Clipped From The Columns of Neighboring Papers.

Julietta Record: County Commissioner Columbus Clark got the road machinery together the first of the week and started work on the roads from the city limits down the canyon to the Latah county line. The new road engine was put in service and works fine. Vance Carlton is running the engine and a crew of several men and teams is employed in the work. There is considerable repairs and improvements to be made to the roads this season which will be done as fast as conditions will permit.

Troy News: Of more than ordinary interest thruout the Inland Empire is the annual teachers convention at Spokane, April 5-6-7. Educationists from all sections will gather for instruction by national figures in the teaching world. It is expected that from 2,000 to 2600 teachers will assemble for the sessions which include five general sessions and 27 sectional gatherings. Among the notables booked for the convention are Charl U. Williams, president national educational association who makes her first trip to the west for this purpose; Harry Charlesworth, president Canadian federation of teachers; and Dr. C. P. Cary, for 18 years superintendent of public instruction for Wisconsin.

Deary Press: According to a statement received from the county treasurer by W. E. Gorrie, clerk, Deary Rural High School District No. 2 had to its credit on February 17, a little more than $5,100.00, with all bills paid up to date. This is an unusually good showing. There is no bonded indebtedness.

Star-Mirror: Joe Bunney was given a suspended jail sentence of 60 days by Judge E. C. Steele in the district court late Saturday afternoon, dependent upon Bunney's good behavior. Defendant pleaded guilty of taking an automobile with the intent to temporarily deprive the owner of possession. The court allowed Bunney to change his first plea of guilty to a charge of grand larceny.

The case has been held over for several terms of court. Under the session laws of 1921 Bunney pleaded guilty to a violation of the statute aimed at "joy-riders" or those who take automobiles with the intent to return them to their owners.

The car stolen by Bunney was owned by H. B. Mathews of the Moscow high school. The car was taken some time last summer and was later returned to the owner shortly after Bunney had taken a trip to the coast. Bunney after the trip returned to Princeton where he was arrested and the case has been hanging fire until its final disposition Saturday afternoon.

When first arraigned on a charge of grand larceny Bunney entered a plea of not guilty. Bunney asked to be allowed to change his plea in order to enter a plea of guilty of taking the car with intent to only temporarily deprive the owner of possession. The court allowed the change of pleas and for good cause suspended the sentence of 60 days in the county jail on the condition of Bunney's good behavior.

Genesee News: The get-together institute advertised to take place in Genesee on Monday, proved to be a great success from all angles. The program as outlined was carried out in every particular—even as to the eats at the noon hour, when many town and country people went to the American Legion hall and ate their dinners and spent a delightful social hour.

The attendance was limited at the morning session because of the bad roads and as it was somewhat early for the farmers that live any distance from town, but the afternoon session was well attended, the house being packed with interested farmers and their wives from the surrounding country.

Moscow Has Sunday Movies

After a heated contest the voters of Moscow, Idaho, have decided in favor of permitting Sunday motion picture shows. The proposal was strongly backed by the American Legion which will receive the proceeds of Sunday afternoon performances for the erection of a club house.

DATE SET FOR CLEAN-UP WEEK

Governor Designates Week
Beginning April 9.

Health and attractiveness of communities demand that following the close of the winter season and before the beginning of the summer's heat there should be a general cleaning up of deposits of animal and vegetable matter and other debris which cannot be prevented from accumulating by any measure of precaution that can be enforced, in order that unclean, unhealthy and unsightly conditions may not prevail, generating and spreading disease and breeding pestilential insects.

It is deemed advisable and most conducive to a general renovation whereby no one may have excuse for delay or negligence to the detriment and danger to the health of himself, his family, or of his neighbors, to set apart a week wherein all good citizens are called upon not alone to see that their own premises are set in order, but that a wholesome and effective community spirit may be created.

We should consider it our duty at all times to interest ourselves in the welfare of the patriots who risked their lives and endangered or impaired their health for our national safety and security during the World War. It is, therefore, suggested to all communities as well as individuals that where help has to be employed in the necessary work incident to cleaning up of premises, our ex-service men be given the preference as far as practicable.

THEREFORE, I, D. W. DAVIS, Governor of the State of Idaho, do designate and set apart the week beginning April 9th and ending April 15th, as "CLEAN-UP WEEK" for the State of Idaho, and I do call upon all citizens and all communities to give every possible effort toward making effective the spirit and purpose of this proclamation by devoting their time, attention and energies to a cleaning and renovation of premises belonging to and adjacent to their places of abode.

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the great seal of the State to be affixed this twenty-fourth day of March, 1922.

D. W. DAVIS, Governor.
Attest: Robert O. Jones, Secretary of State.

Commas

This one has been going the rounds for many years but will be new to many:

During an examination in an English school the inspector began to question the pupils on punctuation when the mayor, a pompous individual, interrupted with the remark: "It is foolish to bother about commas and such like." The inspector flushed angrily, and turning to one of the boys he bade him write on the blackboard, "The mayor of Cheesington says the inspector is a fool. Now," he continued, "put a comma after Cheesington and another after inspector." The boy did so, and the mayor kept quiet after that.

A. V. Dunkle now has his wireless outfit working. The first of the week he had practically all of the parts together excepting the aerial. He used a set of coil bed springs for an aerial and got good results. Kendrick now has two wireless receiving stations.

IDAHO HOLSTEIN IN TEST RECORD

Made 18 Pounds Butter in Seven Days.

In the latest "Reported Tests of Holstein-Friesian Cows", published bi-weekly by Malcolm H. Gardner, Delavan, Wis., Supt., of Advanced Registry of the Holstein-Friesian Association of America, University of Idaho, at Moscow, Idaho, have one of their puerbred registered Holsteins listed.

This cow, Ida U. Segis Colanhan, is reported as having made at the age of two years and two months, a record of 428 1 lbs. of milk and 14.402 lbs. of butter fat, in seven days, equivalent to 18 lbs of butter. Her 30 day record is 1692.8 lbs. of milk and 57.062 lbs. of butter fat, equivalent to 71.3 lbs. of butter.

Tests of this kind are supervised by one or more representatives from the Dairy Division of the College of Agriculture, present at each feeding and milking, to weigh the milk and test it for butter fat content. A duplicate sample of this milk is forwarded to the State College, where careful check is made before the record is reported.

The Champion Holstein for Idaho in the Junior two year old class for seven day production is Roubie Queen De Kol, whose record of 452.7 lbs. of milk and 16.242 lbs. of butter fat, equivalent to 20.3 lbs. of butter, surpasses all others, according to the records of the Holstein-Friesian Association of America. This record production was made at the H. R. Boomer Farm, New Plymouth, Idaho.

Frank O. Lowden, former Governor of Illinois is President of the Holstein-Friesian Association of America. This Association has a membership of over twenty thousand breeders in the United States, and is the largest pure bred cattle Association in the world, representing over one half million pure bred animals.

Poland China Family Arrived

Walter Bigham of American ridge sent back to Dupre, S. D. for a Poland China sow. Mrs. Hog was shipped from Dupre in good order. At Hettinger, D. N. she was sent to the hospital and when she resumed her journey a few days later she was accompanied by a family of six pigs. The happy family arrived in Kendrick Monday afternoon and are now settled on the Bigham ranch. Just how the railroad company will adjust its books to fit the changed status of the Hog family is puzzling indeed. When the family left Dupre it numbered one. When it arrived at its destination it was seven.

R. F. Pepple will be the official postmaster of Julianna after April 1, succeeding Charles Taibott, who has held the position for one term.

Baseball Benefit Dance

The dance for the benefit of the baseball team will be held at the Fraternal Temple tonight under the auspices of the American Legion. The Kendrick Orchestra will furnish music for the occasion. All expenses involved in putting on the dance have been donated by the businessmen of the town.

ATTEMPTS SUICIDE WITH A RAZOR

Charles Hansen Cuts Throat
From Ear to Ear.

Leland, Idaho.—There was quite an excitement in our village Saturday afternoon when it was reported that a man with his throat cut was lying by the roadside one half mile from here. A number of men with a conveyance hurried to the scene and brought him to the doctor's office. A gash, cut with a razor, extending almost from ear to ear, was sewed up by Dr. Seeley. The unfortunate man stated he had worked at Bovill all winter and had received no money for his labor. He was suffering from after effects of "flu", so thought he would end it all. He gave his name as Charles Hansen. He had ten dollars in his pocket.

After failing at his attempt he decided he wanted to live. Monday he was taken to a Lewiston hospital, Ralph Oylear accompanying him there. It is reported he will recover.

Nearly everyone has had or is having the "flu".

Mrs. Archie May is quite sick with influenza. They have a trained nurse caring for her.

Mrs. Stoneburner has been here for several days looking after business interests and visiting old friends.

Prof. Mushletz spent the week end in Lewiston visiting his "Best Girl" (his wife).

Mrs. Elliott is seriously ill at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Leonard Davis.

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Kuykendahl have purchased the Enoch Harrison property in the west end of town and moved into it.

Dear Club Entertainment

The Dear Club entertainment given in honor of the Stag Club, at the Big Bear Ridge Hall, Saturday evening, was largely attended. The program consisted of music, readings and a two act comedy play, "Aunt Deborah's First Luncheon". The caste of characters were as follows: Mrs. Jane Travers, the hostess, Johanna Hooker; Elizabeth Travers, daughter of hostess, Anna Lien; Mrs. Warfield, Helen Siind and Mrs. Cartwright, Clara Morey, guests at the luncheon; Annette, the waitress, Inez Johnson; Mary, the chambermaid, Betsy Kieth; Mrs. Deborah Smith, a country cousin, Nettie Lacey.

Following the program sandwiches, pickles, cake and coffee was served by the ladies, after which everyone enjoyed several hours in playing games, visiting and having a social good time in general.

Death of Siamese Twins

The "Siamese twins," Josepha and Rosa Blazek, died at a Chicago hospital, Thursday. Josepha's death occurred first and was followed a few seconds later by the death of her sister. Eminent surgeons stated that an operation performed just before Josepha's death, separating the bodies of the twins, might have saved the life of Rosa, but Prantz Blazek, brother of the twins refused to permit an operation.

Louis Otnis of Moscow arrived Thursday to transact business in Kendrick.

NEWS NOTES OF KENDRICK SCHOOL

Happenings of The Week
Reported By Students.

Work has started on the high school play, "When a Fellow Needs a Friend." It is to be given about May 13th.

An army overcoat was left at the school house last Friday, the night of the carnival, owner please call for it.

A new swing is being made for the grade children. There are three swings on the pole. It is expected to be in use next week.

The fifth and sixth grade pupils enjoyed a short program Friday afternoon. Ovid Jarvis, Pearl Johnson and Helen Keller gave select readings. Language themes of special merit were written and read by Dorothy Holt, Orabelle Hollada, Murril Onstott and Margaret McDowell. Pearl Johnson entertained with a song.

Pupils of the fifth and sixth grades who obtained one hundred in spelling each day of last week are: Mae Freytag, Lois Johnson, Pearl Johnson, Margaret McDowell, Hester Knepper.

The 3rd and 4th grades are making spring posters and have worked two new sandtable problems, one a Japanese village, the other a Sahara desert scene.

The 3rd grade is having a star contest in spelling to see who can have the most stars each month. They are doing fine.

The Health Crusade charts for the 3rd and 4th grades turned in for approval by the teacher and the children are fine. Gold pins were won by Billie Wilmot, Edna Stanton, Arios Crocker, Lillian Long, Iva Johnson, George Bailey, Archie Candler, Burton Forest, Eloise Kelly, Muriel Crocker, Helen Clem, Charls Cox, Howard Dammarell, Mattie Reid, Elbert Long, Juanita Stanton, Leora Aiken.

School Carnival a Success

The big carnival and animal show given by the Kendrick high school at the auditorium last Friday evening, was a great success, both socially and financially. In spite of the unfavorable weather a large crowd was present and spent a jolly evening—and $70. The net proceeds were about $40.

The admission charge of one pie for each lady, resulted in a collection of pastry that was enough for everyone and some to spare. Prof. Carlisle acted as auctioneer and his ability along that line was most favorably demonstrated. He certainly "raked in the coin", and as an auctioneer has no superior in these parts.

There were many amusing features in the carnival and "eats" galore. It was a good show and worth the price.

To Ship Theater Equipment

G. G. Oldfield will leave today for Cheney where he will pack his theater equipment and get it ready for immediate shipment to Kendrick. He has all the fixtures necessary for a strictly up-to-date theater, including opera chairs, motor-driven machine, ventilating system, lighting fixtures, etc. The equipment will be installed in the "New Kendrick" theater as soon as the building has been completed, which will be sometime the middle of next month. The opening show will be given Friday night, April 28th.

More than ordinary stress will be laid upon the matter of clean-up week, this spring. Mayor Walker has issued a proclamation in this issue of the Gazette in which he emphasizes the importance of thoroughly cleaning up the town. It is of importance both from the standpoint of sanitation and beautifying the property. A special effort will be made to see that all yards are put in first class condition. Every resident who has charge of any piece of property should take enough interest and have pride in the town to the extent of putting the property in good condition. Clean-up week will be observed generally all over the state during the week of April 9. It is to be hoped that at the end of clean-up week the town will have taken on a neater appearance.

According to news dispatch Tuesday, the police department of New York City was ordered to arrest any proprietor or manager of a hotel, cabaret or other place of public entertainment, who permits women to smoke publicly in his establishment. Just why the same rule is not applied to the men has not been stated. If it is an offense punishable by law for a woman to smoke in a public place, it should be a like offense for a man. It seems impossible to imagine why there should be any distinction drawn. It is surely no greater crime for a woman to drink moonshine, smoke or chew tobacco than for a man to do so. It hasn't been customary—that's all. We're not a suffragette, either.

A Chicago judge sentenced a man to take his own wife to the movies every Saturday night and to church every Sunday. That judge believes in inflicting heavy penalties.

It won't be long until it will be possible for politicians to transmit campaign speeches for miles around by means of wireless. There are hundreds of receiving stations but few sending stations, so there will be little chance for disturbing arguments.

Star-Mirror: With open charges of immorality and drunkenness among the pupils of the Spokane high schools staring the school board in the face, the need for a public investigation is felt, but the responsible men of the community refuse to act on the committee. It is a bad mess and a difficult one to handle. As The Star-Mirror suggested recently, while there are cases where parents are unable to curb the tendencies of their children, and always will be, it is nevertheless probable that in a majority of cases the parents have not given the attention to their children that they should and have allowed them, during the formative period of life, to go their own sweet way, without pointing out to them the paths of wrong and danger.

Kamiah Progress: They say the moonshiners and bootleggers are getting so thick around Kamiah that the price of the stuff has fallen almost below production cost and the salesmen are so numerous they have adopted the wearing of a small cork in their buttonholes to keep from soliciting business from each other.

Big Bear Ridge

Chas. Elliott was called to the Leonard Davis home near Leland, Monday, by the serious illness of his wife.

Dan Jones arrived here from Kellogg, Idaho, for a visit with friends.

Gabriel Forest spent last week in Spokane with his sister Miss Bertina.

Mrs. Will Hecht and daughter, Miss Ruby, are spending the week in Lewiston where Ruby is under a doctor's care.

Miss Ruth Dammarell closed a successful term of school at the Applequist school, Friday, and has returned to her home in Kendrick.

Mr. and Mrs. Hartwick Nelson departed Wednesday for their home at Agawam, Montana, having spent the past three months with relatives here.

Otto Gladden of Coeur d'Alene was a recent visitor here.

There will be a Literary program at the Community Hall, Saturday evening, April 1st.

Mr. and Mrs. Rufus May were Lewiston visitors the first of the week.

Miss Mary Galloway spent last week with her sister, Mrs. Chas. Bowers.

FAILURE OF SWINE TO MATE

It May Be Caused by Improper Functioning of System Brought About by Improper Feed.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Failure in the ability or desire of swine to reproduce may be caused by any of several conditions, say specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture. It may result from a disease or injury that seriously affects or destroys the secretory reproductive organs. It may be caused by improper functioning of the system, which in turn is often brought about by unsuitable feed or faulty elimination of waste products, or it may be due to a general lowering of body vitality.

There are also cases of sterility or impotence for which definite causes are difficult to find. Failure to breed quite frequently occurs in boars and sows which have been fitted and kept in high condition for show purposes. In some instances the sow fails to come in heat, or perhaps indicates that she is in heat and is successfully served by the boar without resulting conception. In other cases the boar shows no desire to mate, or acts ineffectively.

The first step in overruling the trouble is to find a positive cause, when possible, by making a thorough examination. This should include a search for physical defects, the presence of disease, the results of injuries, or lowered vitality from any cause.

When, from such examination, it appears that proper treatment will prove successful, remedies should be administered promptly. But if the cause is obscure, or if there is little likelihood of correcting the defect successfully, it is best to remove the animal from the breeding herd. Boars may be castrated and fitted for slaughter as market hogs. Similarly, sows should be discarded when they become uncertain breeders.

When there is no apparent cause for failure of swine to mate, experts of the United States Department of Agriculture frequently have observed a lazy or sluggish temperament. These hogs generally are of the type known as "hot-bloods." They are fat and show an unwillingness to exercise. The tendency is more common in mature hogs and increases with age, but is frequently found in young stock. Careless and unwise inbreeding practices tend to produce hogs of this type, but inbreeding does not necessarily bring about the condition.

When the lack of sexual vigor is seen in only an occasional animal it may be possible to recognize the fault in blood lines or type. But when failure to mate occurs frequently and when the type is right, the indications are that the system of management is fundamentally wrong.

Upon the appearance of this condition an effort should be made to correct it by a restriction or modification of the diet and an abundance of exercise. The ration must have the fat-producing feeds largely reduced and

How to Be Healthy

The Crusade of the Double Barred Cross
Practical Talks on Disease Prevention

Prepared by the
IDAHO ANTI-TUBERCULOSIS ASS'N

(Practically every adult person is infected with tuberculosis. This infection need not be a source of danger. To keep the latent infection from becoming disease, bodily resistance must be kept at its best. This series of articles shows you how to keep healthy.)

No. 3. BUILDING RESISTANCE

PROF. ALLEN K. KRAUSE, M. D.,
Johns Hopkins University Medical School, Baltimore.

MAN is the only animal that habitually and unnecessarily uses his bodily functions to excess—in overwork, overplay, overexercise, overworry, in prolonged mental and emotional stress, in unnatural hours of activity without rest. And being organized into communities, men herd together and thus establish continual contact with one another and become unduly exposed to one another's infections.

In most men's bodies are little growths of tissue called tubercles in which lie concealed the germs of tuberculosis. These tubercles form spherical walls around the germs, called tubercle bacilli, and thus imprison the germs. As long as the wall is strong and unbroken the germs cannot spread; they cause no illness and are no more to be feared than a common wart or a mole in the skin.

If the tissues around the tubercles function normally, these walls tend to remain strong and so tight that few or no bacilli can make their way out of them and spread throughout the body. But too prolonged activity of the body as a whole, or of the part in which may be the tubercles, will in general bring about conditions that favor the weakening of the tubercle wall and the emergence of bacilli.

We heal tuberculosis by rest—of a knee, of the lungs, of the whole body. We become ill with tuberculosis by reason of overstrain. Other diseases, especially those that cause inflammations and congestions in the lungs, whip up the physiological activities of the body and throw a strain upon the walls of tubercles. So do certain bodily activities, like repeated and long-continued work without sleep, pregnancy, childbirth, dissipation, etc.

The point where activity becomes overstrain is an individual affair. The miner, the broker, the farmer, the school teacher, might every one of them become fatigued by the other's ordinary labor. The phlegmatic and the irritable, the beefy and the wiry, respond very differently to the same stimulus, whether this be play, labor, exercise or dissipation. Every man's point of fatigue is his own, registered in his own consciousness by sensations that all have experienced. Every rational man knows when he is tired or experience soon teaches him what will make him tired. And no rational man should push himself beyond this point unless he must.

To reduce exposure to all infections to a minimum and to balance one's activities so there will always be a healthy surplus on the credit side of rest, nay, more, a good reserve to draw upon in time of need—this is building up resistance. At thirty we build it a little differently than at twenty, at forty again differently than at thirty; there is a different proportion of details, yet principles and details remain the same.

Food, clean air, adequate clothing, decent hours of sleep, conserve and promote health—the normal body. But the normal machine was built for one man power and a too persistent effort to squeeze out more will sooner or later mean an overheated boiler and outworn gears; rusted, roughened and thinned out metal, and then—the collapse or the explosion. Then may an insignificant little tubercle become ablaze.

quantities will be found satisfactory for a yard 25 by 30 feet: Wheat, 2½ pounds; oats, 1½ pounds; rye, 3½ pounds; rape, 5 ounces. When the growing stuff reaches a height of 3 to 4 inches the hens can be turned upon it and the other yard be similarly sown.

Where it is inadvisable to divide the yard it is possible to keep a supply of green stuff growing by using a wooden frame 2 or 3 inches high covered with 1-inch-mesh wire. A frame made of 1 by 2-inch lumber, 6 feet long and 3 feet wide, with an additional piece across the center to support the wire when the hens stand on it, will be found desirable for a small yard. A part of the yard as large as this frame is spaded up and sown, the frame placed over it, and the material allowed to grow. As soon as the green sprouts reach the wire the hens

By maintaining the digestive functions in a proper manner, by causing abundant exercise and by supplying proper nourishment, there will be brought about a proper elimination of the body wastes and a rebuilding of the tissues. This should cause the reproductive organs to function properly and bring about a toning up of the system in such manner that breeding operations will be successfully conducted.

Swine breeders must be alert to the necessity for ruggedness in herd boars in addition to other qualifications. Breeders must refrain also from too great a degree of fineness and smoothness in the selection of their breeding animals, or loss of breeding power will ultimately develop in their herds.

GOOD FENCES ARE REQUIRED

Fowls Running at Large Destroy Gardens and Flower Beds—Confine Them in Yards.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Confine the back-yard flock; otherwise the hens will stray into neighbors' yards and gardens, where they may cause damage and are almost sure to cause ill feeling. The yard should be enclosed by a board or wire fence. Wire fencing is preferable, as it is cheaper and the hens are less likely to fly over it, say poultry specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture. If cats prove troublesome where one is raising chickens, it may be necessary to cover the top of the yard with wire also. A board should not be used at the top of a wire fence, as this gives the hens a visible place to alight and tends to teach them to fly over.

A 5-foot fence is high enough for most conditions, but if the hens show a tendency to fly over such a fence the flight feathers of one wing should be clipped. Leghorns need a 6-foot fence. The larger the yard which can be provided the better the hens will do, as it not only gives them greater opportunity to exercise, but also makes it possible to maintain a sod on the yard. In most cases not enough land will be available so that a sod can be maintained.

If the yard is fairly large, it can be divided into two parts and green crops, such as oats, wheat, rye, or Dwarf Essex rape allowed to start in one yard while the hens are confined to the other. The green crops should be sown very thick, and the following will begin to pick them off, but since they cannot eat them down to the roots the sprouts will continue to grow and supply green material. This frame can be moved from place to place in the yard, and in this way different parts cultivated.

The yard should be stirred or spaded up frequently, if not in sod, in order to keep it in the best condition. This will not only tend to keep down any odors which might arise, but also allow the droppings to be absorbed into the soil more readily, and, therefore, keep the yard in better condition for the hens.

Although it is necessary to keep the hens confined to their yard most of the time, it is sometimes possible to let them out where they may range upon the lawn for an hour or so in the evening when some one can be at hand to watch them or at certain seasons of the year to allow them to run in the garden plot. This will be enjoyed greatly by the hens and will be very beneficial to them.

You will want a silo this year. See J. C. Hamil about the H. L. F. and the free roof offer. Silos are cheaper this year. Order early. J. C. Hamil, Phone 3425, Juliaetta, Idaho. 9

Webster —Man's Man

By PETER B. KYNE

of the Giants," etc.

(Copyright, by Peter B. Kyne)

CHAPTER XIV.—The morning of the revolution Webster takes Dolores aboard the American steamer Estrellita, where she can remain in safety. As an American citizen he believes it his duty to take no part in the conflict. Cafferly, after being in the thick of it, returns to the ship to tell Webster of the progress of the revolution, which promises an early victory for the forces of Ricardo Ruy.

CHAPTER XV.—Dolores and Webster, with Cafferly, return to the city. Dolores meets Mother Jenks and the two proceed to succor the wounded. On their way to the president's palace Webster and Cafferly meet a party of President Sarros' guards, and in the fight Webster is wounded and Cafferly dies saving the life of the man he loved. Webster is found and ministered to by Dolores and Mother Jenks.

"They're both outside now. They must have gone looking for you, because they found you and Don Juan first and then told me about it."

"Who told you?"
"Mother Jenks."
"Oh! Well, run along and get your man."

Ricardo departed on the run, taking the sentry at the door with him and in his haste giving no thought to Mother Jenks and her companion waiting for the doctor's verdict. In the palace grounds he gathered two more men and bade them follow him; leading by twenty yards, he emerged at the gate and paused to look around him.

Some hundred feet down the street from the palace gate Sarros' bay charger lay dead. When Webster's bullet brought the poor beast down, his rider had fallen clear of him, only to fall a victim to the ferocity of Don Juan Cafetero. Later, as Sarros lay stunned and bleeding beside his mount, the stricken animal in its death-struggle had half risen, only to fall again, this time on the extended left leg of his late master; consequently when Sarros recovered consciousness following the thoughtful attentions of his assailant, it was to discover himself a hopeless prisoner. The heavy carcass of his horse plinned his foot and part of his leg to the ground, rendering him as helpless and desperate as a trapped animal.

For several minutes now he had been striving frantically to release himself; with his sound right leg pressed against the animal's backbone he tried to gain sufficient purchase to withdraw his left leg from the carcass.

As Ricardo caught sight of Sarros he instinctively realized that this was his mortal enemy; motioning his men to stand back, he approached the struggling man on tiptoe and thoughtfully possessed himself of the dictator's pistol, which lay in back of him, but not out of reach. Just as he did so, Sarros, apparently convinced of the futility of his efforts to free himself, surrendered to fate and commenced rather pitifully to weep with rage and despair.

Ricardo watched him for a few seconds, for there was just sufficient of the blood of his Castilian ancestors still in his veins to render this sorry spectacle rather an enjoyable one to him. Besides, he was 50 per cent Iberian, a race which can hate quite as thoroughly as it can love, and for a time Ricardo even nourished the thought of still further indulging his thirst for revenge by pretending to aid Sarros in his escape! Presently, however, he put the ungenerous thought from him; seizing the dead horse by the tail, he dragged the carcass off his enemy's leg, and while Sarros sat up, tailor-fashion, and commenced to rub the circulation back into the bruised member, Ricardo seated himself on the rump of the dead horse and appraised his prisoner critically.

Sarros glanced up, remembered his manners and very heartily and gracefully thanked his deliverer.

"It is not a matter for which thanks are due me, Sarros," Ricardo replied coldly. "I am Ricardo Ruiz Ruy, and I have come back to Sobrante to pay my father's debt to you. You will remember having forced the obligation upon me in the cemetery some fifteen years ago."

For perhaps ten horrified seconds Sarros stared at Ricardo; then the dark blood in him came to his defense; his tense pose relaxed; the fright and despair left his swarthy countenance as if erased with a moist sponge, leaving him as calmly stoical and indifferent as a clearstone Indian. He fumbled in his coat pocket for a gold cigarette case, selected a cigarette, lighted it and blew smoke at Ricardo. The jig was up; he knew it; and with admirable nonchalance he declined to lower his presidential dignity by discussing or considering it. He realized it would delight his captor to know he dreaded to face the issue, and it was not a Sarros practice to give aid and comfort to the enemy.

"Spunky devil!" Ricardo reflected, forced to admiration despite himself. A loud he said: "You know the code of our people, Sarros. An eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth," Sarros bowed. "I am at your service," he replied carelessly.

"Then at daylight tomorrow morning I shall make settlement," Ricardo beckoned his men to approach. "Take this man and confine him under a double guard in the arsenal," he ordered. "Present my compliments to the officer in charge there and tell him it is my wish that a priest be provided for the prisoner tonight, and that tomorrow morning, at six o'clock, a detail of six men and a sergeant escort this man to the cemetery in the rear of the Cathedral de la Cruz. I will meet the detail there and take command of it."

Two of Ricardo's imported fighting men stepped to the prisoner's side, seized him, one by each arm, and lifted him to his feet; supported between them, he limped away to his doom, while his youthful conqueror remained seated on the dead horse, his gaze bent upon the ground, his mind dwelling, not upon his triumph over Sarros but upon the prodigious proportions of the task before him; the rehabilitation of a nation. After a while he rose and strolled toward the gate, where he paused to note the grim evidences of the final stand of Webster and Don Juan Cafetero before passing through the portal.

Ricardo had now, for the first time, an opportunity to look around him; so he halted to realize his homecoming, to thrill with this, the first real view of the home of his boyhood. The spacious lawn surrounding the palace had been plowed and scarred with bursting shrapnel from the field guns captured in the arsenal, although the building itself had been little damaged, not having sustained a direct hit because of Ricardo's stringent orders not to use artillery on the palace unless absolutely necessary to smoke Sarros out. Scattered over the grounds Ricardo counted some twenty-odd government soldiers, all wearing that pathetically flat, crumpled appearance which seems inseparable from the bodies of men killed in action. The first shrapnel had probably commenced to drop in the grounds just as a portion of the palace garrison had been marching out to join the troops fighting at the cantonment barracks. Evidently the men had scattered like quail, only to be killed as they ran.

From this grim scene Ricardo raised his eyes to the palace, the castellated towers of which, looming through the tufted palms, were reflecting the setting sun. Over the balustrade of one of the upper balconies the limp body of a Sarros sharpshooter, picked off from the street, drooped grotesquely, his arms hanging downward as if in ironical welcome to the son of Ruy the Beloved. The sight induced in Ricardo a sense of profound sadness; his Irish imagination awoke; to him that mute figure seemed to call upon him for pity, for kindness, for forbearance, for understanding and sympathy. Those outflung arms of the martyred peon symbolized to Ricardo Ruy the spirit of liberty, shackled and helpless, calling upon him for deliverance; they brought to his alert mind a clearer realization of the duty that was his than he had ever had before. He had a great task to perform, a task inaugurated by his father, and which Ricardo could not hope to finish in his lifetime. He must solve the agrarian problem; he must develop the rich natural resources of his country; he must provide free, compulsory education and evolve from the ignorance of the peon an intelligence that would build up that which Sobrante, in common with her sister republics, so wickedly lacked—the great middle class that stands always as a buffer between the aggression and selfishness of the upper class and the helplessness and childishness of the lower.

Ricardo bowed his head. "Help me, O Lord," he prayed. "Thou hast given me in Thy wisdom a man's task. Help me that I may not prove unworthy."

Mother Jenks, grown impatient at the lack of news concerning Webster, left Dolores to her grief in the room across the hall and sought the open air, for of late she had been experiencing with recurring frequency a slight feeling of suffocation. She sat down on the broad granite steps, helped herself to a much-needed "bracer" from her brandy flask and was gazing pensively at the scene around her when Ricardo came up the stairs.

"Elo!" Mother Jenks saluted him. "We're 'ave you been, Mr. Bowers?"

"I have just returned from capturing Sarros, Mrs. Jenks. He is on his way to the arsenal under guard."

"Gor! strike me pink!" the old lady cried. "Ave I lived to see this day!" Her face was wreathed in a happy smile. "I wonder 'ow the beggar feels to 'ave the shoe on the other foot, eh—the 'earless 'ound; I'm 'opin' this General Ruy will 'ave the blighter shot."

"You need have no worry on that score, Mrs. Jenks. I'm General Ruy. Andrew Bowers was just my summer name, as it were."

"Angels guard me! Wot the bloom-in' 'ell surprise won't we 'ave next. Wot branch of the Ruy tribe do you belong to? Are you a nephew o' him that was president before Sarros shot 'im? Antonio Ruy, who was 'arf brother to the president, 'ad a son 'e called Ricardo. Are you 'im, might I ask?"

"I am the son of Ricardo the Beloved," he answered proudly.

"Not the lad as was away at school when 'is father was beheaded?"

"I am that same lad, Mrs. Jenks. And who are you? You seem to know a deal of my family history."

"I," the old publican replied with equal pride, "am Mrs. Col. 'Emery Jenks, who was your father's chief of artillery an' 'ad the hextremer honor o' dyn' in front of the same wall with 'im. By the w'y, 'ow's Mr. Webster?" she added, suddenly remembering the subject closest to her heart just then.

"His wounds are trifling. He'll live, Mrs. Jenks."

"Well, that's better than gettin' poked in the eye with a sharp stick," the old dame decided philosophically.

"Do you remember my little sister, Mrs. Jenks?" Ricardo continued. "She was in the palace when Sarros attacked it; she perished there."

"I believe I 'ave got a slight recollection o' the nipper, sir," Mother Jenks answered cautiously. To herself she said: "I s'y, 'Enrietta, 'ere's a pretty go. 'E don't know the lamb is livin' an' in the next room! My word, wot a riot w'en 'e meets 'er!"

"I will see you again, Mrs. Jenks. I must have a long talk with you," Ricardo told her, and passed on into the palace; whereupon Mother Jenks once more fervently implored the Almighty to strike her pink, and the iron restraint of a long, hard, exciting day being relaxed at last, the good soul bowed her gray head in her arms and wept, moving her body from side to side in particular, a single legitimate reason why she, a blooming old baggage and not fit to live, should be the recipient of such manifold blessings as this day had brought forth.

In the meantime Ricardo, with his hand on the knob of the door leading to the room where Webster was having his wounds dressed, paused suddenly, his attention caught by the sound of a sob, long-drawn and inexpressibly pathetic. He listened and made up his mind that a woman in the room across the entrance hall was bewailing the death of a loved one who answered to the name of Caliph and John, darling. Further eavesdropping convinced him that Caliph, John, darling, and Mr. John Stuart Webster were one and the same person, and so he tilted his head on one side like a cock robin and considered.

"By jingo, that's most interesting," he decided. "The wounded hero has a sweetheart or a wife—and an American, too. She must be a recent acquisition, because all the time we were together on the steamer coming down here he never spoke of either, despite the fact that we got friendly enough for such confidences. Something funny about this. I'd better sound the old boy before I start passing out words of comfort to that unhappy female."

He passed on into the room. John Stuart Webster had, by this time, been washed and bandaged, and one of the Sarros servants (for the ex-dictator's retinue still occupied the palace) had, at Dr. Pacheco's command, prepared a guest chamber upstairs and furnished a night gown of ample proportions to cover Mr. Webster's bebandaged but otherwise naked person. A stretcher had just arrived, and the wounded man was about to be carried upstairs. The late financial backer of the revolution was looking very pale and dispirited; for once in his life his whimsical, bantering nature was subdued. His eyes were closed, and he did not open them when Ricardo entered.

"Well, I have Sarros," the latter declared.

Webster paid not the slightest attention to this announcement. Ricardo bent over him. "Jack, old boy," he queried, "do you know a person of feminine persuasion who calls you Caliph?"

John Stuart Webster's eyes and mouth flew wide open. "What the devil!" he tried to roar. "You haven't been speaking to her, have you? If you have, I'll never forgive you, because you've spoiled my little surprise party."

"No, I haven't been speaking to her, but she's in the next room crying fit to break her heart because she thinks you've been killed."

"You scoundrel! Aren't you human? Go tell her it's only a couple of punctures, not a blowout!" He sighed. "Isn't it sweet of her to weep over an old hunk like me!" he added softly. "Bless her tender heart!"

"Who is she?" Ricardo was very curious.

"That's none of your business. You wait and I'll tell you. She's the guest I told you I was going to bring to dinner, and that's enough for you to know for the present. Vaya, you idiot, and get her in here, so I can assure her my head is bloody but unbowed. Do—throw that rug over my shanks and make me look pretty. I'm going to receive company."

His glance, bent steadily on the door, had in it some of the alert, bright wisdom frequently to be observed in the eyes of a terrier standing expectantly before a rat hole. The instant the door opened and Dolores' tear-stained face appeared, he called to her with the old-time camaraderie, for he had erased from his mind, for the nonce, the memory of the tragedy of poor Don Juan Cafetero and was concerned solely with the task of banishing the tears from those brown eyes and bringing the joy of life back to that sweet face.

"Hello, Seeress," he called weakly. "Little Johnny's been fighting again, and the bad boys gave him an all-fired wallop."

There was a swift rustle of skirts, and she was bending over him, her hot little palms clasping eagerly his pale, rough cheeks. "Oh, my dear, my dear!" she whispered, and then her voice choked with the happy tears and she was sobbing on his wounded shoulder. Ricardo stooped to draw her away, but John Stuart bent upon him a look of such frightfulness that he drew back abashed. After all, the past 24 hours had been quite exciting, and Ricardo reflected that John's inamorata was tired and frightened and probably hadn't eaten anything all day long, so there was ample excuse for her hysteria.

"Come, come, buck up," Webster soothed her, and helped himself to a long whiff of her fragrant hair. "Old man Webster had one leg in the grave, but they've pulled it out again."

Still she sobbed.

"Now, listen to me, lady," he commanded with mock severity. "You just stop that. You're wasting your sympathy; and while, of course, I enjoy your sympathy a heap, just pause to reflect on the result if those salt tears should happen to drop into one of my numerous wounds."

"I'm so sorry for you, Caliph," she murmured brokenly. "You poor, harmless boy! I don't see how any one could be so fiendish as to hurt you when you were so distinctly a non-combatant."

"Thank you. Let us forget The Hague conference for the present, however. Have you met your brother?" he whispered.

"No, Caliph."
"Ricardo."
"Yes, Jack."

"Come here. Rick, you scheming, unscrupulous, blood-thirsty adventurer, I have a tremendous surprise in store for you. The sweetest girl in the world—and she's right here—"

Ricardo laughingly held up his hand. "Jack, my friend," he interrupted, "you're too weak to make a speech. Don't do it. Besides, you do not have to." He turned and bowed gracefully to Dolores. "I can see for myself she's the sweetest girl in the world, and that she's right here." He held out his hand to her. "Jack thinks he's going to spring a surprise," he continued maliciously, "quite forgetting that a good soldier never permits himself to be taken by surprise. I know all about his little secret, because I heard you mourning for him when you thought he was dead." Ricardo favored her with a knowing wink. "I am delighted to meet the future Mrs. Webster. I quite understand why you fell in love with him, because, you see, I love him myself and so does everybody else."

With typical Castilian courtliness he took her hand, bowed low over it, and kissed it. "I am Ricardo Ruiz Ruy," he said, anxious to spare his friend the task of further exhausting conversation. "And you are—"

"You're a consummate jackass!" groaned Webster. "I'm only a dear old family friend, and Dolores is going to marry Billy Geary. You impetuous idiot! She's your own sister, Dolores Ruy. She, Mark Twain, and I have ample cause for common complaint against the world because the reports of our death have been grossly exaggerated. She didn't perish when your father's administration crumbled. Miss Ruy, this is your brother, Ricardo. Kiss her you damn' fool—forgive me, Miss Ruy—oh, Lord, nothing matters any more. He's gummed everything up and ruined my party. I wish I were dead."

Ricardo stared from the outraged Webster to his sister and back again.

"Jack Webster," he declared, "you aren't crazy, are you?"

"Of course, he is—the old dear," Dolores cried happily, "but I'm not." She stepped up to her brother, and her arms went around his neck. "Oh, Rick," she cried, "I'm your sister. Truly, I am."

"Dolores. My little lost sister, Dolores? Why, I can't believe it!"

"Well, you'd better believe it," John Stuart Webster growled feebly. "Of course, you can doubt my word and get away with it, now that I'm flat on my back, but if you dare cast aspersions on that girl's veracity, I'll murder you a month from now."

He closed his eyes, feeling instinctively that he ought not spy on such a sacred family scene. When, however, the affecting meeting was over and Dolores was ruffling the Websterian forehead while her brother pressed the Websterian hand and tried to say all the things he felt, but couldn't express, John Stuart Webster brought them both back to a realization of present conditions.

"Don't thank me, sir," he piped in pathetic imitation of the small boy of melodrama. "I have only done me duty, and for that I cannot accept this purse of gold, even though my father and mother are starving."

DAIRY FACTS

SUCCULENT FEED FOR DAIRY
Modern Machinery for Planting and Cultivating Roots Makes Work Less Laborious.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
With the development of the silo many dairy cow owners have overlooked the value of roots as a succulent feed for cattle. Mangel-wurzel, beets, carrots, and turnips are the principal roots grown for this purpose. They are particularly adapted to the cooler and more moist portions of the country. The principal drawback to their use is the labor of growing, harvesting and storing them. On the other hand, say specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture, root crops have a distinct advantage for small dairies, as it is generally accepted that a silo will not prove economical where less than six animals are being fed. Roots may be stored in a proper cellar, or buried in the ground, and can be taken out in any desired quantity without injury to the remainder.

A surprising amount of roots can be produced on a small acreage. A yield of 25 tons per acre of mangel-wurzels is nothing unusual, while in England, where roots are used almost entirely to supply succulent food, the yield per acre is increased still further by intensive farming.
Other kinds of beets, and also turnips and carrots, may be used. Turnips, however, should be fed after milking rather than before, as they give a bad flavor to the product. Yellow carrots impart a desirable color to the milk. For feeding purposes the mangels will probably be found the most practical beet. Among carrots, the Long Orange is recommended because of its large size and heavy yield. It forms a long, thick root, and is very easily grown. The White Vosges or Belgian is grown exclusively for stock, and is an even heavier yielder. The rutabaga is recommended as a good turnip. The same soils and methods of cultivating are adapted to all three kinds of roots.

The soil should be well enriched, and should be one that warms up quickly in the spring. Most growers regard sandy loam as best adapted to the culture of root crops, this being particularly true of the early spring crop.

An Acre or Two of Roots Will Feed a Small Dairy Herd.

For later crops heavy soils can be employed, and muck soils are widely used for the midsummer and fall crops. Land that is in good physical condition as the result of early and proper handling, well supplied with available plant food and rich in organic matter, is essential to best results. Applications of stable manure at the rate of 20 to 30 tons per acre are advisable, and this may profitably be supplemented by the use of commercial fertilizer containing at least 2 per cent nitrogen, 8 per cent phosphoric acid, and 4 per cent potash.

The seed is sown in rows at least 30 inches apart if horse cultivation is practiced, but under hand cultivation they need not be more than 15 to 18 inches. Ordinarily about 6 pounds of beet seed per acre is required. Seed is ordinarily covered to a depth of 3/4 to 1 inch. As beet seed is rather slow in germination, the practice of sowing some quick-sprouting seed along with it is sometimes followed. These plants serve as markers for the rows before the beets are up, so that cultivation may be begun before the beets show above the ground. Radishes are frequently used for this purpose.

Beet seeds come in clusters, and it is inevitable that thinning by hand will be required.

Roots intended for winter storage are allowed to stand in the field until just before heavy autumn frosts occur, when they are pulled and stored in pits or cellars, requiring much the same treatment as potatoes and similar root crops.

From 20 to 35 pounds of sliced or pulped roots, with a proper grain ration and dry foliage, is a day's ration for an ordinary dairy cow. Thus it will be seen that 2 1/2 tons will carry a cow through the usual five-months' winter feeding period. An acre or two of beets, carrots and turnips should be enough to supply any herd which is not large enough to make a silo profitable. With the development of the sugar-beet industry many implements and methods of culture have been devised which reduce the labor required to grow root crops.

GERMAN FIRE MONEY

Europe is doing strange things with paper currency these days. Here is an issue of paper money in small denominations to cover losses by fire, just issued by the municipality of Wafungen, Germany. The fifty-pfenning note shows a picture of the town; the seventy-five-pfenning notes picture the fire in progress and the resulting ruins.

Monkey Bread.

Monkey bread comes from a native tree of tropical Africa and the East Indies that is more properly called adansonia. The fruit of this tree is about the size of a citron, and the bruised leaves are often mixed with the food of inhabitants of tropical Africa for their medicinal value.

$525 IN PRIZES FOR THE BEST RHYMES

A new contest is just being started which will interest every woman and girl who reads this paper. Any woman or girl can enter this Contest—anyone can win! All it is necessary to do is to write a 4-line rhyme on Dr. Price's Phosphate Baking Powder, using only the words which appear either on the label of the Dr. Price can (front and back) or on the printed slip which is found in each Dr. Price can.

Isn't that easy? Everyone likes to make rhymes and here is a chance to spend a fascinating hour or two writing rhymes on this popular Baking Powder and perhaps winning a substantial prize for your efforts.

59 CASH PRIZES

For the rhyme selected as best a prize of $100 will be given; for the second, third and fourth best rhymes prizes of $75, $50, and $25, respectively will be given. And besides these prizes there will be 55 prizes of $5 each for the next 55 best rhymes. With such a long list of prizes as these, it would be a pity not to try your hand at it!

Here is a 4-line rhyme as an example:

Two teaspoons of this powder make
Biscuits, muffins, pie or cake,
The Price's Co., guarantee
No alum in the cans to be.

As Dr. Price's Phosphate Baking Powder sells for only 25 cents a 12 oz. can at grocery stores, some rhymes could play up the remarkable economy of this pure and wholesome baking powder which contains no alum.

All rhymes must be received by May 1, 1922. Only words appearing either on the label of the Dr. Price can (front and back) or on the printed slip contained inside the can may be used. These words may be used as often as desired, but no other words will be allowed. If you haven't a can of Dr. Price's, a copy of the label and the printed slip will be sent to you free upon request.

Any woman or girl may enter the Contest, but only one rhyme from each person will be considered. In case of ties, the full amount of the prize will be given to each tying contestant. Write plainly on only one side of a sheet of paper and be sure to give your name and address.

Send your rhyme before May 1st to Price Baking Powder Factory
1007 Independence Blvd., Chicago, Ill.

The electrically operated pump at Long's is giving excellent service. It is used to supply water for the ice machine. It pumps the water from a well into a tank and the water is then piped to the ice machine. The main difficulty encountered in installing the pump was to "speed it down" slow enough so that it wouldn't take too large a pipe to carry off the overflow. A float device was put in the tank so that if for any reason the pump stops, the city water will be turned on automatically. Unless the ice machine is supplied with plenty of cold water it will get red hot.

Some preliminary road work is being carried on both north and south of Kendrick. Rock work on the point north of the McCrea place is being done and Axel Swanson is putting in the fill that he started last fall.

Below town on the Powell hill a crew of men are working. They will put in a road bed not to exceed five per cent to take the place of the old grade that has been a barrier between Kendrick and Juliaetta. Bowers, Aiken and Bolon are doing the work on this piece of road.

The highway commissioners are definitely planning on grading and surfacing with crushed rock, the stretch of road from the Bear Creek bridge to the bridge at the mouth of Wandehar gulch. This is the most needed road work in the entire district as it has for many years been in the worst condition of any strip of road in the district.
