

LATAH COUNTY NEWS PARAGRAPHS

Clipped From The Columns of Neighboring Papers.

Troy News: Troy, one of the little towns of Idaho, has the distinction of having one of the best and biggest American Legion posts in the state. According to a recent letter from State Adjutant Albert of Boise, Troy stands eighth in membership and is credited with a gain in membership in 1921 of 175 per cent, leading all the state. A number of new applications are coming in, with more in sight, and the prospect bright for further honors for the Troy Post. An effort is being made to increase the membership of the Ladies Auxiliary.

Juliaetta Record: Announcement from Washington, D. C., states that R. F. Pepple has been nominated for postmaster at Juliaetta to succeed Charles Talbott, present incumbent. It is not known how soon Mr. Pepple will receive his commission but it is not thought that it will be very long, probably within a month or six weeks. However, it may be longer as Uncle Sam never gets in a hurry about such matters and they have to await their turn.

Genesee News: Ending last Saturday, 599 cattle in 117 lots have been tested in the Genesee district by Federal Veterinary Inspector A. R. Mahan, from which 27 reactors and seven suspected tubercular animals have been found. The suspects, only, will be tested in two or three months again. This is a little high as .08 per cent reached the last six months of 1921 in Idaho.

Good interest is manifested by stock owners and while the work is slow on account of the heavy snows it is expected better progress will be made from now on. If it thaws the work will be discontinued until the roads get good when this community will be finished.

Only two owners with small herds have indicated they do not desire the test so far and it is not expected that any opposition will be encountered because people have a good understanding of this work being conducted by the state and federal governments. People believing this testing should be made obligatory should let their representative in the state legislative body know their feelings in the matter so he will be ready next winter when he goes to Boise.

About 30 per cent of the children under 12 years of age with (consumption) tuberculosis contracted the disease from cattle. About 50 per cent under seven years and 85 per cent under two years contracted it from cattle. So users of milk milk products have a real personal interest in this matter.

This work can be speeded up if owners of small lots in districts where several owners live close together can get together on it, as it only requires about one minute two different times when the cattle are up and properly restrained. Only about 110 cattle were tested last week which brings the cost to the government up to a comparatively high figure. Under proper cooperation with corrals and chutes 50 to 75 cattle per hour can be handled, so all the cattle in Latah county could be handled in three weeks whereas it now takes about four months to cover it once.

It will require some three or four weeks more here if the roads remain frozen, to finish this work.

He was taken to Lewiston and arraigned before Commissioner Eugene O'Neill on a charge of selling intoxicating liquor. He was bound over to the federal court and his bond fixed at $1,000. Upon his failure to furnish bail, he was placed in the county jail.

Recently Duross served a jail sentence of six months for moonshining.

Thatcher for Auditor

Star-Mirror: Homer E. Estes, recently appointed postmaster at Moscow, resigned Tuesday as Latah county recorder and auditor and Harry A. Thatcher, chief deputy county recorder and auditor, was appointed by the county commissioners to succeed him. Mr. Estes submitted his resignation to take effect upon his receiving his commission as postmaster of Moscow.

Mr. Thatcher's appointment was made by the commissioners and Mr. Estes was instructed to draw up the order of appointment. The bond of the new auditor and recorder must be approved and he must take his oath of office before the commissioners.

Mr. Thatcher's application to succeed Mr. Estes was the only one filed. The application was accompanied by a petition signed by more than 400 and by endorsement from every member of the county central committee of the republican party. A letter from Robert Emmett of Genesee was also filed in which it was said that the petition of the Genesee country could have had three times the signatures. The Genesee section, according to the letter, is 99 per cent for Thatcher as auditor and recorder—Republicans and Democrats alike.

J. C. Hamil was a Genesee visitor the first of the week.

School Notes

A Literary Society has been organized in the high school. It is the plan of the organization to stage a program every two weeks and much enthusiasm is displayed over the work of the society. The following officers for the society were elected: Rex Pickering, president; Rita Lieth, vice-president; Artylee Hollada, secretary.

The large waste paper baskets which have been placed on each floor of the school building have added a great deal to the appearance of the building.

Mary Forest and Ovid Jarvis of the fifth grade have received 100 in spelling for the past two weeks.

There are several absences in the 3rd and 4th grades because of illness. Eloise Kelly who has been sick for some time is much better and expects to return to school next week.

The following have been neither tardy nor absent in the 3rd and 4th grades for the past month: Arlos Crocker, Helen Clem, Burten Forest, Billy Wilmot, Max Oldfield.

The 4th grade had a scene of Holland and are making Duten posters now.

The second grade is showing great enthusiasm regarding their "buttercup" spelling contest this week.

The B third grade are having Arithmetic speed tests this week.

Plans are being made to have a meeting of all the parents of school children at the school building on Friday afternoon, March 10th. Dr. C. W. Stone, professor of Public School Administration and supervision, of Washington State College, will give a talk on Silent Reading.

Miss Ada Erwin, of the Field Service faculty, University of Idaho, will speak on "Hot lunches for school children". Parents can't afford to miss this meeting as very important problems will be discussed.

Last November Monroe's Standardized Silent Reading Test was given to all the grades, in the local school, except the 1st and 2nd. The results of the test showed considerable room for improvement and the students as well as teachers have for the past 3 months been trying in many ways to improve their standing in this particular field.

Methods of improvement have been many and interesting. Some high school students have found that by practice periods of 40 minutes each day for a number of days that it has been possible to more than double their reading rate. In the lower grades, children read silently and then tell what they have read. The magazines and new library books are of great value or this work and a great impetus is given to out of school reading.

It has very naturally been found that the students who read most are the best students. Children have been encouraged to read magazines, books, etc., and the amount of reading actually done is proven by the number of books taken from the library each day. However we feel sure that the assistance of the home in providing for and urging students to read more would be of great benefit to the children themselves.

It is very difficult for the school to

May Form Athletic Club

Ernest Miller, who recently leased the Westover place in Bear creek canyon, was in town Tuesday promoting the idea of organizing an athletic club here. He agrees to take charge as instructor in physical culture, which would include boxing, wrestling, etc. A few years ago he had clubs in several of the larger towns of the Inland Empire. He is a wrestler of note and at one time was in the 125 pound lightweight championship class. He has wrestled for fifteen years in the United States and Canada. After talking the matter over with a number of the business men of the town he received sufficient encouragement to make the forming of the club look very promising.

Myrtle School Destroyed

Late Tuesday night the school house at Myrtle was burned to the ground. The supposition is that the fire started from a defective flue as flames were first seen breaking out on the roof. The contents of the building were saved. School is being held in an empty building until other arrangements can be made. The school was a training center for the Lewiston Normal, with Miss Millie Minger in charge.

Cameron Items

Quite a number of Cameron folks are ill with slight cases of influenza.

The program given by the Luther League last Friday, was well attended. Why shouldn't it be, when the "Bull Pine Orchestra" played. Everybody enjoyed their wonderful music. Come again boys.

Mrs. Ida Stoneburner returned to Cameron, Saturday, after spending several months in Spokane.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Wegner were visiting in Cameron last week.

Miss Woller was a dinner guest at the Herman Koepf home Sunday.

Martin Thomas was showing one of the new Peace Dollars here last week. They have been in circulation for some time but it took a long time for one to reach Kendrick. The general sentiment seems to be that the old dollar is a better coin even if the design on the new one did cost five or ten thousand dollars.

attempt to direct the out sidewalk of children, however, we find that it is a most potent influence in their school work. The child, who, at home, is surrounded by interesting books, good live magazines, and in addition, is given the necessary incentive to get him started reading, is invariably found to be the best student in school.

The second Silent Reading Test given last week showed some very interesting improvement. Many students made individual improvement far greater than is shown by the class score. In only a few cases did students fall below their first score.

A student's rate is determined by the average number of words read per minute. The comprehension is determined by the ability of the student to understand what he has read. The standard is the mark set by the author after giving the test to over 300,000 students.

Westling-Stevens

Deary Fowls Have Flu

Deary Press: Casey Bawn has lost a number of chickens lately from a malady so strongly resembling flu that he is convinced that that is what it is. At first the symptoms are like those of roup, but instead of living for a week or more, as is the case with roup, the birds expire within two days after being attacked. No method of treatment has been successful. Examination of the dead birds show their lungs to be congested with black pus, indicating burst bloodvessels. Mr. Bawn has isolated the diseased birds and hopes to save the most of his valuable flock. We have not heard of any other flocks being similarly affected.

Poultrymen should watch closely for any indication of the malady, which appears to be infectious.

Big Bear Ridge

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Wegner were visiting relatives on Potlatch ridge last week.

Robert Bowers of Avon spent last week at the Galloway Brothers' home.

Ingvald Aas of American ridge spent last week with relatives here.

T. H. Rognstad came up from Clarkston, Wash., Monday, for a visit at the home of his son, Arthur.

A meeting was held at the Lutheran church, Sunday evening for the purpose of reorganizing the Young Peoples' League.

Mrs. D. White and baby of Moscow are here visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Mathes.

Miss Mary Galloway was a Moscow visitor Saturday.

Leaves for Alaska

Buster Brown left, Wednesday, for Seattle to join his sister, Mrs. Jones. From there they will go to Alaska, leaving March 4. Buster will work there this spring and summer and will attend high school at Anchorage next fall and winter.

Pete Stump of Southwick was a Lewiston visitor Thursday afternoon.

TREATING GRAIN ERADICATES SMUT

Several Effective Ways to Treat Seed Grain

"Many growers have the mistaken idea that spring grain does not need to be treated for smut," says Chas. W. Hungerford, Plant Pathologist, University of Idaho, Moscow. "Unless he is sure that his seed came from a field in which there was no smut, every farmer should treat all oats, barley and wheat used for seed. Lime spent in treating grain is not wasted. Few other farm operations pay as large returns. The loss from oat smut, for example, in Idaho for a number of years has averaged about a dollar per acre. Formaldehyde treatment which will absolutely prevent this loss costs but three cents per acre. The loss from barley smut is about the same and for wheat smut is much greater. There is no easier way to increase your net returns. Why not stop these leaks in crop production?"

"Careful attention to certain details are necessary in order to secure the best results from seed treatment. FIRST—Clean seed thoroly to remove smut balls. If the seed is practically free from smut balls, it can safely be treated in the sack. If there are a noticeable number of smut balls present, it should be poured loose into the solutions and the smut balls skimmed off. SECOND—Sow as soon after treatment as possible, as grain which stands after treatment is liable to be injured unless thoroly dried. THIRD—Increase the rate or seeding at least one-fourth after treatment to allow for swelling of the seed. FOURTH—After treatment do not allow grain to come in contact with floors, machinery, or sacks which have not been disinfected with the disinfecting solution. FIFTH—Measure solutions carefully. Do not guess at the amounts. A little difference in the strength of the solution may mean the difference between success and failure.

"The following methods of seed treatment have been thoroly tested at the Idaho Experiment Station at Moscow and by various growers throughout the state and have proven successful.

37-40 one pint of formaldehyde (37-40 per cent) to 40 gallons of water. This equals one ounce to two and a half gallons, or four ounces to ten gallons. Use about one gallon of the solution for each bushel of wheat and a little over a gallon for each bushel of oats or barley. Wet all grain thoroly, either by sprinkling; by pouring loose into the solution or by soaking ten minutes in gunny sacks filled one-third full. If treated loose, cover with disinfected sacks or canvas for two hours. Sacked grain should be drained and let lie spread out in the sack until sown. Sow as soon as possible.

A new and promising method for treating oats with concentrated formaldehyde has been used successfully for the last three years at the Idaho Experiment Station.

Use one part of formaldehyde in ten parts of water. Spread the grain out on a clean floor, canvas or wagon box. As the grain is shoveled from one pile to another, each shovelful is sprayed with a small quart hand sprayer held close to the grain. Three movements of the hand for each shovelful gives about the right amount. Use in the proportion of one quart of the solution to five bushels of oats. Cover grain with sacks or canvas which have been sprayed with the solution. Leave covered four hours.

PRECAUTION: Formaldehyde vapor acts as an irritant upon the nose and eyes, therefore:

1. Hold the sprayer close to the grain.
2. Shovel the seed onto the vapor.
3. Work from one side of the pile.

DOULTRY NOTES

Any margin over market prices received for breeding stock is pure profit, and the demand, especially for hatching eggs, comes at a time when the egg baskets are easily filled.

Be on the lookout for dampness in the poultry houses. Where freezing is common, close-built houses are very apt to show condensation of moisture on ceiling and walls. Too large a number of birds in a house will also cause this.

In either hen-hatched or incubator-hatched flocks, there are likely to be some backward, slow-growing, slow-feathering chicks. If the hatch is in the brooder, separate these backward chicks, and give them to a hen, or put them with a younger hatch. A turkey hen that has no family is an ideal mother for them.

MILK HELPS YOUNG ANIMALS

Skim Milk and Other Creamery By-Products Are Useful Feeds for Pigs and Calves.

While whole milk is nature's balanced food and is valuable for young animals, skim milk and other creamery by-products, such as buttermilk and whey, are also useful feeds, say specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture. Skim milk is fed to young pigs in the proportion of about three pounds to one of concentrates, such as cornmeal or shorts. Buttermilk, which has not been diluted too much with water, has nearly the same feeding value as skim milk. It is a better food for swine than for calves because it is apt to cause digestive disturbances when fed to the latter, unless considerable care is used. Whey is used almost exclusively in feeding swine. It is about two-thirds as valuable as skim milk as a food. Accordingly from ten to twelve pounds of whey are equivalent to one pound of grain. Sweet skim milk, when supplemented with other feed such as corn meal or wheat shorts, is very good for young calves. If beef calves are to be fed skim milk, they should be fed in practically the same manner as dairy calves.

A Judicious Inquiry

A well known traveling man who visits the drug trade, says he has often heard druggists ask a customer, who wished to buy a cough medicine, whether it was for a child or an adult and if for a child, they almost invariably recommended Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. The reason for this is that they know there is no danger from it and that it always cures. There is not the least danger in giving it and for colds, croup and whooping cough it is unsurpassed.

YOUR "PEAK LOAD"

The brick mason works about two hundred days of the year but his family eats 365. The stationary fireman draws pay for every working day in the year. The farmer and the school teacher are profitably employed a bare eight months of the year but living expenses continue for the other four months. Idle horses, machinery and farm land investment must be ready for the farmers "peak load" which comes at harvest time. The "peak load" of the gas company comes for an hour at each meal time, but the investment in equipment and man power must be maintained for the other twenty-one hours. The "peak load" for the electric light company comes in the early evening, when in three hours more current is often demanded than during the remaining twenty-one hours of the day, but the plant must be ready to serve when the public demands, Sundays included, regardless of the capital investment that remains while the equipment is loafing. Street car service is exacted "in chunks" but the transportation company must furnish it because it is a public service corporation, with an eye single to the needs of the community and the demands of patrons. Brick laying and telephone service cannot be done at odd spells against a busy season; street car travel does not yield to cold storage. The "peak load" is the great big problem of every utility manager. If the demand were comparatively constant for gas, electric, telephone or carrying service throughout the year, rates could be reduced tremendously to the mutual satisfaction and profit of operators and customers.—The Manufacturer.

People don't mind high taxes when they are making money, but when the money-making stops and high taxes continue, there is much said about it.

Occasionally the old home paper prints a startling piece of news. One in Missouri reports that "J. B. Houston, of Bloomfield, Mo., who died Sunday, was buried Monday, returned to his home Tuesday."

Potlatch, Idaho is talking cooperative creamery. Recently fifty high grade Holstein heifer calves were shipped there from Tlamook, Oregon.

(Concluded from first page)

4. Have a circulation of air where grain is being treated.

Advantage of the New Method: It does not wet the seed and therefore the seed does not swell. Oats may be treated any time before planting.

Bluestone treatment, for wheat only. Add one pound of bluestone (coper sulphate) (blue vitriol) and one pound of salt to each five gallons of water. Suspend the bluestone in a small cheesecloth bag in the water until it is dissolved. Immerse wheat in the solution until every kernel is thoroly wet. Then dip seed at once in a lime bath made by slaking one pound of lime and making up to ten gallons by adding water. Dry and sow "as soon as possible. This lime bath helps to prevent seed injury.

The above treatments are not effective for the loose smut of wheat or the loose smut of barley. Special methods are required for their control.

BIG VALUE OF COVER CROPS

Especially Valuable to Small Gardeners and Trucksters Who Cannot Obtain Manure.

Cover crops are of especial value to small gardeners and trucksters, who often find it both difficult and expensive to obtain stable manure. They add the humus which is so necessary to maintain a good physical condition of the soil. Wherever there is a vacant place in the garden a few seeds of rye, vetch, clover, etc., may be sown and raked in. If a suitable rotation of crops is followed all parts of the garden may be covered with a green manure crop once every two or three years.

CHAPTER XII.—Webster, after looking it over decides to put his whole fortune into the mine. He sends Billy Geary to the United States to purchase the necessary equipment, advising him to marry Dolores in Buenaventura before he leaves. Knowing that unless Rucy can overthrow Sarros his mine will be confiscated, Webster agrees to finance the venture. Returning to Buenaventura, he is astonished to find Dolores still there and Geary on his way to the United States.

CHAPTER XIII.—Dolores tells Webster that Billy Geary had asked her to marry him and that she had refused. Amazed, but entirely misunderstanding the situation, he accepts the explanation. He explains to Dolores how her brother has laid his plans for the overthrow of Sarros. Webster and Ricardo have a final understanding.

It was impossible, however, for Webster long to remain impervious to the note of ridiculousness underlying the forthcoming tragic events. Here was a little 2x4 poverty-stricken hotbed of ignorance and intrigue calling itself a republic, a little stretch of country no larger than a couple of big western counties, about to indulge in the national pastime of civil war and unable to do it except by grace of an humble citizen of a sister republic!

Five or six thousand ignorant, ill-equipped, ill-drilled semi-brigands calling themselves soldiers, entrusted with the task of enabling one of their number to ride, horse and dog, over 1,000,000 people!

How farcical! No wonder Ricardo, with his northern viewpoint, approached his patriotic task with gravity, almost with contempt. And when Webster recalled that the about-to-be-born provisional government had casually borrowed from him the sum of forty thousand dollars in order to turn the trick—borrowing it, forsooth, in much the same spirit as a commuter boarding his train without the necessary fare hails a neighbor and borrows ten cents—and he chuckled as in fancy he heard himself telling the story to Neddy Jerome and being branded a liar for his pains.

"Well, I've had one comfort ever since I first saw that girl," he reflected philosophically. "While I've never been so unhappy in all my life before, or had to tear my soul out by the roots so often, things have been coming my way so fast from other directions that I haven't had much opportunity to dwell on the matter. And for these compensating offsets, good Lord, I thank Thee."

He was John Stuart Webster again when Dolores saw him next; during the succeeding days his mood of cheerfulness and devil-may-care indifference never left him. And throughout that period of marking time Dolores was much in his society, a condition which he told himself was not to his liking but which, nevertheless, he could not obviate without seeming indifferent to her happiness. And to permit his friend's fiancée to languish in loneliness and heart-break did not appear to John Stuart Webster as the part of a true friend or a courtly gentleman—and he remembered that she had once called him that.

They rode together in the cool of the morning; they drove together on the Malcom in the cool of the evening; accompanied by Don Juan Cafetero and a grinning Sobrantean, they went shark fishing in Leber's launch; they played dominoes together; they discussed, throughout the long, lazy, quiet afternoons, when the remainder of their world retired for the siesta, books, art, men, women, and things.

And not once, throughout two weeks of camaraderie, did the heart-racked Webster forget for a single instant that he was the new friend, destined to become the old friend; never, to the girl's watchful eyes, did he betray the slightest disposition to establish their friendly relations on a closer basis.

Thus did the arrival of The Day find them. Toward sunset they rode out together along the bay shore and noted far out to sea the smear of smoke that marked the approach of La Estrellita—on schedule time.

"You will go aboard her tonight," Webster said very quietly to Dolores. "And you?"

"I shall go aboard with you. I have arranged with Don Juan for him to stay ashore and to come out in Leber's launch with the first reliable news of the conflict. If Ricardo wins the city, he wins the revolution, and you and I will then go ashore—to dine with him in the palace. If he loses the city, he loses the revolution, and we will both do well to remain aboard La Estrellita."

"And in that event, what will become of my brother?"

"I do not know; I forgot to ask him, but if he survives, I imagine he'll have sense enough to know he's whipped and will retreat on San Bruno, fighting a rear guard action, embark aboard the steamer that brought his men there, and escape."

"I'm worried about Mother Jenks."

"I have asked Mother Jenks to dine with us at 7:30 this evening, and have ordered a carriage to call for her. When she comes I'll tell her everything; then, if she wishes to stay ashore, let her. She's been through more than one such fracas and doesn't mind them at all, I dare say."

And in this Webster was right. Mother Jenks listened in profound silence, nodding her approval, as Webster related to her the story of the advent in the country of Ricardo Rucy and his plans, but without revealing the identity of Andrew Bowers.

At the conclusion of his recital the old publican merely said: "Gor' bl' me!"

After a silence she added: "My sainted 'Enery used to s'y the proper hods for a white man in a bally row o' this nature was 40 to 1. Gor, but how my sainted 'Enery would henjoy bein' ere this night to 'eip with the guns." She sighed.

"How about a little bottle of wine to drink peace to your sainted Henry and luck to The Cause?" Webster suggested.

"That's wot I calls talkin'," Mother Jenks responded promptly, and Webster, gazing reflectively at the old lady's beard, wondered why she had not been born a man.

Dolores, fearful for her benefactor's safety, urged Mother Jenks to accompany them out aboard La Estrellita, but the old dame indignantly refused, and when pressed for a reason gave it with the utmost frankness: "They'll be tykin' Sarros, an' when they tyke 'im they'll back him ag'in the same wall he backed my sainted 'Enery and your father against, my dear. I've a notion that your father's son'll let Mrs. Col. 'Enery Jenks come to the party."

At 10 o'clock Webster accompanied Mother Jenks home in the carriage, which he dismissed at El Buen Amigo—with instructions to return to the hotel while he continued afoot down the Calle San Rosario to the bay, where Leber's huge corrugated iron warehouse loomed darkly above high water mark. He slipped along in the deep shadow of the warehouse wall and out on the end of the little dock, where he satisfied himself that Leber's launch was at its moorings; then he went back to the warehouse and whistled softly, whereupon a man crawled out from under the structure and approached him. It was Don Juan Cafetero.

"They're all inside," he whispered and laid finger on lip. "They got in but an hour ago, an' devil a sowl the wiser save meself."

"Thank you, John. Now that I know the coast is clear and the launch ready, I'll go back to the hotel for Miss Rucy."

"Very well, sor," Don Juan replied, and crawled back under the warehouse.

Half an hour later the sound of hoof beats warned him of the approach of Webster and Dolores in a carriage, and he came forth, loaded in the launch such baggage as they had been enabled to bring, and held the gunwale of the boat while his passengers stepped aboard.

About a half a mile off shore Webster throttled down the motor until the launch barely made steerage way. "It would never do to go aboard the steamer before the fracas started ashore," he explained to Dolores. "That would indicate a guilty knowledge of coming events, and in the event of disaster to the rebel arm it is just possible Senor Sarros might haul pull enough, if he hears of our flight six hours in advance of hostilities, to take us off the steamer and ask us to explain. So we'll just cruise slowly around and listen; the attack will come just before dawn; then shortly thereafter we can scurry out to the steamer and be welcomed aboard for the sake of the news we bring."

She did not answer, and Webster knew her thoughts were out where the arc lights on the outskirts of Buenaventura met the open country—out where the brother she could scarcely remember and whom, until a month previous, she had believed dead, would shortly muster his not too numerous followers.

In the darkness Webster could hear the click of her beads as she prayed; on the turtle deck forward Don Juan Cafetero sprawled, thinking perchance of his unlovely past and wondering what effect the events shortly to transpire ashore would have on his future. He wished Webster would relent and offer him a drink some time within the next twenty-four hours. In times of excitement like the present a man needs a drop to brace him up.

Five times the launch slipped lazily down the harbor along the straggling two mile water front; five times it loafed back. The moon, which was in the first quarter, sank. Then to Webster's alert ear there floated across the still waters the sound of a gentle purring—the music of an auto-truck. He set the launch in toward Leber's little dock, and presently they saw the door of Leber's warehouse open. Men with lanterns streamed forth, lighting the way for others who bore between them heavy burdens.

"They're emplacing the machine guns in the motor-truck," he whispered to Dolores. "We will not have to wait long now. It's nearly 4 o'clock."

Again they backed out into the bay until they could see far out over the sleeping city to the hills beyond in the west. Presently along the side of those hills the headlight of a locomotive crept, dropping swiftly down grade until it disappeared in the lowlands.

A half hour passed; then to the south of the city a rocket flared skyward; almost instantly another flared from the west, followed presently by a murmur, scarcely audible, as of a muffled snare drum, punctuated presently by a louder, sharper, insistent puck-puck-puck that had Webster but know it was the bark of a Maxim-Vickers rapid-fire gun throwing a stream of shells into the cantonments of the government troops on the fringe of the city.

Webster's pulse quickened. "There goes the tillery to the south, sor," Don Juan called, and even as he spoke, a shell burst gloriously over the government palace, the white walls of which were already looming over the remainder of the city, now faintly visible in the approaching dawn.

"That was to awaken our friend, Sarros," Webster cried. "I'll bet a buffalo nickel that woke the old horse thief up. There's another—and another."

The uproar swelled, the noise gradually drifting around the city from west to south, forming, seemingly, a semicircle of sound. "The government troops are up and doing now," Webster observed, and speeded up his motor. "I think it high time we played the part of frightened refugees. Mouser bullets kill at three miles. Some strays may drop out here in the bay."

He speeded the launch toward La Estrellita, and as the craft scraped in alongside the great steamer's companion landing, her skipper ran down the ladder to greet them and inquire eagerly of the trend of events ashore.

"We left in a hurry the instant it started," Webster explained. "As Americans, we didn't figure we had any interest in that scrap, either way." He handed Dolores out on the landing stage, tossed their baggage after her and followed; Don Juan took the wheel, and the launch slid out and left them there.

At the head of the companion ladder Webster paused and turned for another look at Buenaventura. To the west three great fires now threw a lurid light skyward, mocking an equally lurid light to the east, that marked the approach of daylight. He smiled. "Those are the cantonment barracks burning," he whispered to Dolores. "Ricardo is keeping his word. He's driving the rats back into their own holes."

The weeks of clean living, of abstention from his wonted daily alcoholic ration, had inspired in Don Juan Cafetero a revival of his all but defunct interest in life; conversely, in these stirring times, he was sensible of an equally acute interest in Sobrantean politics, for he was Irish; and flabby indeed is that son of the Green Little Isle who, wherever he may be, declines to take a hand in any public argument. For the love of politics, like the love of home, is never dead in the Irish.

It is instinct with them—the heritage, perhaps, of centuries of oppression and suppression, which nurtures rather than stifles the yearning for place and power. Now as Don Juan turned Leber's launch shoreward and kicked the motor wide open, he, too, deserted against the dawn the glare of the burning cantonments west of the city, and at the sight his pulse beat high with the lust of battle, the longing to be in at the death in this struggle, where the hopes and aspirations of those he loved were at stake.

Two months previously a revolution would have been a matter of extreme indifference to Don Juan; he would have reflected that it was merely the outs trying to get in, and that if they succeeded, the sole benefit to the general public would be the privilege of paying the bill. Today, however, in the knowledge that he had an opportunity to fight beside white men and perchance even up some old scores with the Guardia Civil, it occurred suddenly to Don Juan that it would be a brave and virtuous act to cast his lot with the Rucy forces. He was a being reorganized and rebuilt, and it behooved him to do something to demonstrate his manhood.

Don Juan knew, of course, that should the rebels lose and he be captured, he would be executed; yet this contingency seemed a far-fetched one, in view of the fact that he had John Stuart Webster at his back, ready to finance his escape from the city. Also Don Juan had had an opportunity, in the hills above San Miguel de Padua, for a critical study of Ricardo Rucy and had come to the conclusion that at last a real man had come to liberate Sobrante; further, Don Juan had had ocular evidence that John Stuart Webster was connected with the revolution, for had he not smuggled Rucy into the country? It was something to be the right-hand man of the president of a rich little country like Sobrante; it was also something to be as close to that right-hand man as Don Juan was to his master, Webster; consequently self-interest and his sporting code whispered to Don Juan that it behooved him to demonstrate his loyalty with every means at his command, even into his heart's blood.

"Who knows," he cogitated as the launch bore him swiftly shoreward, "but what I'll acquit meself with honor and get a fine job under the new administration? 'Tis the master's fight, I'm thinkin'; then, be the same token, 'tis John Joseph Cafferty's, win, lose or draw, an' may the devil damn me if I fall him after what he's done for me. Sure, if General Rucy wins a crook av the master's finger will make me jefe politico. An' if he does—hoo-roo! Hoo-ray!"

With his imagination still running riot, Don Juan made the launch fast to the little dock, down which he ran straight for the warehouse, where the Rucy mercenaries were still congregated, busily wiping the factory grease from the weapons which had just been distributed to them from the packing cases. A sharp voice halted him, he paused, panting, to find himself looking down the long blue barrel of a service pistol.

"Who are you, and what are you doing here?" the man behind the weapon demanded brusquely.

"I'm Private John J. Cafferty, the latest recruit to the Rucy army," Don Juan answered composedly. "Who did ye think I was? Private secret'ry to that devil Sarros? Man, dear, lower that gun av yours, for God knows I'm nervous enough as it is. Hase ye something' ye could give me to fight wit' avic'?"

FAIR MARKET STOCK

KEEP PRODUCERS INFORMED

Farmers Advised to Study Market Reports in and Out of Season to Keep Posted.

(Prepared by the U. S. Department of Agriculture.)

How can the farmer and stock raiser turn the live stock reports of the bureau of markets, United States Department of Agriculture, into dollars is frequently asked.

The answer is for the farmer to get so much information out of the reports that he can conduct his breeding, feeding and marketing operations a little more intelligently in the future, and therefore more profitably than in the past.

Market reports are history, and the chief value of history is the basis which it provides on which to forecast the future. In other words, what has happened in the past will probably occur again under the same or similar circumstances.

Small benefit is generally derived from reading a single market report, or one covering a short period of time. Markets move in cycles, and the man who would keep informed must follow them diligently in season and out. This is a matter of particular importance to the stockman, because his business is, to an unusual degree, a long-time speculation. He must prepare now and lay his plans today in light of what he thinks the market will be anywhere from six months to two years hence. But how will the department's reports assist him in doing this?

First of all, he should take into account potential supplies of the particular class of live stock in which he is interested. Assume that cattle is his line. The monthly report, Stock at Stockyards, gives the number of cattle and calves marketed from month to month through central markets. If such movements are unusually heavy for any considerable time, it may indicate a cattle shortage during the next year or two, and a shortage of any commodity usually means higher prices.

This same report also shows the number of cattle and calves that went back to the country as stockers and feeders. If such movements were exceptionally light, it would help to confirm the belief that a comparative shortage in cattle was impending. On the other hand, heavy stocker and feeder shipments would go a long way toward neutralizing the importance of the heavy receipts, for the stockman would know that most of these cattle going back to the country must be returned to market during the next few weeks or months and enter consumption channels.

Having established in this fashion a broad basis for his operations, let us assume the stockman is feeding a lot of steers for the market. He must now give market reports more careful and persistent attention than before. It is quite important that he know what kind of cattle are in best demand on the principal markets. If there is a steady inquiry for heavy finished cattle, and that kind are selling at a premium over lighter weights, it will probably pay him to "feed his cattle out," unless the cost of feed is exceptionally high.

If, however, consumptive demand seems to be drifting steadily toward lighter retail cuts of meat, or because of general business depression or some other cause, is centering chiefly on the lower and cheaper grades, he may find it more profitable to market his cattle at an earlier age and before they have attained great weight.

Abundant information along this line will be found both in the live stock market reports and the reports dealing with meat-trade conditions in the large consuming centers.

In this connection the stockman will also be interested in keeping advised as to whether the slaughter of meat is increasing or decreasing and whether the movement applies equally to all classes of meat, or whether slaughter of beef is decreasing while that of some other class is increasing. This information is obtainable from the statistical report covering the live stock and meat situation, which is based on the federal meat-inspection reports of the bureau of animal industry and is also published monthly by the bureau of markets.
