Clipped From The Columns of Neighboring Papers.

Juliaetta Record: F. W. Dustan, was up from Lewiston the first of the week looking after matters pertaining to the Juliaetta cannery. Mr. Dustan was endeavoring to ascertain as near as possible about the amount of acreage of tomatoes that will be grown in this vicinity this season so as to get an idea of the supply that will be available for the cannery and to determine whether to put out a supply of plants for the growers. Lloyd Anderson is looking after the matter and those interested should communicate with him.

Star-Mirror: The Latah county spelling contest, held at the high school building Saturday, and conducted by Miss Lillian Skattaboe, attracted contestants from almost every school district in the county. Failure to have representatives, on the part of a few districts, was due to the road conditions, making it impossible for the young people to reach Moscow. The contest was in every respect a success, district contests having been held in each district in the county to select representatives for the county contest. There were two sections, one including the third, fourth and fifth grades and the other the sixth, seventh and eighth grades. Three prizes were given for each section. The first prize was $5, second $3 and third $2.

The prize winners in section one were Everett Horton, Potlatch public schools, first; Charles Swartz, Avon, second; Edna Aas, Deary, third. Section two—Flora Davis, Deary, first; Mabel Trotter, Potlatch, second; John Hayden, Linville, third.

Deary Press: Last Saturday's election, called for the purpose of choosing a successor to K. L. Karlson, who had resigned as highway commissioner, brought a powerful crowd to town. At a meeting immediately preceding the election, which was participated in by farmers and townspeople alike, the names of J. A. Harsh, Knute Lathrop and A. M. Johnson were placed in nomination. When the votes were counted it was found that Mr. Lathrop had received 86 of the 162 votes cast, Mr. Harsh 47, Mr. Johnson 28 and C. M. Garvey 1. Mr. Lathrop was therefore declared elected.

Mr. Lathrop is a progressive farmer of the Big Bear Ridge section and is in every way qualified for the position for which he was chosen.

There seems to be a strong sentiment in favor of building the state road through this district this season. It is argued that with the main trunk road through the district located and opened for travel, the building of laterals or feeders could be undertaken with greater assurance of permanent and satisfactory results. It would hardly be practicable for the district to undertake, without state aid, to build and surface the state road, but the citizens who have discussed the matter in our hearing believe it should be located, graded and opened for travel this season. Such an undertaking would necessitate the sale of another block of bonds. This year's taxes will raise $12,718.42—enough for ordinary repair work, changes, etc., but not for any extensive road building program.

Troy News: The Stockholders of the Idaho Fire Brick Company held their annual meeting in the Odd Fellows' hall on Tuesday of this week. The Auditor's report showed the books to be in excellent condition and that they correctly reflect the financial condition and progress. It shows the sales of 1921 to be a little better than 50 per cent of the average sale of the four preceding years and that the plant has operated at a profit.

BASEBALL FANS MET WEDNESDAY

Decided to Give a Benefit
Dance, Friday, March 31

At an enthusiastic baseball meeting held Wednesday night at the town hall, plans were outlined for the 1922 season. The election of manager was more or less a matter of form as A. E. Wilcox has held that honored position for so many years he has become a fixture.

A committee from the American Legion, consisting of Tom Long, George Carlson and Walter Thomas, was selected to take charge of a baseball benefit dance. They immediately outlined plans and fixed the date for the dance for Friday night, March 31. The dance will take place at the Fraternal Temple, after the wrestling match at the Grand Theatre.

It is understood that all expenses involved in putting on the dance will be donated by the business men of the town, so that the baseball treasury will no doubt be substantially replenished by the returns from the dance. There is no deficit from last year's expenses, as that is contrary to Manager Wilcox's methods of conducting the team, so all money derived will be used for this season's expenses.

Prospects look bright for a good ball team, many of the old players from last year's team are here and some of the younger high school players are going to make a hard run for a place on the team. Several new men are also going to try out for the team.

The matter of selecting a captain was left for a later date when the players will elect a man.

Death of Barney Riley

Barney Riley, one of the oldest pioneers of the Potlatch, died at his home last Friday morning. Old age and influenza were the contributing causes of his death, which was not unexpected as his health had been failing all winter.

Barney Riley was born in Tuscarora, Ohio, February 2, 1845. He died at the age of 77 years. About forty years ago he came west and settled in Whitman county, near Pullman. After a few years' residence on a farm there he moved to Texas ridge near Kendrick, where he owned a valuable farm. He married Amelia Darr of Texas ridge some years after taking up his residence in this community. To this union 10 children were born.

Funeral services were held at the Riley home north of Kendrick, Rev. Pickering having charge of the services. A short service was also held at the Kendrick cemetery, where the body was interred.

Linden News

(Too late for last week)
Miss Hammond spent Thursday evening at Whistler's.

The Literary, gotten up by the men, was enjoyed by all.

George Garner family were Sunday guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. McPhee.

Elmer Shingler left Friday, for Outlook, Wash., where he has employment.

Lou Alexander and family spent Sunday at Y. Wines.

Mrs. Vaughan was a caller at the Fry home Sunday afternoon.

All the sick folks seem to be better.

stock were bought, par value $100 each, thus reducing the investment from $66,029.17 to $52,562.50. Prospects for the present year are brighter than they were at this time last year.

The following officers were elected: C. V. Johnson, president, G. C. Hoyt, vice-president, J. B. Watson, general manager, secretary and treasurer. Directors for the year are W. M. Duthie, Chas. Amos and G. M. Saad.

Lost Blackhawk Colors Are Found

The long lost colors of the Blackhawk (Eighty-sixth) division have been found. The colors disappeared mysteriously shortly after the arrival of the division in France in 1918. They were found wrapped in a soldier's blouse, the details of the losing and finding being known to only the military officialdom. They were taken by Capt. Roy G. Swidell, former divisional adjutant, and turned over to Col. A. A. Sprague as custodian. The colors are to occupy a place of honor at the coming reunion of the Eighty-sixth division.

LEGION TO STAGE WRESTLING MATCH

Miller-McTarnahan to Meet
Here Next Friday.

The American Legion will stage a big wrestling match here Friday night, March 31, between J. W. McTarnahan of Orofino and Ernest Miller of Kendrick. These are the two fastest lightweight wrestlers in the northwest, so the match promises to be full of interest.

Miller wrestled for fifteen years and at one time held the championship in his class. He has a thorough knowledge of the game and is a hard man to handle. McTarnahan has demonstrated in a number of matches held in Orofino that except for Miller there is no one in this section of his weight that is in the same class with him.

Some time ago these two men put on at Orofino, one of the best matches ever seen in that section. They wrestled for two hours and finally McTarnahan was given a decision on the grounds that Miller used the toe hold, which is barred in Idaho.

Both men are training hard for the match, which is expected to be the fastest exhibition ever held here. The Grand Theatre will be used for the occasion.

Two good preliminaries have been arranged and will no doubt prove an interesting feature of the big event. The match will start promptly at 8 o'clock so that those who wish to attend the baseball benefit dance afterwards may do so.

Big Bear Ridge

The Dear Club will give the Literary program at the Community Hall, Saturday evening, March 25th, beginning promptly at 7:30 o'clock.

There is now no sickness in our community.

Evan Lien returned home Tuesday, having visited relatives in Spokane.

Albert Nelson accompanied by his cousin, Boyer Nelson of Little Bear Ridge, departed for Kellogg, Idaho, Tuesday, to remain indefinitely.

The Girls' Sewing Club and a number of guests were entertained by Miss Helen Slind and Mrs. Hartwick Nelson, Tuesday afternoon.

Miss Opal Huffman spent last week in Lewiston.

The Lutheran Ladies' Aid was entertained by Mrs. Ed Lien Monday afternoon.

Knute Lathrop was elected highway commissioner to succeed K. L. Karlson, in the Deary Highway District.

Potlatch Lumber company has given Boy Scouts of Whitman and Latah counties the exclusive use of an ideal camping ground at Grizzly, near Harvard, in the St. Joe national forest. Twenty troops will use the camp during the coming summer.

FARMERS HOLDING SQUIRREL MEETINGS

Under the Direction of Latah
County Earm Bureau

A series of meetings is being held by County Agent O. S. Fletcher to help start the 1922 campaign against the ground squirrel in Latah County. At these meetings the mixing of poisoned bait will be demonstrated, and poisoned bait prepared for all who bring their oats; a community poisoning day will be set; the Idaho rodent control law will be discussed and arrangements made to put it into effect in those communities desiring this; and poisoning supplies that have been ordered and paid for in the various communities will be distributed. Those farmers who did not order supplies in advance will be given an opportunity to buy supplies at a price slightly higher than that paid by those who ordered and paid in advance. Arrangements will be completed to carry on concerted attacks against the squirrels in the various communities.

Meetings scheduled for the southeastern part of the county are as follows:

Kendrick, Monday, March 27, 2 p. m.

Juliaetta, Tuesday, March 28, 9:30 a. m.

Fix Ridge, Tuesday, March 28, 2 p. m.

Driscoll Ridge, Wednesday, March 29, 2 p. m.

Big Meadow (North Troy) Wednesday, March 29, 7:30 p. m.

American Ridge, Thursday, March 30, 2 p. m.

Big Bear Ridge, Thursday, March 30, 2 p. m.

County Agent Fletcher will be present at all the meetings excepting those held on Big Bear and American Ridges. The meetings on Big Bear Ridge will be in charge of K. D. Ingle, community chairman and R. A. Hughes, leader of the pest control project, and the meeting on American Ridge will be in charge of Frank Benscoter, who is community and county leader of the pest control project.

Southwick News

Miss Moneching, county Red Cross nurse, spent the week at Southwick. She examined 75 school children while here.

The funeral services of Mrs. John Ritchel were held at the Methodist church, Wednesday, after which the remains were laid to rest in the Cameron cemetery.

Donald Elvy is reported on the sick list.

Mr. and Mrs. Daughtry are out again after quite a spell of sickness.

James Smith is slowly improving after a siege of pneumonia.

The Bill Henderson family are reported on the sick list.

HIGH SCHOOL TO HOLD CARNIVAL

Also Animal Show and Other Features in Connection.

A big carnival and animal show will be featured at the high school auditorium tonight (Friday) to which everyone in the community is cordially invited. The teachers and pupils have been making great preparations for this event and those who attend will get their money's worth no matter what it costs them. One of the unusual features is that there will be no admission charge. After you get there if you wish to spend anything you may do so, but it won't be compulsory. Of course the ladies are expected to bring a pie, which will admit them without question. The pies will later be sold, and some of them used to put on the pie eating contest—one of the events.

There will be a free movie, fish pond, animal show, fortune teller, swimming match, freaks of nature, baby show and other attractions. If you get dry there will be plenty of "sunshine". Those who are hungry may get hot dogs, cake, coffee, popcorn and candy.

All proceeds derived above the cost of putting on the carnival will be turned into the athletic fund, there being a small deficit from the basket ball season.

From Rev. H. W. Mort

The following "expurgated" paragraphs were taken from a personal letter written by Rev. Howard W. Mort to me editor. While the letter was not written for publication we are sure it will prove of interest to the host of friends of the Mort family in this locality, so we are taking the liberty of publishing it.

"We are learning to like Oakesdale and particularly the people. You can hardly refrain from liking folks that burst in upon you about 40 strong for an evening of fun and loaded down with all kinds of good things to eat which they leave for us to devour at our leisure. And then a week ago one dear brother left us part of a hog and yesterday another drove up with two sacks of spuds. And so it goes and you kind of get to feeling the world could be a lot worse after all.

"As to my work I do not feel that we have had a fair shake as yet because of the extremely long winter and an epidemic of "Flu" from which we are just recovering. We haven't seen the ground since the middle of December and there were a few nights when the mercury disappeared somewhere below the 30 mark after passing zero with nary a hesitation. We didn't know this until the worst was past or I for one, would surely have frozen to death. With promises of spring in the air now, however, we are making great plans for the summer. I have charge of the town troop of Boy Scouts which keeps me busy and interested and will this summer even more and under our supervision the League is to stage a party to raise funds to establish a tennis court, croquet grounds and Volley Ball court on the church property around the parsonage.

"We do miss Kendrick even yet and I take "time out" real often to gaze at the panorama of Kendrick on our wall and sort of wish I could be there again, especially for the spring months when things are so beautiful in the little canyon. I'd like to stroll into the Gazette shop again and upset a type box or so et al. Who knows, maybe some day I may do that very thing.

"Am always glad to get the weekly scandal which usually reaches me before the Oakesdale paper does, strange but true. I may be going thru to Lewiston some day this spring and perhaps will see you and some of the natives then while Larry holds the train."

IDAHO'S BONDED DEBT $54,600,000

Taken From Figures of The State Accountant.

The total bonded indebtedness of the State of Idaho and all its political subdivisions is $54,607,663.54, or approximately 11 per cent of $495,630,989.51, the 1921 valuation of the state. These figures were issued in a report given out Saturday by B. E. Hyatt, director of the bureau of public accounts of the department of finance.

This is a dent of $126.41 for each and every person in the state, based on the 1920 census of 431,960 souls. If the total bonded indebtedness were converted into dollar bills and laid end to end they would make a continuous line slightly more than 6,000 miles in length; more than twice the distance from New York to England, three-fourths of the earth's diameter and just about equal to twice across the United States.

If this amount of money was converted into silver dollars piled on top of one another, the column would reach approximately 27 miles high or more than three times the world's altitude record for airplanes. Melted and cast into bars it would require 85 freight cars each carrying 40,000 pounds to move the load, says the Idaho Statesman.

The state's share of the debt is $5,919,000 and the remainder is divided between the various counties, cities, villages and taxing districts as follows:

State	$ 5,919,000.00
Counties	9,099,939.75
School districts	11,184,245.51
Cities and villages	13,877,211.91
Highway districts	9,261,500.00
Irrigation districts	4,345,100.00
Drainage districts	920,666.47
Total	$54,607,663.54

The report states that the figures were taken from the state auditor's records. In many cases, however, subdivisions of the state have failed to make an adequate report and the information furnished by the county auditor's reports and by state examiners' reports has been used.

School Notes

The basket ball letters for the season were presented by the coach, Mr. Carlisle, to the following boys: Egnaz Flaig, captain; Claude Stanton, Wayne Herres, Noria Callison and George Broeke.

Dorothy Erickson of the eighth grade and Howard Dammarell of the fourth grade represented the Kendrick school in the annual Spelling Contest held at Moscow last Saturday. Although neither won, they made a very creditable showing. Howard taking fourth place and Dorothy fifth.

The most interesting topic of the day, in high school, is that of the Carnival which is to be given Friday evening. A great deal of enthusiasm is being created among the students, and they are depending on the strong support of the town people which will be very necessary in order to make it a success.

The flags, which were given to the school by the American Legion, have been put up in all of the grade rooms and one in the high school assembly. This gift from the Legion is very much appreciated by the students and faculty of the Kendrick school.

William Holt, Burneda Cummings, Opal Reece and Hazel Reid are in the lead in the health crusade work in the primary room.

The second grade has been dramatizing stories for their language work this week.

Edna Bolon and Nona McAllister won the buttercup spelling contest which was being conducted in the second grade.

Harry Flaig and Robert Dammarell have been out of school this week on account of sickness.

How to Really Save On Cost of Painting

FIRST, find out what good paint is, for that is where you start to save on paint. We spend more to make paint for your economy as follows:

We use only the best materials in Fuller's Specification House Paints—PIONEER WHITE LEAD, pure linseed oil, zinc and finest colors.

We super-purify the lead in a special purifier. Then we make the lead so fine that it will pass through a silk screen with 40,000 meshes to the square inch.

The "whiter" lead means clearer-toned colors. The extreme fineness means better mixing quality, greater covering capacity, more ease in spreading—a paint that's always uniform and smooth. Such paints when applied form a beautiful elastic, tough, protective coat that stays. They are known as "Fuller's Specification House Paints."

Where "Cheap" Paints Fail

Don't Figure Paint Economy as "Cost per Gallon."

"Cheap" paints can't compete with good paints in economy. "Cheap" paint covers less—you buy more gallons. It is harder to spread, requires more work—so you pay more labor cost. Your "saving" in less cost per gallon is very quickly eaten up.

Cheap paint starts to crack in twelve months. Good paint remains good five or more years. It is really the cheap paint that is expensive. Don't allow surfaces to rot—it costs less to paint them.

There is no real cost in painting with the best paint. Depreciation of an unpainted building far exceeds the cost of painting.

Free Advice on Painting

ASK our agent for our free advice. He will show you a color card which shows 32 shades of this desirable paint.

We have a Fuller Specification Department which will tell you all about the most desirable color schemes, color harmony and those other details you want to know.

It stands to reason that the democratic war cry in Idaho during the coming campaign will be "lower taxes". From the standpoint of campaign thunder, it ought to produce more noise than the rattling of the planks of all other parties combined. The statement that "people have brought the high taxes upon themselves", may be true or not, but the public doesn't like to be blamed for any of its misdeeds—it has paid servants who are supposed to shoulder the blame for all of the bad conditions that may exist in public affairs. Lower taxes is the paramount issue, and while Governor Davis' slogan "a taxless state" sounded good in recent campaigns, it won't have the "punch" next fall—it's a badly warped plank in the face of the state's present financial condition.

All country editors are pursued by two ghastly spectres. One demands to know why he printed it and the other why he didn't.

Packer Armour who owns to losing more than 30 million dollars in meat last year, accounts for it by saying that property and stocks have depreciated in value. He says if every business in the United States honestly, unselfishly takes the full measure of its losses, wipes the business slate clean, starts over again on the basis of today, great good would result to the country. It has to be done some time, why not now?

After a bitter fight, which comes up annually, the national house of representatives put back in the agricultural appropriation bill $360,000 for free seeds with which to save the constituencies of house members. The vote was 145 to 65. So we may expect free garden seeds for another year.

Seed dealers must feel toward government free seeds like job rinters do toward the government's poorly-printed stamped envelopes. But there's no way out of it, so long as congressmen adhere to a policy of soft-soaping the public at government expense.—Idaho County Free Press.

An industrious rat caused consternation in the Gazette office last week. An increasingly offensive odor kept arising from the southwest corner of the shop and after several days of suffering the office force got up a searching party to discover the cause of the effluvium. After demolishing a part of the floor a rat's nest was discovered—a nice warm nest well provided with food appropriate to the lenten season. The provident little animal had found some smelt, probably in a garbage can, and had stored them in its nest. We know now why they are called smelt.

FREE SCHOLARSHIPS

Union Pacific System Announces
Thirty-six in Idaho in 1922.

Moscow, Idaho.—A free agricultural scholarship, it has just been announced, will be awarded by the Union Pacific System to the boy, between sixteen and twenty-one years of age, ranking highest in the Idaho Boys' and Girls' Club work for the year 1922 in corn, sugar beet, potato, wheat, pig, calf, or sheep projects. The scholarship will be in the College of Agriculture, or the School of Practical Agriculture, of the University of Idaho, and will be worth $75.00, plus transportation.

The counties in which scholarships will be given are: Ada, Bannock, Bear Lake, Benewah, Bingham, Blaine, Bonanza, Boise, Butte, Camas, Canyon, Caribou, Cassia, Clark, Custer, Elmore, Fremont, Franklin, Gem Gooding, Jefferson, Jerome, Kootenai, Latah, Lincoln, Madison, Minidoka, Owyhee, Payette, Power, Shoshone, Teton, Twin Falls, Valley and Washington.

The winner in each county will be chosen from among the ten boys ranking highest in the county club projects, on the following basis: 75 per cent. on rank in club work; 25 per cent. on activities of the boy in community affairs.

The rank of these boys in community affairs and the county winner will be determined by a committee of three, consisting of the County Superintendent, one person appointed by the Director of Extension of the College of Agriculture, and a third person to be chosen by these two members. The scholarship must be used within a year of the date of award, except where the boy is in regular attendance at some school. In this case it may be used at the next session of the University of Idaho following the time the boy finishes his school.

The action of the Union Pacific System is due to the fact that its president, Mr. C. R. Gray, formerly a member of the governing board of the Maryland Agricultural College, was attracted by the work of boys' and girls' clubs as a factor in interesting the coming generation in farming; and he believes that the company he heads should further this work by offering scholarships, thereby helping worthy boys to obtain training in scientific agriculture.

NO BEST BREED OF POULTRY

There Are Three Classes Specially Adapted to Production of Eggs and Meat.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

There is no best breed of poultry. That, at least, is the opinion of men in the United States Department of Agriculture who have been studying the business for years, and have had experience with all varieties of all breeds in America. To go among your friends and ask for advice about the kind of chickens to start with would be about as productive of conflicting views as if you asked for help in buying a motor car or a typewriter. Every man has his likings, and some have good reasons for them, but in the end the beginner will have to be the judge; wherefore the opinion of the department specialists will be about the best guide: Keep only one variety of breed, and select the breed that suits your purpose best. Be sure of one thing—have a standardbred male at the head of the flock. Such a bird will improve the quality of the stock materially. A mongrel male will produce no improvement.

These are the reasons: Standardbred fowls produce uniform products which bring higher prices.

Standardbred stock and eggs sold for breeding purposes, bring higher prices than market quotations.

Standardbred fowls can be exhibited, and thus compete for prizes.

Eggs and stock from mongrel fowls are not sold for breeding purposes.

Mongrel fowls are not exhibited in poultry shows or exhibitions.

General-purpose breeds are best suited to most farms where the production of both eggs and meat is desired. The four most popular representatives of this class are the Plymouth Rock, Wyandotte, Orpington, and Rhode Island Red.

All these breeds, with the exception of the Orpington, are of American origin. They are characterized by having yellow skin and legs, and lay brown-shelled eggs. The Orpington is of English origin, has a white skin, and also lays brown-shelled eggs. You can get a detailed description of all fowls of American origin in Farmers' Bulletin 806 on "Standard Varieties of Chickens. I. The American Class," which may be had upon application to the Division of Publications, United States Department of Agriculture.

The Mediterranean or egg breeds are best suited for the production of white-shelled eggs. Representatives of this class are bred largely for eggs rather than for meat. Among the popular breeds are Leghorn, Minorca, Ancona and Andalusian.

An outstanding characteristic of the egg breeds is the fact that they are

How to Be Healthy

The Crusade of the Double-Barred Cross
Practical Talks on Disease Prevention Prepared by the
IDAHO ANTI-TUBERCULOSIS ASS'N

(Practically every adult person is infected with tuberculosis. This infection need not be a source of danger. To keep the latent infection from becoming disease, bodily resistance must be kept at its best. This series of articles shows you how to keep healthy.)

PREVENTION OF TUBERCULOSIS

DR. GEORGE THOMAS PALMER,
President Illinois Tuberculosis Association, Springfield, Ill.

THE prevention of tuberculosis consists first, in the avoidance of infection by the germ of the disease and second, in the prevention of active tuberculous disease after infection may have been acquired. Thousands of persons acquire tuberculous infection without succumbing to the disease. In fact, if one lives properly, it is possible for him to carry tuberculous infection throughout his entire life without developing tuberculous disease or consumption. The man with tuberculous infection, however, is always in more or less danger and consequently every effort should be made to avoid infection.

To avoid first infection and to prevent the development of later disease there must be team work on the part of the individual and the community. However careful the individual may be, he is not safe in a community where health regulation is disregarded, and on the other hand, the entire community is endangered by the carelessness of the infected person.

The first problem of preventing infection must be solved not only by sane public regulation and control of all consumptives who may spread the disease, but by the regulation of all of those things which directly or indirectly affect the general public health. To prevent his own infection the individual must exercise care in his contact with known consumptives, must insist upon good hygienic conditions in all places where he works or plays, or joins with others in his recreation. The individual child must be rigidly protected from contact with any consumptive or possible consumptive.

To avoid tuberculous disease or consumption on the part of the individual who is already infected—and at present about eighty per cent of persons acquire tuberculous infection at one time or another—the chief problem is that of maintaining individual health at its highest point. While the infected individual may round out a long life without evidence of the disease, it is also true that he may develop active disease at any time through the lowering of his physical strength or resistance. Hence, he must live a safe, sane, normal life with the right kind of food, with ample fresh air, with moderation in all his habits, including those of work and play and with avoidance of any unnecessary strain. He must also exact of his community those civic conditions necessary to good community health, including good housing, efficient general health administration, clean streets, proper ventilation of public places, safe milk supply and a reasonable measure of public recreation.

It has been stated that if every man, woman and child would utilize our present knowledge of prevention, tuberculosis would be wiped out in a few generations.

The gratifying reduction in tuberculosis during past years has not been due to epoch-making scientific discoveries, nor even to records of the activities of sanitarians and doctors and nurses, but rather to national, state and local campaigns of popular education through which people have been taught to live sane and wholesome lives. In spite of the success which has attended the educational efforts of the past, it must be recognized that the vast majority of the people of the United States have not yet acquired the truth about this disease—the truth which will make them free from the greatest scourge with which mankind has ever been afflicted.

classed as nonsitters; that is, as a rule they do not become broody and hatch their eggs. When fowls of this class are kept, artificial incubation and brooding usually are employed. Farmers' Bulletin 898, "Standard Varieties of Chickens. II. The Mediterranean Class," tells about this class.

Langshans, Brahmas, Cochins, and Cornish fowls belong in the meat breeds, rather than for eggs, and although classed for meat are sometimes kept as general-purpose fowls. They are all heavier and larger than the egg breeds, or those of the general-purpose class, and lay brown-shelled eggs. Farmers' Bulletin 1052, "Standard Varieties of Chickens. III. Asiatic, English, and French Classes" describes the breeds in this class.

Fowls for breeding purposes should be strong, healthy, vigorous birds. The comb, face, and wattles should be a bright red, eyes bright and fairly prominent, head comparatively broad, short, and not long or crow-shaped; legs set well apart and straight; plumage clean and smooth.

The beginner in poultry will be careful to have a home ready for his flock before he gets it. Farmers' Bulletin 889 contains suggestions, plans, and directions every poultry keeper should have. The Division of Publications will send it upon request.

SCHOOL GIRL SHOWS ABILITY

Makes Good With Small Herd of Cows and Is Successful With Chickens and Hogs.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Elizabeth Farley is a seventeen-year-old club girl, a senior in the high school at Amherst, Mass. About four years ago, after experimenting with the 4-H garden and poultry clubs of the United States Department of Agriculture for several years, she decided to purchase a cow. Her father attempted to discourage her, saying that she had no knowledge of milking and no place to house an animal. Her father went away for a week-end trip, however, and when he returned he found that Elizabeth was the owner of a registered Jersey cow which she had learned to milk, and for which she had rented a stall in a neighbor's barn. Profits from previous poultry work supplied the funds for this venture.

Elizabeth remained in club work and because of the demand for milk purchased other registered cows and calves. For two years the cattle had to be staked out every day in a pasture 10 minutes' walk from the house and as the pasture brook dried up she had also to carry water to them. One cow nearly died of sickness. Until a year ago Elizabeth did all her own work, including delivering the milk.

Her next live-stock venture was a bred registered Chester-White sow. This sow had a litter of 13 pigs, 10 of which lived, although the sow became sick and died later. When Elizabeth purchased 200 day-old chicks as they grew she sold the cockerels and some of the pullets, reserving the others for winter laying. A year ago she found that she needed pasture and hay land so she bought 12 acres of land, for which the cows are paying.

At the present time this high-school girl has nine purebred Jersey cows and four calves valued by specialists in the Agricultural college at $3,000. She hires two boys to help care for the herd and milk the cows. She delivers 80 quarts of milk daily in an old milk wagon which she bought this summer for $5 and repaired herself. She grows her own feed on her own land.

In addition to her dairy herd she has a large flock of chickens, a number of purebred pigs, and a horse. Her entire indebtedness is one note for $300. Elizabeth is planning to go to the Massachusetts Agricultural college as soon as she has finished high school.

Webster —Man's Man

By PETER B. KYNE

Author of
"Cappy Ricks," "The Valley of the Giants," etc.

(Copyright, by Peter B. Kyne)

CHAPTER XIII.—Dolores tells Webster that Billy Geary had asked her to marry him and that she had refused. Amazed, but entirely misunderstanding the situation, he accepts the explanation. He explains to Dolores how her brother has laid his plans for the overthrow of Sarros. Webster and Ricardo have a final understanding.

CHAPTER XIV.—The morning of the revolution Webster takes Dolores aboard the American steamer Estrella, where she can remain in safety. As an American citizen he believes it his duty to take no part in the conflict. Cauterly, after being in the thick of it, returns to the ship to tell Webster of the progress of the revolution, which presages an early victory for the forces of Ricardo Ruy.

In the meantime Ricardo's fire enters had not been idle. The instant the guards turned into the street a deadly magazine fire had been opened on them. They had already suffered heavily winning through the gate and past the besiegers in front of it, but once they turned the corner into the next street they had the fire of but a handful of men to contend with. Nevertheless it was sufficiently deadly. Many of the horses in the front rank went down with their riders, forcing the maddened animals behind to clear their carcasses by leaping over them, which some did. Many, however, tripped and stumbled in their wild gallop, spilling their riders.

"Stay by the wall, you madman," Webster ordered. "There'll be enough left to ride down those men in the street and saber them!"

And there were! They died to a man, and the sadly depleted troop of guards galloped on, leaving Don Juan and Webster unscathed on the sidewalk, the only two living men unhurt in that shambles.

Not for long, however, did they have the street to themselves. Around the corner of the palace wall a limousine, with the curtains drawn, swung on two wheels, skidded, struck the carcass of a horse and turned over, catapulting the chauffeur into the middle of the street.

"Sarros!" shrieked Don Juan and ran to the overturned vehicle. It was quite empty.

"Bully boy, Senor Sarros," Webster laughed. "He's turned a pretty trick, hasn't he? Sent his guards out to hack a pathway for an empty limousine! That means he's hoping to draw the watchers from the other gate!"

But Don Juan Cafetero was not listening; he was running at top speed for the south gate of the palace grounds—and Webster followed.

As they swung into the street upon which this south gate opened, Webster saw that it was deserted of all save the dead, for Sarros' clever ruse had worked well and had had the effect of arousing the curiosity of his enemies as to the cause of the uproar at the north gate, in consequence of which they had all scurried around the block to see what they could see, thus according Sarros the thing he desired most—a fighting chance and a half minute to get through the gate and headed for the steamship landing without interference.

Webster and Don Juan came abreast the high, barred gate in the thick, 20-foot masonry wall as the barrier swung back and a man, in civilian clothes, thundered through on a magnificent bay thoroughbred.

"That's him. Stop the devil!" screamed Don Juan. "They'll do the decent thing to me if I take him alive."

To Webster, who had acquired the art of snap shooting while killing time in many a lonely camp, the bay charger offered an easy mark. "Hate to down that beautiful animal," he remarked—and pulled away.

The horse leaped into the air and came down stiff-legged; Sarros spurred it cruelly, and the gallant beast strove to gather itself into its stride, staggered and sank to its knees, as with a wild Irish yell Don Juan Cafetero reached the dictator's side.

Sarros drew a revolver, but before he could use it Don Juan tapped him smartly over the head with his rifle barrel, and the man toppled inertly to the ground beside his dying horse.

"More power to ye, son," Don Juan called cheerily and turned to receive Webster's approval.

What he saw paralyzed him for an instant. Webster was standing beside the gate, firing into a dozen of Sarros' soldiery who were pouring out of a house just across the street, where for an hour they had crouched unseen and unheard by the Ruy men at the gate. They were practically out of ammunition and had merely been awaiting a favorable opportunity to escape before the rebels should enter the city in force and the house-to-house search for snipers should begin. They had been about to emerge and beat a hasty retreat, when Sarros rode out at the gate, and with a rush they followed, gaining the sidewalk in time to be witnesses to the dictator's downfall.

For a moment they had paused, huddled on the sidewalk behind their offcer, who, turning to scout the street up and down, beheld John Stuart Webster standing by the gate with an automatic in his hand. At the same instant Webster's attention had been attracted to the little band on the sidewalk; in their leader he recognized no less a personage than his late acquaintance, the fire eating Capt. Jose Benavides. Coincidentally Benavides recognized Webster.

It was an awkward situation. Webster realized the issue was about to be decided, that if he would have it in his favor, he should waste not one split-second before killing the mercurial Benavides as the latter stood staring at him. It was not a question, now, of who should beat the other to the draw, for each had already filled his hand. It was a question, rather, as to who should recover first from his astonishment. If Benavides decided to let bygones be bygones and retreat without firing a shot, then Webster was quite willing to permit him to pass unmolested; indeed, such was his aversion to shooting any man, so earnestly did he hope the Sobrantean would consider that discretion was the better part of valor, that he resolved to inculcate that idea in the hotspur.

"Captain Benavides," he said suavely, "your cause is lost. If you care to escape aboard the steamer, I will see to it that you are not removed from her before she sails; if you care to surrender to me now, I give you my word of honor you will not be executed."

Benavides might have had, and doubtless did have, his faults, but cowardice was not one of them. And he did have the ghost of a sense of humor. An evil smile flitted over his olive features.

"Without taking into consideration the bayonets at my back," he replied, "it strikes me the odds are even now. And yet you patronize me."

Webster was nettled. "I'd rather do that than kill you, Benavides," he retorted. "Don't be a fool. Run along and sell your papers, and take your pitiful little sandal-footed brigands with you. Scat!"

Benavides' hand, holding his pistol, had been hanging loosely at his side. With his furious glance meeting Webster's unflinching, with the merest movement of his wrist and scarcely without movement of his forearm, he threw up his weapon and fired. Scarcely a fifth of a second had elapsed between the movement of his wrist and the pressure of his finger on the trigger; Webster, gazing steadily into the somber eyes, had noted no hint of the man's intention, and was caught actually off his guard.

The bullet tore through hisiceps, momentarily paralyzing him, and his automatic dropped clattering to the sidewalk; as he stooped and recovered it, Benavides fired again, creating the top of his left shoulder. The Sobrantean took aim for a third and finishing shot, but when he pulled the trigger the hammer fell on a defective cartridge, which gave to John Stuart Webster all the advantage he craved. He planted a bullet in Benavides' abdomen with his first shot, blew out the duelist's brains with his second, and whirled to meet the charge of the little sandal-footed soldiers, who, seeing their leader fallen, had without an instant's hesitation and apparently by mutual consent decided to avenge him.

Webster backed dazedly toward the wall, firing as he did so, but he was too dizzy to shoot effectively, and the semicircle of bayonets closed in on his front. He had wounded three men without stopping them; a second more, and their long, eighteen-inch bayonets would have been in his vitals, when into the midst of the melee, from the rear, dashed Don Juan Cafetero, shrieking like a fiend and swinging his rifle, which he held grasped by the barrel.

Webster saw a bayonet lunging toward him. He lifted his leg and caught the point on his boot-heel while with his last cartridge he killed the man behind the bayonet, just as the latter's next-rank man thrust straight and true in under the American's left arm, while a third man jabbed at his stomach and got the bayonet home in his hip. These two thrusts, delivered almost simultaneously, by their impact carried their victim backward against the wall, against which his head collided with a smart thud. He fell forward on his face; before his assailants could draw back for a finishing thrust, in case the gringo needed it, which they doubted, Don Juan Cafetero had brained them both.

Standing above the man he loved, with the latter's body between his outspread legs, Don Juan Cafetero stood for the final accounting, his buttermilk eyes gleaming hatred and war-madness, his lips drawn back from his snarling teeth, his breast rising and falling as they closed in around him. For a few seconds he was visible swinging his rifle like a flail; magnificent, unterrified—and then a bayonet slipped in under his guard. It was the end.

With a final great effort that used up the last strength in his drink-corroded muscles he hurled his rifle into the midst of his four remaining enemies, before he swayed and toppled full length on top of Webster, shielding with his poor body the man who had fanned to flame the dying ember of manhood in the wreck that drink and the devil had cast up on the Caribbean coast.

For Don Juan Cafetero it had been a long, joyous, thirsty day, but at last the day was done. And in order to make certain, a soldado jabbed him once more through the vitals before he fled with the other survivors.

For half an hour after Webster left her to assist the great-hearted Mother

Webster Planted a Bullet in Benavides' Abdomen.

Jenks in the rough care of the wounded, Dolores, absorbed in her work of mercy, gave all of her thought to the grim task before her. The cries, followed by the sudden, savage outbreak of fire when the guards made their dash from the palace, brought Webster and Don Juan to mind instantly. In a quick access of terror and apprehension she clung, trembling, to stolid old Mother Jenks.

"Somebody's breakin' in or breakin' out," the veteran decided calmly. "Come to the corner, dearie, an' ave a look."

She half dragged Dolores to the corner, from which they had an unobstructed view down the cross-street to its intersection three blocks distant with the Calle San Rosario; consequently they saw the dozen or more survivors of that ill-fated dash from the north gate of the palace flash for a second across their line of vision. Mother Jenks croaked dismally, like a disreputable old raven; she was trying to cheer.

"The rats are leavin' the sinkin' ship," she wheezed. "Come an' see them tyke the devils as killed my sainted 'Enery.' She broke eagerly from Dolores' detaining grasp and ran down the street. Dolores hesitated a moment; then, reasoning that her duty lay in pursuing Mother Jenks and preventing her from rushing headlong into the conflict, she followed.

Evidently the feeling guards had scurried around a corner into a cross-street shortly after Dolores and Mother Jenks had seen them gallop past, for the firing down the Calle San Rosario had ceased entirely by the time they reached it. They stood a moment at the corner, gazing up the street at the dead-man and beast—with the wounded crawling out of the shambles to the sidewalk.

Mother Jenks nodded approvingly as triumphant shouts from the north gate told her the Ruy men were pouring into the palace; with their arms about each other the two women watched and waited—and presently the national flag on the palace came fluttering down from its staff, to be raised again with the red banner of revolution fluttering above it, the insignia of a nation reborn.

"My lamb," Mother Jenks said softly to Dolores, "the war is over. 'Wot's the matter with you? In the south gate an' wythin' on the palace steps for the provisional president to make his grand untray? If we 'estrate five minutes they'll have a bloom'n' guard on both gates, arsk'n' us 'oo we are an' 'wot we want.'"

"But Mr. Webster will come back to that back street looking for me; I must go back and wait there for him."

"Wyte, nothink!" Mother Jenks overruled the girl's protest roughly. "E'll 'ave gone into the palace with the crowd for a look-see; we'll meet 'im there an' syve 'im the trouble of 'untin' for us. Come!" And she half dragged the shrinking girl toward the gate, a block distant, where only a few minutes before Webster and Don Juan Cafetero had made their ineffectual stand.

"Don't look at the blighters, honey," Mother Jenks warned Dolores when, in approaching the gate, she caught sight of the bodies strewn in front of it. "My word! Regular bally mess—an' all spigottles! Cawn't be. Must 'ave been some white meat on this bird, as my sainted 'Enery us'er s'y. Hah! Thought so! There's a red-headed 'un! Gawd's truth! An' 'e done all that—Gor' strike me pink! It's Don Juan Cafetero."

Mother Jenks stepped over the gory corpses ringed around Don Juan and knelt beside him. "Don Juan!" she cried. "You bally, interferin' blighter, you've gone an' got it!"

She ran her strong old arms under his dripping body, lifted him and laid his red head on her knee, while with her free hand she drew a small flask of brandy from her dress pocket.

Don Juan opened his buttermilk eyes and gazed up at her with slowly dawning wonder, then closed them again, drowsily, like a tired child. Mother Jenks pressed the flask to his blue lips; as the brandy bit his tongue he rolled his fiery head in feeble protest and weakly set his teeth against the lip of the flask. Wondering, Mother Jenks withdrew it—and then Don Juan spoke.

"Have ye the masher's permission, allanah? I give him me word av honor—not—to dhrink—till—he—give—permission. He—was good—to me—trot' he was—God—love—me—boss—"

His jaw dropped loosely; his head rolled sideways; but ere his spirit fled, Don Juan Cafetero had justified the faith of his master. He had kept his word of honor. He had made good on his brag to die for John Stuart Webster and welcome the chance! Mother Jenks held his body a little while, gazing into the face no longer rubicund; then gently she eased it to the ground and for the first time was aware that Dolores knelt in the dirt opposite to her striving to lift the body upon which Don Juan had been lying.

The strength of Dolores was unequal to the task; so Mother Jenks, hardened, courageous, calm as her sainted 'Enery at his inglorious finish, rose and stepped around to her side to help her. She could see this other, was a white man, too; coolly she stooped and wiped his gory face with the hem of her apron. And then she recognized him!

"Lift him up! Give him to me!" Dolores sobbed. "Oh, Caliph, my poor dear, big-hearted blundering boy!"

She got her arm under his head; Mother Jenks aided her; and the limp body was lifted to a sitting position; then Dolores knelt on one knee, supporting him with the other, and drew his head over on her shoulder; with her white cheek cuddled against his, she spoke into his deaf ears the little, tender, foolish words that mothers have for their children, that women have for the stricken men of their love. She pleaded with him to open his eyes, to speak to her and tell her he still lived; so close was his face to hers that she saw an old but very faint white scar running diagonally across his left eyebrow—and kissed it.

Presently strong arms took him from her; clinging to somebody—she knew not whom—she followed, moaning broken-heartedly, while eight men, forming a rude litter with four rifles passed under his body, bore Webster to the shade of a tufted palm inside the palace gate.

As they laid Webster down for a moment there Dolores saw a tall, youthful man, of handsome features and noble bearing, approach and look at him. In his eyes there were tears, a sob escaped him as with a little impulsive, affectionate movement he patted John Stuart Webster's cheek. "My friend!" the fainting Dolores heard him murmur. "My great-hearted, whimsical, lovable John Webster. You made it possible for me to meet you here tonight—and this is the meeting!"

CHAPTER XVI.

While Ricardo watched beside the unconscious Webster one of his aides galloped up the street, to return presently with a detachment with stretchers, into which Webster and Don Juan Cafetero were laid and carried up the palace driveway into the huge golden reception hall where only the night before Sarros had greeted the bellies and beaux of his capital. In the meantime Mother Jenks had succeeded in restoring Dolores to consciousness; supported by the indomitable old woman the girl slowly followed the grim procession until, at the door of the reception room, they found their further progress barred by a sentry.

"The red-haired man is dead," he informed them in response to their eager queries. "If you want his body," he continued, hazarding a guess as to their mission, "I guess you can have it. There he is." And the sentry pointed to the stretcher which had been set down along the wall of the reception hall.

"Ow about the other?" Mother Jenks demanded. Don Juan Cafetero had, unfortunately, been so much of a nuisance to her in life that she was not minded to be troubled greatly over him in death, although the Spartanlike manner of his exit had thrilled the British bulldog blood in her.

"The big fellow isn't quite dead yet, but I'm afraid he's a goner. The surgeons have him in this room now. Friend of yours, Miss?" he inquired in tones freighted with neighborly sympathy.

Dolores nodded. "Sorry I can't let you in, Miss," he continued, "but the General ordered me to keep everybody out until the doctors have finished looking him over. If I was you, I'd wait in that room across the hall; then you can get the first news when the doctors come out."

Mother Jenks accepted his advice and steered her charge into the room indicated. As they waited, Ricardo Ruy stood anxiously beside the table on which John Stuart Webster's big, limp body reposed, while Doctor Pacheco, assisted by a Sobrantean confrere, went deftly over him with surgical scissors and cut the blood-soaked clothing from his body.

"He breathes very gently," the rebel leader said, presently. "Is there any hope?"

The little doctor shrugged. "I fear not. That bayonet-thrust in the left side missed his heart but not his lung."

"But apparently he hasn't bled much from that wound."

"The hemorrhage is probably internal. Even if that congestion of blood in the lungs does not prove fatal very shortly, he cannot, in his weakened state, survive the traumatic fever from all these wounds. It is bound—hello, how our poor friend still lives with the bayonet broken off in his body—for here is steel—hah! Not a bayonet, but a pistol."

He unbuttoned the wounded man's coat and found a strap running diagonally up across his breast and over the right shoulder, connecting with a holster under the left arm. The doctor unbuckled this strap and removed the holster, which contained Webster's spare gun; Ricardo, glancing disinterestedly at the sheathed weapon, noted a small, new, triangular hole in the leather holster. He picked it up, withdrew the pistol, and found a deep scratch, recently made, along the blued steel close to the vulcanite butt.

When Ricardo glanced at Pacheco after his scrutiny of the pistol and holster, the doctor's dark eyes were regarding him mirthfully.

"I have been unnecessarily alarmed, my general," said Pacheco. "Our dear friend has been most fortunate in his choice of wounds—"

"He's a lucky Yankee; that's what he is, my dear Pacheco. A lucky Yankee!" Ricardo leaned over and examined the bayonet-wound in Webster's left side. "He took the point of the steel on his pistol he happened to be wearing under his left arm," he went on to explain. "That turned the bayonet and it slid along his ribs, making a superficial flesh-wound."

Pacheco nodded. "And this bullet merely burned the top of his right shoulder, while another passed through his biceps without touching the bone. His most severe wound is this jab in the hip."

They stripped every stitch of clothing from Webster and went over him carefully. At the back of his head they found a little clotted blood from a small split in the scalp; also they found a lump of generous proportions. Pacheco laughed briefly but contentedly.

"Then he is not even seriously injured?" Ricardo interrupted that laugh.

"I would die of fright if I had to fight this fine fellow a month from today," the little doctor chirped. "The man is in superb physical condition; it is the bump on the head that renders him unconscious—not loss of blood."

As if to confirm this expert testimony Webster at that moment breathed long and deeply, screwed up his face and shook his head very slightly. Thereafter for several minutes he gave no further evidence of an active interest in life—seeing which Pacheco decided to take prompt advantage of his unconsciousness and probe the wounds in his arm and shoulder for the fragments of clothing which the bullets must have carried into them. After ten minutes of probing Pacheco announced that he was through and ready to bandage; whereupon John Stuart Webster said faintly but very distinctly, in English:

"I'm awfully glad you are, Doc. It hurt like h—! Did you manage to get a bite on that fishing trip?"

"Jack Webster, you scoundrel!" Ricardo yelled joyously, and he shook the patient with entire disregard of the latter's wounds. "Oh, man, I'm glad you're not dead."

"Your sentiments appeal to me strongly, my friend. I'm—too—tired to look—at you. Who the devil—are you?"

Fell a silence, while Webster prepared for another speech. "Where am I?"

"In the palace. We won pulled-up, and that forty-thousand dollar bet of yours is safe. I'll cash the ticket for you tomorrow morning."

"D—n the forty thousand. Where's my Croppy Boy?"

"Your what?"

"My wild Irish blackthorn, Don Juan Cafetero."

"I hope, old man, he has ere now that which all brave Irishmen and true deserve—a harp with a crown. In life the Irish have the harp without the crown, you know."

"How did he die?" Webster whispered.

"He died hard, with the holes in front—and he died for you."

Two big tears trickled slowly through Webster's closed lids and rolled across his pale cheek. "Poor, lost, lonesome, misunderstood wreck," he murmured presently, "he was an extremist in all things. He used to sing those wonderfully poetic ballads of his people—I remember one that began: 'Green were the fields where my forefathers dwelt.' I think his heart was in Kerry—so we'll send him there. He's my dead, Ricardo; care for his body, because I'm—going to plant Don Juan with the shamrocks. They didn't understand him here. He was an exile—so I'm going to send him home."

"He shall have a military funeral," Ricardo promised.

"From the cathedral," Webster added. "And take a picture of it for his people. He told me about them. I want them to think he amounted to something, after all. And when you get this two-by-four republic of yours going again, Rick, you might have your congress award Don Juan a thousand dollars or so for capturing Sarros. Then we can send the money to his old folks."

"But he didn't capture Sarros," Ricardo protested. "The man escaped when the guards cut their way through."

"He didn't. That was a ruse while he beat it out the gate where you found me. I saw Don Juan knock him cold with the butt of his rifle after I'd brought down his horse."

"Do you think he's there yet?"

"He may be—provided all this didn't happen the day before yesterday. If I wanted him, I'd go down and look for him, Rick."

"I'll go right away, Jack."

"One minute, then. Send a man around to that little back street where they have the wounded—it's a couple of blocks away from here—to tell Mother Jenks and the young lady with her I'll not be back."

Why I Left Dad

The following poem contributed to the Star-Mirror by a Moscow writer, contains both truth and poetry:

Why did I leave the farm? you ask
Why did I bolt and leave my task?
Why did I beat it off to town
And turn my poor old father down?
You say the thinkers and the press
Are wallowing in deep distress.
They seek to know the hidden cause,
Why Farmer boys desert their Pas.
Well, stranger, I don't mean any harm,
But how many "Thinkers" stay on the farm?
Some City Chap (who was eating pie)
Put in my mouth an awful lie.
I did not leave because my Dad
Took all my pets and made me mad!
My Daddy did the best he could,
With all the family sawing wood.
We raised the pork and peas and grits,
While city loafers gave us fits.
Produce went down out of sight,
So we worked later in the night,
Sold our grain, without a chance,
Paid fifteen dollars for Sunday
pants.

My mother slaved and toiled and wrought,
My sister in the District taught,
And if she had good luck, I guess,
That two months' salary bought one dress.
My Dad said: "Boy, I'm tied here,
But don't you stay another year

But go and live on the fat of the land,
Fall in with the grafters, join the band.
I'll come in the fall if I can lease,
And we'll help the Profiteers gouge and fleece.
"That's the reason I'm here. Old Bo!
I'm out for the kale, if you must know.
You tell the "Thinkers" behind the
moat,
That the Farmer is tired of playing the goat.
So build your houses to meet the need,
For the Farmer is coming to this rich feed,
A festival rare on the fat of the
land,
The "Thinkers" don't know—but the track needs sand!
Farmer Atlas has weakened—you're
all cur of luck,
Before his back's broken, the camel has struck!

POULTRY CACKLES

CARING FOR GROWING CHICKS

Essentials to Best Growth Are Good Coops, Cleanliness, Feed, Water and Free Range.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The care of growing chicks, especially during warm weather, is most important, say specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture.
Every boy or girl member of a poultry club should give them the best of attention if success is to be had.
The baby chicks may be smart little fellows from strong, vigorous parent stock, and they may have been brooded carefully for the first two or three weeks, but unless they receive proper care and management during their later growing period they will not develop properly, and many of them will be lost through disease or sickness. The chief essentials to proper growth are good coops or houses, cleanliness, proper feed and water,
shade, and free range.

Every coop or poultry house used for growing chicks should be kept clean at all times. Sickness or disease starts usually in unclean quarters, and in such places lice and mites are al-

Young Incubator Chicks Allowed to Run Out on Government Farm at Beltsville.

ways more plentiful. Coops and houses should be cleaned and sprayed once a week, and clean shavings, chaff, or sand put on the floor. Examine the chicks and houses often for lice and mites, and if found they should be got rid of at once by following the directions in Department Circular 16. Lice, Mites and Cleanliness, which may be had, free, upon application to the division of publications, United States Department of Agriculture.

A variety of feeds, with fresh, clean water, is necessary if chicks are to grow properly. Perhaps the three most necessary for rapid growth are grain feed, green feed and dry mash.
Poultry specialists of the department say that in addition to the green feed and dry mash, which should be provided, regularly, a grain mixture should be fed night and morning, giving as large a quantity as the chicks will eat clean, but no more. A good grain mixture for growing chicks consists of three parts cracked corn, two parts wheat, and two parts hulled oats. When available, kafir or rolled or hulled barley may be substituted for hulled oats. In localities where hulled oats, kafir, or rolled barley cannot be obtained, or are too expensive, a mixture of cracked corn and wheat only may be fed until the chicks are old enough to eat whole oats, when two parts may be added to the corn and wheat mixture.

A reasonable supply of fresh green feed is almost as necessary as grain for growing chicks. If allowed liberty they will get much of it for themselves, but if confined, or if in quarters where green feed is not abundant, it should be supplied regularly.
Lawn grass, beet tops, cabbage and lettuce are excellent feeds. When chicks are confined to brood coops with runs, they should be placed on ground where the grass is green and tender, and as fast as it is eaten off, the coop and run should be moved to

GLEANINGS

Spokane county game commission has purchased fifty head of Mongolian pheasants from the state game farm. These are a new variety of exceedingly hardy birds from North China and are expected to do well under conditions that would be fatal to the less hardy varieties of Chinese pheasants. They roost in trees and on fences instead of on the ground as the ordinary Chinese birds do.

Statistics show that in the United States there is a death by automobile accident every 35 minutes.

Hard times have no terrors for the man with a good batting eye. Babe Ruth will pull down a $75,000 salary this year.

Such and such a party in Kendrick has been winding his clock every night for 30 years. He recently discovered it was an eight day time piece.

When the roads are knee deep in mud is a good time to agitate a more extensive road building program.

A flock of chickens, bought from a Juliaetta man, were walking around in their new home in Kendrick the other day, the rooster presiding over the members of his household. Encountering a goose egg in the yard he said: "Ladies, I wish to call your attention to how things are done in other communities."

Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Deeter writes from California that they expect to start for Kendrick about April 1. They will drive through in their car.

B. Assman arrived from Portland Monday. He owns a half section of land near the Chris Maier place on American ridge and may build a house on it this spring. The place is farmed by Harry Langdon.

Prof. Daniel enjoyed a visit with his brother, C. I. Daniel over the week end. Mr. Daniel is farming near Palouse.

Tom Daugherty of Leland went to Spokane where he will take hospital treatment.

E. E. Bechtol was transacting business in Lewiston Saturday evening.

Herman Schultz of Spokane returned to his home last Saturday after spending a few days visiting relatives in this community.

Mrs. Ira Bolon returned from Lewiston Tuesday morning. Mr. Bolon underwent an operation for appendicitis at a Lewiston hospital last Friday morning. He is getting along nicely and will probably be home the first part of next week.

Mrs. Harvey Smith of Moscow arrived last Saturday to visit her sister, Mrs. R. D. Newton.

Marvin Long was a Lewiston visitor over the week end.

Percy Dunkle of Wallace arrived Tuesday for a brief visit with his brother, Arthur.

Prof. Daniel suffered a badly cut hand Tuesday morning while chopping wood. He was holding the stick with his left hand and the axe blade struck his three first fingers, fracturing the bone in one. He went to Moscow to have it dressed, as a local physician advised the use of the X-ray, so that the bones could be set properly.

Herman Schupfer drove to Lewiston in his car Sunday. The road was dry practically all the way.

Mrs. Charles McKeever went to Clarkston, Tuesday, to visit her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Harry McKeever.

Miss Viola McAllister, local teacher, attended the spelling contest at Moscow last Saturday.

Rev. C. A. Pickering was in Moscow on business the first of the week.

Don McCrea went to Lewiston the first of the week where he has a position with the Lewiston Grocery Co.

Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Candler went to Lewiston, Tuesday, where they took their baby for hospital treatment. The baby has not been well since suffering an attack of the flu about two weeks ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus Roberts arrived from Moscow, where they have spent the winter. They will stay on their farm on American ridge this spring and summer.

A. V. Dunkle has been confined to his home this week with a case of tonsillitis.

Artlee Hollada spent the week end in Moscow with her sister, Miss Florence.

The cement floor is being put in the new theater this week. Next week the plastering will be done, after which a board floor will be laid over the cement where the seats are to be placed.

Miss Elsie Thomas arrived Tuesday from Lewiston for a visit with home folks.

Mrs. Elvy O'Reardon and her sister Mrs. Shepherd, of Spokane, visited their father, George Riggins, in Kendrick last week. From here they went to Ontario, Oregon, for a visit with their mother and brother.

M. O. Raby went to Moscow, Thursday, on business.

Mrs. Lafayette Keen returned to her home in Moscow, Tuesday after visiting her daughter, Mrs. Ira Havens, on American ridge.

Moscow will vote tomorrow on the question of Sunday movies. The churches of the town are opposing the question. The American Legion is advocating it. A big vote is expected.

Genesee had a most successful farmers institute Monday with over 250 farmers present.

C. C. Carlson of Moscow arrived Wednesday afternoon to visit his sons, A. K. and George.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Schultz of Cameron went to Lewiston, Wednesday, to consult Dr. Roe, eye, ear, nose and throat specialist. Mrs. Schultz has been having trouble with her eyes since suffering an attack of flu about two weeks ago.

Mrs. J. A. Hall of Leland returned from Spokane, Wednesday afternoon, where she underwent a serious operation. She is recovering nicely.

Ross Hoffman, a former well known Potlatch, now residing near Kooskia, has been appointed mail carrier and stage driver for the territory between Kooskia and Lowell, the latter place being located on the Lochsa at the mouth of the Selway river. Mr. Hoffman will move to Kooskia, which will be his headquarters.

Mrs. A. Otteraaen went to Troy, Thursday, to spend the day with friends.

Mrs. Alice Cludray went to Clarkston, Thursday, where she will make her home. She has closed the confectionery store at Leland, which she has conducted for several years, and expects to take a business course at Lewiston.

Silvie Cook of Potlatch ridge went to Lewiston, Thursday, to visit friends.

A report reached Kendrick yesterday that Miss Josephine Zoyer of Spokane was married this week to Mr. Wm. E. Ludwig of LaCade, Idaho. Mrs. Ludwig is well known in this community as her home was in Kendrick for a number of years. She was compositor in the Gazette office for several years.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Fry of Lunden, Thursday, a daughter.

$525 IN PRIZES FOR THE BEST RHYMES

A new contest is just being started which will interest every woman and girl who reads this paper. Any woman or girl can enter this contest—anyone can win! All it is necessary to do is to write a 4-line rhyme on Dr. Price's Phosphate Baking Powder, using only the words which appear either on the label of the Dr. Price can (front and back) or on the printed slip which is found in each Dr. Price can.

Isn't that easy? Everyone likes to make rhymes and here is a chance to spend a fascinating hour or two writing rhymes on this popular Baking Powder and perhaps winning a substantial prize for your efforts.

59 CASH PRIZES

For the rhyme selected as best a prize of $100 will be given; for the second, third and fourth best rhymes prizes of $75, $50, and $25, respectively will be given. And besides these prizes there will be 53 prizes of $5 each for the next 53 best rhymes. With such a long list of prizes as these, it would be a pity not to try your hand at it!

Here is a 4-line rhyme as an example:

Two teaspoons of this powder make
Biscuits, muffins, pie or cake,
The Price's Co. guarantee
No alum in the cans to be.

As Dr. Price's Phosphate Baking Powder sells for only 25 cents a 12 oz. can at grocery stores, some rhymes could play up the remarkable economy of this pure and wholesome baking powder which contains no alum.

All rhymes must be received by May 1, 1922. Only words appearing either on the label of the Dr. Price can (front and back) or on the printed slip contained inside the can may be used. These words may be used as often as desired, but no other words will be allowed. If you haven't a can of Dr. Price's, a copy of the label and the printed slip will be sent to you free upon request.

Any woman or girl may enter the contest, but only one rhyme from each person will be considered. In case of ties, the full amount of the prize will be given to each trying contestant. Write plainly on only one side of a sheet of paper and be sure to give your name and address.

Send your rhyme before May 1st to Price Baking Powder Factory
1007 Independence Blvd., Chicago, Ill.

The Misses Martha and Ida Silflow went to Lewiston, Wednesday to be present at the dedication of the Lutheran church of that place.

There will be no church services Sunday, as Rev. Rein goes to Lewiston to preach the dedication sermon.

Gus and Etta Blum have been helping Carl Lohman for the past week. Mr. Lohman and family are on the road to recovery.

There hasn't been a large attendance at school for the last three weeks, as all the children have been sick.

The county health nurse visited the school last Friday, and most all of the report showed a weakness of eyes, ears, nose, throat and teeth.

Carl L. Wegner went to Spokane last week for medical aid.

Aug. Brammer went to Spokane, Tuesday on business.

Dr. Van Wert, the veterinary of Kendrick, passed through Cameron, Tuesday.

Three new lights have been installed in the church last week. They are of the hollow wire system.

Mr. Van Wert will start to paper the church some time this week.

We are glad to report that the Carl Hartung family are able to be out again.
