses floating in his pond. They had slid into the pond and couldn't get out on account of the ice.

CONTROL INTESTINAL WORMS

Best Way is to Change Ground Upon Poultry Run, Especially if Fowls are Crowded.

Changing the ground upon which poultry run is the best means of controlling intestinal worms in poultry, because the worms or eggs of the worm will stay over in the ground from one season to another, especially if the poultry is overcrowded.
