

NEWS NOTES FROM KENDRICK SCHOOLS

Cast Selected for the High School Play

A moving picture show will be given in the high school auditorium, Friday, April 7th. The pictures for that night are: Three reels of educational on our "National Parks" and the play, "The Fall of Troy". Admission will be 10 and 15 cents.

Arrangements are also being made for a regular moving picture show to be given two weeks from Friday.

Practice has begun on the high school play, "When a Feller Needs a Friend," under the direction of two of the high school faculty, Mr. Carlisle and Miss Dermott. The cast is as follows:

- Tom Denker, - Wayne Herres, an artist.
- Bob Mills, - Buford Hoggan, Magazine writer.
- Mrs. Reese, - Nell Ameling, Their landlady.
- Jerry Smith, - Walter May, Just returned from "Over There".
- Liz, - Elsie Bird, Mrs. Reese's stepdaughter.
- Bing Dickson, - Egnaz Flaig, Liz's study.
- William Dinker, - Rex Pickering, Tom's uncle.
- Alice King, - Reta Leith, Tom's Aunt.
- Elaine Lynne, - Beulah Long, Alice King's ward.
- Angela Scott, - Evelyn Hanson, Bob's fiancée.

There is some splendid work being done in manual training class; three of the boys are making Tennessee cedar chests valued at about $15 each, while the rest have been working on the swings which are being set up on the play grounds; the work on these swings is being somewhat delayed owing to weather conditions.

Two "New Home" sewing machines were added to the domestic science equipment of the school. The one machine was found to be inadequate for the 18 girls in this department. The girls have purchased an electric iron for use in this department. This they expect to pay for with the proceeds of a Candy Sale to be conducted by them at the opening of the new theater.

After Monday, April 10th, all school children re-entering school after an absence are required to bring a written excuse from their parents before they will be admitted.

The attendance has been unusually good this week and it is hoped that the parents will co-operate in keeping up this record during the epidemic of "Spring Fever."

Mrs. McConnell is giving the State Examinations to the eighth grade this week.

Those who won in the spelling contest last week in the third and fourth grades were: Howard Dammarell, Juanita Stanton, Eleanor Herres, Helen Clem, Ira Johnson.

Those who were neither tardy nor absent in the 3rd and 4th grades last month were: George Bailey, Arlos Crocker, Helen Clem, Eloise Kelley, Max Oldfield.

Wednesday evening the domestic science girls met at the home of Miss Dirks for the purpose of organizing a club. The initials "P. B." were adopted to represent the symbol of the club. Officers elected were as follows: President, Nell Ameling; vice-president, Nora Cox; secretary-treasurer, Violet Riley. Regular meetings will be held at the homes of the members.

Spring time is the glad time, "Whether we look or whether we listen we hear life murmur." The writer perhaps was thinking of James Russel Lowell and his immortal "Prelude", anyway, we do hear many voices in the spring, many different kinds; some good and some bad, some true and some false—rumors. The very winds carry them. We are not supposed to believe all we hear. If you want to know what the school is doing come and see, don't listen.

NEZ PERCE COUNTY SPELLING MATCH

Court Room Crowded With Contestants and Parents.

To spell correctly, at one sitting, over 700 words, and then fall down on "luxuriant" was the experience of Master John Mehl of Gifford, when he finally succumbed to Miss Evelyn Kress for third place in the county spelling contest held at the court house at Lewiston Saturday afternoon.

Taking part in the contest were 76 pupils from the grade schools of the county, who came to Lewiston the winners of the contests previously held in the thirteen districts into which the county had been divided. The children were divided into two classes, class No. 1 including the sixth, seventh and eighth grades, and class No. 2 the third, fourth and fifth grades.

Winners in class No. 1 were: First place, Dan Ziemann, Southwick, eighth grade; second place, Lyle Pontus, Lenore, second grade and third place, Evelyn Kress of Gifford. Winners in class No. 2 were: First, second and third, respectively, Margaret Walker, Myrtle; Oma Taylor, Lapwai and Vance Laramore, Culesac.

The winners in each class were awarded prizes of $5 for first place, $3 for second and $2 for third.

Miss Ethel Gilson, county superintendent of schools, expressed herself as greatly pleased with the improvement in spelling indicated in the contest. In class No. 1 fifteen youngsters tied for first place, where it has formerly been considered remarkable if seven or eight tied. In class No. 2, five were tied for first place.

Miss Pearl Tallman, of the Lewiston Normal school, was pronouncer in the contest. The Lewiston schools were not included in the bee, they being in an independent district.

During the contest, pupils of Mrs. Laura G. Reese, teacher of elocution gave a delightful program, those taking part being Fern Paulsen, Murice Evans, Charlotte Ulen, Alice Evans, Herbert Paulsen and May Parsons.

Musical numbers were furnished by the high school boys glee club.

The court room, in which the contest was held, was packed to the doors throughout the session, the crowd including both pupils and parents.

The Home Merchant

Mid pleasures and palaces though I may wend, I find the home merchant a much-valued friend. The mail-order catalogue woos me in vain for to pay-without-seeing may bring me a pain. The home merchant credits till pay-day arrives,—he knows all the whims of his friends and their wives. His overalls wear like the buck-skin of old,—his buttons ain't brass, if he tells you they're gold! Of every community he is a part, and even the kids know the path to his heart. He boost for the chapel, the lodge and the school,—"Community uplift" is ever his rule. And even the football and basketball teams, look kindly on him, in their athletic dreams. I'd rather have him at my elbow each day, than to deal with a shark, many furlongs away. Let's make the thing mutual, and stand by our friend,—there's no place like home, for the money we spend!—Selected.

Bought Potlatch Eighty

Herman Meyer of Cameron recently closed a deal for the purchase of eighty acres of farm land near Cameron. The place was bought from Mrs. Elizabeth Lange Renner, now living in Germany, the deal being made through her attorneys in New York. During the war the land was confiscated by the alien property custodians and was recently returned to her.

MOSCOW TO HAVE COMMERCIAL RADIO

Apply For License--In Operation by July.

Application for a commercial radio license has been made by three Moscow young men to the department of commerce, bureau of navigation, at Washington, D. C. The young men, Jack Luallen, Kenneth House and Jack Woodworth, plan on having a completely equipped radio station in operation sometime in July. The station will have a good sending range of between 200 and 300 miles for broadcasting weather reports, market reports, reports from the University of Idaho extension service, and general commercial work. Reports can be received from any part of the United States.

Entertainments, such as orchestra concerts and vocal solos, can be received and sent by the local station.

The plant and equipment of the Moscow station will be valued at $1200 when completely installed. The present special licensed amateur station has been in operation for two years. Approximately $700 worth of equipment is to be purchased and the rest of the equipment is to be made.

Arrangements are being made with Dean E. J. Iddings of the University of Idaho, college of agriculture and director of the extension service for the sending out to all parts of the state the results of university experiments. Scout Executive F. D. Hawley of Latah and Whitman counties will use the station for sending scout news and instructions to boy scout troops in Pullman, Colfax, LaCrosse, Garfield, Tekoa, Paouise and Genesee.—Star-Mirror.

Census of Veterans

The national census of veterans of the World War, authorized by the American Legion, is now being conducted in this locality by the local Post. It is the desire of the Legion to have every veteran of the war enumerated, and it is distinctly to his advantage to be included in the census. When the census has been completed, national headquarters will have a concise and complete record of every man that was in the service. All ex-service men are urged to call upon Tom Long or George Carlson at the earliest opportunity so that the records may be completed without delay. Don't postpone this important matter, as it may prove of extreme value to you in later years.

Value of Peas For Feed

Results of an experiment in hog fattening started in 1915 by the department of animal husbandry at the University of Idaho to demonstrate the value of peas in feeding are announced. A comprehensive tabulation has been completed indicating precisely the returns from land devoted to this purpose.

Henry Mielke Married

Word was received from Henry Mielke, who is in the internal revenue service, that he had joined the ranks of the benedicts. He was married last month at Honolulu to Miss Potter, a nurse. Mr. and Mrs. Mielke have moved from Honolulu to San Francisco where they will make their home. Mr. Mielke is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Mielke of Cameron.

No Senior Class Play

Because of the fact that there are but four members in the senior class of the Kendrick high school, it has been decided to eliminate the senior class play and unite the entire efforts of the four classes in putting on a high school play, which will be given some time toward the middle of May. Last year there were so many school plays that they seriously interfered with the work of the students. Early in the year Prof. Daniel decided to have but one school play.

Letter From Holland

Miss Steward's class in English wrote letters some time ago to children in various foreign countries. The following reply to her letter was received by Dorothy Holt, from a seventeen-year-old girl in Holland:

Leiden, 14 chaart, 1922

Dear friend:

The letter, that you have written to the school at Leiden, have I read and I thank you much for it. I will tell you something of myself. I am seventeen years old and I sit in the ninth class (there are ten classes). The school is a large building and it is lying at the greatest street of the town. In the town are many shops and besides the town are grassfields with cows, horses, sheep and many flowers, the same flowers as you have in your country. In the spring here also are the snowdrops. In our country are no mountains, but hills near the sea (Novidree). There also are many rivers and lakes, where we sail with a sailing-boat, in the summer. My brother Harry, who is twenty-three years old, sails very well and we go, when we have a holiday. I have four sisters and two brothers. Have you also sisters? How many? I hope, that you will answer me speedy, when you have received my letter. In the following letter, I will send you some pictures from the town and a portrait from myself. I hope, you will write me soon, I remain yours truly,

Nell Vermey,

Land Deal This Week

It is reported that Fred Crocker bought the Harry Fowler ranch near Kendrick, this week, trading his Kendrick residence as part payment on the deal. The ranch comprises 70 acres of bench land about a mile from town.

CITY FATHERS MET TUESDAY EVENING

Paid Off Another Thousand Dollar Water Bond.

At the regular monthly meeting of the town council, a number of matters were discussed and disposed of, the session lasting until a late hour.

W. C. Housley, former marshal, officially turned over all of his vested authority to his successor, Joe Gardner. One of Mr. Gardner's first official acts was to present to the council a motely collection of shovels, relics of a pre-historic age which have been used here year after year until there was very little left of the original material from which they were made. The council, after due consideration, placed them upon the retired list.

A communication was received from A. V. Dunkle in which he brought to the attention of the council an electrically operated pipe locator. There is no map or outline of the Kendrick water system, so that it is often necessary in locating a pipe, to dig around at various spots until it is finally found. The pipe locator has a receiver similar to a telephone. When the locator is held over the ground under which the pipe is buried, it produces a buzzing sound. As soon as it is moved away from the pipe the buzzing stops. The decision as to whether the town should purchase the locator, was left to the water committee.

The council unanimously voted to pay another water bond. The original indebtedness was $5,000. This has now been reduced to $2,000, which amount will probably be paid off within the next year.

A. E. Wilcox, manager of the baseball team, asked that the council put a roof on the grand stand. After some discussion it was decided to first ascertain the cost of roof and what other work would have to be done, before taking final action on the matter.

One thousand feet of bridge plank were purchased from Fred Crocker, to be used in the construction of culverts and meter boxes.

After considerable discussion it was decided to buy a gun for the town marshal, which he will keep as long as he is an officer of the town. There being nothing further to bring before the council, the meeting adjourned.

Miller Won Match

The wrestling match between McLarnahan of Orofino and Miller of Kendrick, held here last Friday evening under the auspices of the American Legion, was won by Miller, only one fall being secured in an hour and twenty-two minutes. The match was scheduled for a time limit of one hour and a half. It was a fast exhibition, both men showing speed and endurance. Miller secured the fall with a head scissors and arm lock. It was a clean exhibition, neither men using rough tactics to mar the sport of the match.

After the match McLarnahan challenged Miller to another bout either here or any other place he might name. The American Legion had charge of the match but on account of the bad condition of the roads but few could get in from the country, the crowd was not as large as expected.

Baseball Dance Success

The baseball dance last Friday, given under the auspices of the American Legion was a success from every standpoint. The proceeds, approximately $100, were turned over to the baseball management. There was practically no expense involved in putting on the dance as the music, lunch, etc. were donated by the business men. The True Blue Biscuit Company of Spokane donated a nice box of chocolate eclairs for the occasion.

WENT BOATING ON RAGING POTLATCH

Kendrick Men Escape with Their Lives

"Hasty" Hanson and Walt McCrea, Jr., had a thrilling experience last Monday morning when they attempted to go from here to Lewiston in a rowboat. The boat capsized just opposite the McDowell place about half a mile below Kendrick spilling the two sailors into the icy water of the Potlatch. They can both swim like ducks which prevented a comedy from resulting in a tragedy.

Recently the two amateur sailors completed the building of a rowboat and with it their plans for making a voyage from the Potlatch metropolis to Idaho's only seaport town. It was to be a pleasure trip and the plans included nothing that would tend to mar the placid progress of their journey. They left port, and the cheers and well-wishes of their friends who went down to the dock to bid them their last good-byes.

For fully half a mile everything was lovely. They were both "sitting pretty" and calmly smoking their pipes when the boat drifted into an eddy and was capsized without warning or provocation. Walt was the first one to reach land. He looked around for his companion in distress, but could see nothing of him for some time. He began to worry for his safety, but his fears were banished when "Hasty" swam out from under a big drift where he had lodged.

Their lives being safe, nothing further was lacking to make them comfortable except a fire. They found after considerable exploring that they had landed upon an island, completely surrounded by water.

Their signals of distress were observed by E. E. McDowell who tied a rock to a bunch of matches and threw it to the island. Soon a roaring fire was dispelling the gloom.

After several of hours herculean efforts on the part of the population of the town, a tramway, made from a piece of cable and Otto Schupfer's telephone tram car, was constructed and the two adventurers arrived safely on the mainland. The boat, when last heard from, was still at the island.

Convicts Bestow Gifts

On leaving the state penitentiary at Walla Walla to enter private business, William G. Potts, retiring warden, was presented by convicts with a hand made morocco bound book containing the names of all inmates, together with a hand carved mahogany stand. Both gifts were entirely made by convicts.

Foreign Advertising Representative THE AMERICAN PRESS ASSOCIATION

Paper manufacturers are howling because German and Scandinavian newsprint is being imported into this country at $10 to $20 per ton under the domestic price. They say that to meet this price they would have to cut newsprint paper to less than production cost. During the war this grade of paper was sold to publishers at an advance of 600 per cent in price. Publishers generally over the country would, without doubt, derive some satisfaction in seeing these war-time profiteers suffer. They are still getting over 100 per cent more for newsprint than they did before war prices came into vogue.

One of the most despicable of God's creatures is a scandal-mongering gossip.

Several Kendrick citizens are talking home building but as yet have taken no definite action toward building. If someone would "break the ice" the town would probably experience considerable activity in building operations. More good houses are needed here.

Prof. Daniel stated this week that during the entire school year but five parents have visited any of the classes at school. What does this indicate—confidence in the present teaching force, or indifference?

Gentlemen, when you write an advertisement put into it at least enough thought to pay you for its production. Rest assured that no one will get more out of it than you put in. This is one thing which is worth doing well, if it is worth doing at all. Advertising pays if it sells the goods. A good salesman can sell goods; so can a good ad. Make it your business to get vitality in your advertising. Study this phase of your business as diligently as you do the buying of articles your customers will want. After you have composed a good ad, the next thing is to get it before the most people possible in your trade territory. They will read it.—Nez Perce Herald.

$525 IN PRIZES FOR THE BEST RHYMES

A new contest is just being started which will interest every woman and girl who reads this paper. Any woman or girl can enter this Contest—anyone can win! All it is necessary to do is to write a 4-line rhyme on Dr. Price's Phosphate Baking Powder, using only the words which appear either on the label of the Dr. Price can (front and back) or on the printed slip which is found in each Dr. Price can.

Isn't that easy? Everyone likes to make rhymes and here is a chance to spend a fascinating hour or two writing rhymes on this popular Baking Powder and perhaps winning a substantial prize for your efforts.

59 CASH PRIZES

For the rhyme selected as best a prize of $100 will be given; for the second, third and fourth best rhymes prizes of $75, $50, and $25, respectively will be given. And besides these prizes there will be 55 prizes of $5 each for the next 55 best rhymes. With such a long list of prizes as these, it would be a pity not to try your hand at it!

Here is a 4-line rhyme as an example:

Two teaspoons of this powder make
Biscuits, muffins, pie or cake,
The Price's Co., guarantee
No alum in the cans to be.

As Dr. Price's Phosphate Baking Powder sells for only 25 cents a 12 oz. can at grocery stores, some rhymes could play up the remarkable economy of this pure and wholesome baking powder which contains no alum.

All rhymes must be received by May 1, 1922. Only words appearing either on the label of the Dr. Price can (front and back) or on the printed slip contained inside the can may be used. These words may be used as often as desired, but no other words will be allowed. If you haven't a can of Dr. Price's, a copy of the label and the printed slip will be sent to you free upon request.

Any woman or girl may enter the Contest, but only one rhyme from each person will be considered. In case of ties, the full amount of the prize will be given to each tying contestant. Write plainly on only one side of a sheet of paper and be sure to give your name and address.

Send your rhyme before May 1st to Price Baking Powder Factory

FRESH GARBAGE SAVES COST

If Carefully Selected and Kept Free of Broken Glass and Tin 30 Per Cent Saving Made.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A practical manner of reducing the production costs of market eggs consists in feeding fresh garbage placed before the flock as soon as possible after it has been rejected from the table. Used judiciously it will reduce the cost of egg and meat production from 25 to 30 per cent. The garbage must be fresh and free from all fermentation and sourness. The intrinsic value of garbage as a poultry feed is due to the fact that it provides a varied ration which fits all the needs and requirements of the flock.

One explanation of why the small flock owner, with his backyard bevy of hens, secures heavy production of eggs, hinges around the fact that he emphasizes the use of table scraps in the ration. Similar results obtain where large commercial flocks are given access to daily allowances of sanitary, well-selected and palatable garbage. Although the character of garbage varies throughout the year, due to the fact that more succulent vegetables and fruits are used during the summer, this refuse is also a valuable substitute for costly grains and concentrates in the hen menu.

Unfortunate results which in some instances have followed the use of garbage are due to feeding a mixture of table scraps that was not carefully selected. Hens like fresh garbage, but are not able to digest scraps of tin, phonograph needles and similar foreign material. Unless such substances are separated from the garbage, disastrous results invariably follow and the poultryman soon abandons garbage feeding and condemns it as unsatisfactory. The Department of Agriculture recommends that fresh garbage be run through a meat or vegetable chopper, and mixed with a little ground feed before it is fed to the fowls.

As much of the table refuse should be fed as the flock will clean up with a relish in the course of an hour. All feed which the birds reject should be removed from the feeding pens or yards as soon as possible thereafter. Otherwise, it sores and contaminates the premises and, subsequently, if the fowls eat it invariably causes digestive troubles.

Where garbage is fed, it is also prerequisite to provide a light ration of grain twice daily, as well as to supply dry mash in a hopper before the flock. As a rule table scraps are rich in protein and only occasionally is it necessary to supplement the mash with approximately 5 per cent of meat meal. During the summer garbage decomposes and ferments quickly and it must be fed before it reaches this stage. The feeding of garbage is favored during cold weather because in the winter the refuse keeps better. Suburban flock-owners may often secure the garbage from neighboring families who do not keep hens. This source of feed may be so plentiful that the flock-owner can expand his hen-keeping operations and even afford to pay a small amount for the garbage.

Experiments in feeding garbage at the government experiment farm at Beltsville, Md., indicate that ten hens will consume about one quart of garbage daily. A suitable dry mash as a supplement to this garbage consists of three parts by weight of cornmeal, one part of bran, one part of middlings and 5 per cent of meat scraps. This mash is kept before the fowls all the time. If the table scraps contain much fruit and vegetable peelings, more mash should be added, while if the garbage consists chiefly of potato peelings, bread and meat less mash should be used. Care should be exercised to drain off soapy water or excess liquid from the garbage.

IMPROVED CRATE IS URGENT NEED

Manufacturers Should Make a More Rigid Inspection of Materials Put Into Boxes.

WATERPROOFING IS BIGGEST FACTOR

Consideration Should Be Given to Methods of Construction Which Will Lessen Possibility of Loss in Shipping.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Important factors affecting the successful use of crates in marketing fruits and vegetables were carefully studied by a specialist of the bureau of markets, United States Department of Agriculture, during a recent trip. The first of these is the need of manufacturers making a more rigid inspection of materials used.

While most manufacturers make an effort to have their stock inspected and to use only good material, in some cases this attempt is frustrated by the failure of the workman to understand and appreciate the ideal which is guiding his employer. Many crate-mill employees seem to cherish the old idea that because the crate is a gift package it should be made as cheaply as possible, using any sort of material so long as there is a chance of its holding together, thus reducing the cost to the grower and shipper.

The Grower's Responsibility.
The crate manufacturer having done his part in providing materials free from defects, the grower or shipper should see to it that the crate is not spoiled in being made up in his packing house or field.

Growers and shippers should remember that the nailing together of the crate is one of the biggest factors in determining whether the container is to be strong and substantial or weak and productive of damage claims. Cement-coated nails, not less than four-penny in size, should always be used, and care should be taken to see that they are properly spaced and placed.

Greater care is perhaps necessary in making up crates for express shipments than for car-load freight shipments, due to the more frequent handling they must undergo. For either method of shipping consideration should be given to methods of construction which will lessen the possibility of loss. An instance of this is the use of the "web" or canted side for celery crates. The slats are stapled to the cleats in the factory, making but one piece to each side to handle in the field instead of three. It also insures even spacing of the slats and gives an extra thickness for holding the nails, thus counteracting any tendency of the slats to split and come away from the nails.

Some celery growers are experimenting with a patent crate which is re-enforced with wire around the ends and the body of the crate. In actual use the end wires were twisted together to close the package, it being found impracticable, owing to the height of the celery, to twist the center wires together. There is no doubt of the strength of this type of crate.

Need of Co-operation.

Whatever the type of crate used, it is the duty of the manufacturer to supply good material, accurately cut, and properly put together. This much the purchaser of crates should demand and should expect to pay for. Having secured it, he should do his part by seeing that the crates are made up in a workmanlike manner, and, after packing, that they are properly closed and fastened for shipment. By such co-operation manufacturers and growers can feel better assured that the crate will measure up to the ideal of a fruit and vegetable package: that it shall carry the commodity intact from the grower through the wholesale market to the retailer.

SELECTING SEED CORN IN FIELDS

Farmer Has Splendid Opportunity to Start Increasing Next Year's Yield.

CURE AND STORE EARS WELL

Hatrack Device Is Easily Made by Cutting an Electrically Welded Wire-Mesh Fence—Avoid Damp Atmosphere.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

It costs as much to plant and cultivate an acre producing 20 bushels of corn as one producing 40 bushels. So, with present labor costs, if a farmer could reduce his acreage one-half and still get the same corn yield he would consider it good business.

Such a program is probably too much to expect, but the United States Department of Agriculture points out that the American farmer is getting altogether too little yield from his corn land. Just about this time of year a good many farmers are realizing it.

Prepare for Next Year's Crop.
Now, or a little later, American farmers have an opportunity to start increasing next year's corn crop by the selection of seed. Every spring there is a frantic search for good seed corn, and much inferior seed is planted, with resulting inferior yields. The loss is largely due to delay or negligence. Autumn is the time to prepare for a profitable corn crop the following season.

Any intelligent farmer can go into his corn field when the corn is mature and select better seed than he can buy next spring. Unless a community has an experienced and honest corn breeder, the best place for the farmer to obtain seed corn is from the fields on his farm or in his neighborhood, which are planted with a variety that has generally proved successful in that particular locality. Too many people consider seed good simply because it will grow. To be first class, seed corn must be:

1. Well adapted to the climatic and soil conditions where it is to be planted.
2. Of a high-yielding variety and from high-yielding stalks of that variety.
3. Well matured and preserved from ripening time until planting time in a manner that will retain its full vitality.
4. Free from disease and insect injury. Such freedom may indicate resistance to infection.

As soon as the crop matures, go through the field with a picking bag and select ears from the stalks that have produced the most good corn without having had any special advantages such as excess of space, moisture, or fertility. Avoid the large ears on stalks standing singly with an unusual amount of space around them. Preference should be given the plants that have produced most heavily in competition with a full stand of vigorous plants. A well-balanced stalk bearing two good ears will usually be found to have produced as much seed as any other stalk. Both ears are equally valuable for seed, even though one may be much smaller than the other.

In the central and southern states, all other things being equal, short thick stalks are preferable. They are not so easily blown down, and in general are more productive than slender ones.

Keep Seed Corn Dry Over Winter.

Since the corn root rot investigations by the United States Department of Agriculture, increasing attention has been paid to germination tests for corn. The improved rag doll germinator and methods for using it, as well as methods of selecting disease free ears in the field, are described in Farmers' Bulletin 1176, which will be sent on application to the Department of Agriculture. The question of better seed corn is one which means so much in dollars and cents that attention should be given it from now on until the seed is ready to go into the ground next spring.

Webster —Man's Man

By PETER B. KYNE

Author of
"Cappy Rick," "The Valley of the Giants," etc.

(Copyright by Peter B. Kynes)

CHAPTER XV.—Dolores and Webster, with Cafferty, return to the city. Dolores meets Mother Jenks and the two proceed to see the wounded. On their way to the president's palace Webster and Cafferty meet a party of President Sarros' guards, and in the fight Webster is wounded and Cafferty dies saving the life of the man he loved. Webster is found and ministered to by Dolores and Mother Jenks.

CHAPTER XVI.—The bodies of Webster and Cafferty are taken into the palace. Dolores and Mother Jenks follow. Examination proves Webster to be stunned but in no way seriously injured. Sarros is captured and the revolution everywhere triumphant. Ricardo meets the sister whom he had mourned as dead at Webster's bedside.

"Oh, Caliph, do be serious," Dolores pleaded.

He looked up at her fondly. "Take your brother out to Mother Jenks and prove your case, Miss Ruyey," he advised her. "And while you're at it, I certainly hope somebody will remember I'm not accustomed to reposing on a center table. Rick, if you can persuade some citizen to put me to bed, I'd be obliged. I'm dead tired, old horse. I'm—ah—sleepy—"

His head rolled weakly to one side, for he had been playing a part and had nerved himself to finish it gracefully, even in his weakened condition. He sighed, moaned slightly, and slipped into unconsciousness.

CHAPTER XVII.

Throughout the night there was sporadic firing here and there in the city, as the Ruyey followers relentlessly hunted down the isolated detachment of government troops which had escaped annihilation and capture in the final rout and fallen back on the city, where, concealing themselves according to their nature and inclination, they indulged in more or less sniping from windows and the roofs of buildings. The practice of taking no prisoners was an old one in Sobrante, and few presidents had done more than Sarros to keep that custom alive; ergo, firm in the conviction that to surrender was tantamount to facing a firing squad at daylight, the majority of these stragglers, with consummate courage, fought to the death.

The capture of Buenaaventura was alone sufficient to insure a brief revolution, but the capture of Sarros was ample guarantee that the resistance to the new order of things was already at an end. However, Ricardo Ruyey felt that the prompt execution of Sarros would be an added guarantee of peace by effectually discouraging any opposition to the relief cause in the outlying districts, where a few isolated garrisons still remained in ignorance of the momentous events being enacted in the capital. For the time being, Ricardo was master of life and death in Sobrante, and all of his advisers and supporters agreed with him that a so-called trial of the ex-dictator would be a rather useless affair. His life was forfeit a hundred times for murder and treason, and to be ponderous over his elimination would savor of mockery. Accordingly, at midnight, a priest entered the room in the arsenal where Sarros was confined, and shrived him. Throughout the night the priest remained with him, and when that early morning march to the cemetery commenced, he walked beside Sarros, repeating the prayers for the dying.

Upon reaching the cemetery there was a slight halt until a carriage drove up and discharged Ricardo Ruyey and Mother Jenks. The sergeant in command of the squad saluted and was briefly ordered to proceed with the matter in hand; whereupon he turned to Sarros, who with the customary sang froid of his kind upon such occasions was calmly smoking, and bowed deprecatingly. Sarros actually smiled upon him. "Adios, amigos," he murmured. Then, as an afterthought and probably because he was sufficient of an egoist to desire to appear a martyr, he added heroically: "I die for my country. May God have mercy on my enemies."

"If you'd cared to play a gentleman's game, you blighter, you might have lived for your bally country," Mother Jenks reminded him in English. "Wonder if the beggar'll wilt or will 'e go through smilin' like my sainted 'Enery on the same spot."

She need not have worried. It requires a strong man to be dictator of a roman candle republic for 15 years, and whatever his sins of omission or commission, Sarros did not lack animal courage. Alone and unattended he limped away among the graves to the wall on the other side of the cemetery and placed his back against it, negligently, in the attitude of a devil-may-care fellow without a worry in life. The sergeant waited respectfully until Sarros had finished his cigarette; when he tossed it away and straightened to attention, the sergeant knew there was a sudden rattle of bolts as the cartridges slid from the magazines into the breeches; there followed a momentary halt, another command; the squad was aiming when Ricardo Ruyey called sharply:

"Sergeant, do not give the order to fire."

The rifles were lowered and the men gazed wonderingly at Ricardo. "He's too brave," Ricardo complained. "D—him, I can't kill him as I would a mad dog. I've got to give him a chance."

The sergeant raised his brows expressively. Ah, the ley fuga, that popular form of execution where the prisoner is given a running chance, and the firing squad practices wing shooting. If the prisoner manages, miraculously, to escape, he is not pursued!

A doubt, however, crossed the sergeant's mind. "But my general," he expostulated, "Senior Sarros cannot accept the ley fuga. He is very lame. That is not giving him the chance your Excellency desires he should have."

"I wasn't thinking of that," Ricardo replied. "I was thinking I'm killing him without a fair trial for the reason that he's so infernally ripe for the gallows that a trial would have been a joke. Nevertheless, I am really killing him because he killed my father—and that is scarcely fair. My father was a gentleman. Sergeant, is your pistol loaded?"

"Yes, General."

"Give it to Senior Sarros."

As the sergeant started forward to equip Ricardo drew his own service revolver and then motioned Mother Jenks and the firing squad to stand aside while he crossed to the center of the cemetery. "Sarros," he called, "I am going to let God decide which one of us shall live. When the sergeant gives the command to fire, I shall open fire on you, and you are free to do the same to me. Sergeant, if he kills me and escapes unhurt, my orders are to escort him to the bay in my carriage and put him safely aboard the steamer."

Mother Jenks sat down on a tombstone. "Gord's truth!" she gasped, "but there's a rare plucked 'un." Aloud she croaked: "Don't be a bally ass, sir."

"Silence!" he commanded.

The sergeant handed Sarros the revolver. "You heard what I said?" Ricardo called.

Sarros bowed gravely.

"You understand your orders, Sergeant?"

"Yes, General."

"Very well. Proceed. If this prisoner dies before you give the word, have your squad riddle him."

The sergeant backed away and gazed owlishly from the prisoner to his captor. "Ready!" he called. Both revolvers came up. "Fire!" he shouted, and the two shots were discharged simultaneously. Ricardo's cap flew off his head, but he remained standing, while Sarros staggered back against the wall and there recovering himself gingly, fired again. He scored a clean miss, and Ricardo's gun barked three times; Sarros sprawled on his face, rose to his knees, raised his pistol halfway, fired into the sky and slid forward on his face. Ricardo stood beside the body until the sergeant approached and stood to attention, his attitude saying:

"It is over. What next, General?"

"Take the squad back to the arsenal, Sergeant," Ricardo ordered him coolly, and walked back to recover his uniform cap. He was smiling as he ran his finger through a gaping hole in the upper half of the crown.

"Well, Mrs. Jenks," he announced when he rejoined the old lady, "that was better than executing him with a firing squad. I gave him a square deal. Now his friends can never say that I murdered him."

He extended his hand to help Mother Jenks to her feet. She stood erect and felt again that queer swelling of the heart, the old feeling of suffocation.

"Steady, lass!" she mumbled. "Old on to me, sir. It's my bally haneurism. Cor—I'm—chokin'—"

He caught her in his arms as she lurched toward him. Her face was purple, and in her eyes there was a queer fierce light that went out suddenly, leaving them dull and glazed. When she commenced to sag in his arms, he eased her gently to the ground and laid her on her back in the grass.

"The upper's safe, 'Enery," he heard her murmur. "I've raised 'er a ldy, s'elp me—she's back where—you found 'er—'Enery—"

She quivered, and the light came creeping back into her eyes before it faded forever. "Comin', 'Enery—darlin'," she whispered; and then the soul of Mother Jenks, who had a code and lived up to it (which is more than the majority of us do), had departed upon the ultimate journey. Ricardo gazed down on the hard old mouth, softened now by a little half-smile of mingled yearning and gladness: "What a wonderful soul you had," he murmured, and kissed her.

In the end she slept in the niche in the wall of the Cathedral de la Vera Cruz, beside her sainted 'Enery.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Three days passed. Don Juan Caffetero had been buried with all the pomp and circumstance of a national hero; Mother Jenks, too, had gone to her appointed resting place, and El Buen Amigo had been closed forever. Ricardo had issued a proclamation announcing himself provisional president of Sobrante; a convention of revolutionary leaders had been held, and a provisional cabinet selected. A day for the national elections had been named; the wreckage of the brief revolution had been cleared away, and the wheels of government were once more revolving freely and noiselessly. And while all of this had been going on, John Stuart Webster had lain on his back, staring at the palace ceiling and absolutely forbidden to receive visitors. He was still engaged in this mild form of gymnastics on the third day when the door of his room opened and Dolores looked in on him.

"Good evening, Caliph," she called. "Aren't you dead yet?"

It was exactly the tone she should have adopted to get the best results, for Webster had been mentally and physically ill since she had seen him last, and needed some such pleasantry as this to lift him out of his gloomy mood. He grinned at her boyishly.

"No, I'm not dead. On the contrary, I'm feeling real chirpy. Won't you come in and visit for a while, Miss Ruyey?"

"Well, since you've invited me, I shall accept." Entering, she stood beside his bed and took the hand he extended toward her. "This is the first opportunity I've had, Miss Ruyey," he began, "to apologize for the shock I gave you the other day. I should have come back to you as I promised, instead of getting into a fight and scaring you half to death. I hope you'll forgive me, because I'm paying for my fun now—with interest."

"Very well, Caliph. I'll forgive you—on one condition."

"Who am I to resist having a condition imposed upon me? Name your terms. I shall obey."

"I'm weary of being called Miss Ruyey. I want to be Dolores—to you."

"By the toe nalls of Moses," he reflected, "there is no escape. She's determined to rock the boat." Aloud he said: "All right, Dolores. I guess Bill won't mind."

"Billey hasn't a word to say about it," she retorted, regarding him with that calm, impersonal, yet vitally interested look that always drove him frantic with the desire for her.

"Well, of course, I understand that," he countered. "Naturally, since Bill is only a man, you'll have to manage him and he'll have to take orders."

"Caliph, you're a singularly persistent man, once you get an idea into your head. Please understand me, once for all; Billy Geary is a dear, and it's a mystery to me why every girl in the world isn't perfectly crazy about him, but every rule has its exceptions—and Billy and I are just good friends. I'd like to know where you got the idea we're engaged to be married?"

"Why—why—well, aren't you?"

"Certainly not."

"Well, you—er—you ought to be. I expected—that is, I planned—I mean Bill told me and—and—and—er—it never occurred to me you could possibly have the—er—crust—to refuse him. Of course, you're going to marry him when he asks you?"

"Of course I am not."

"Ah-h-h-h!" John Stuart Webster gazed at her in frank amazement. "Not going to marry Bill Geary?" he cried, highly scandalized.

"I know you think I ought to, and I suppose it will appear quite incomprehensible to you when I do not—"

"Why Dolores, my dear girl! This is most amazing. Didn't Bill ask you to marry him before he left?"

"Yes, he did me that honor, and I declined him."

"You what!"

She smiled at him so maternally that his hand itched to drag her down to him and kiss her curving lips.

"Do you mind telling me just why you took this extraordinary attitude?"

"You have no right to ask, but I'll tell you. I refused Billy because I didn't love him enough—that way. What's more, I never could."

He rolled his head to one side and softly, very softly, whistled two bars of "The Spanish Cavalier" through his teeth. He was properly thunder-struck—so much so, in fact, that for a moment he actually forgot her presence while he pondered this most incredible state of affairs.

"I see it all now. It's as clear as mud," he announced finally. "You refused poor old Bill and broke his heart, and so he went away and hasn't had the courage to write me since. I'm afraid Bill and I both regarded this fight as practically won—all over but the wedding march, as one might put it. I might as well confess I hustled the boy down from the mine just so you two could get married and light out on your honeymoon. I figured Bill could kill two birds with one stone—have his honeymoon and get rid of his malaria, and return here in three or four months to relieve me, after I had the mine in operation. Poor boy. That was a frightful song-and-dance you gave him."

"I suspected you were the match-maker in this case. I must say I think you're old enough to know better, Caliph John."

"You did, eh? Well, what made you think so?"

She chuckled. "Oh, you're very oblivious—to a woman."

"I forgot that you reveal the past and foretell the future."

"You are really very clumsy, Caliph. You should never try to direct the destiny of any woman."

"I'm on the sick list," he pleaded, "and it isn't sporting of you to discuss me. You're healthy—so let us discuss you. Dolores, do you figure Bill's case to be absolutely hopeless?"

"Absolutely, Caliph."

"Hum-m-m!"

Again Webster had recourse to meditation, seeing which, Dolores walked to the pier glass in the corner, satisfied herself that her coiffure was just so and returned to his side, singing softly a little song that had floated out over the transom of Webster's room door into the hall one night:

"Manana you will be Mucho bueno carne por mto!"

He turned his head and looked up at her suddenly, searchingly. "Is there anybody else in Bill's way?" he demanded. "I admit it's none of my business, but—"

"Yes, Caliph, there is some one else."

"I thought so." This rather viciously. "I'm willing to gamble 100 to 1, slight unseen, that whoever he is, he isn't half the man Bill is."

"That," she replied coldly, "is a matter of personal opinion."

"And Bill's clock is fixed for keeps?"

"Yes, Caliph. And he never had a chance from the start."

"Why not?"

"Well, I met the other man first, Caliph."

"Oh! Do you mind telling me what this other man does for a living?"

"He's a mining man, like Billy."

"All right! Has the son of a horse thief got a mine like Bill's? That's something to consider, Dolores."

"He has, I mine fully as good as Billy's. Like Billy, he owns a half interest in it, too."

"Hum-m-m! How long have you known him?"

"Not very long."

"Be sure you're right—then go ahead," John Stuart Webster warned her. "Don't marry in haste and repent at leisure, Dolores. Know your man before you let him buy the wedding ring. There's a heap of difference, my dear, between sentiment and sentimentality."

"I'm sure of my man, Caliph."

He was silent again, thinking rapidly. "Well, of course," he began again presently, "while there was the slightest possibility of Bill winning you, I would have died before saying that which I am about to say to you now, Dolores, because Bill is my friend, and I'd never double cross him. With reference to this other man, however, I have no such code to consider. I'm pretty well convinced I'm out of the running, but I'll give that lad a race if it's the last act of my life. He's a stranger to me, and he isn't on the job to protect his claim, so why shouldn't I stake it if I can? But are you quite certain you aren't making a grave mistake in refusing Billy? He's quite a boy, my dear. I know him from soul to suspenders, and he'd be awfully good to you. He's kind and gentle and considerate, and he's not a molly-coddle, either."

"I can't help it, Caliph. Please don't talk about him any more. I know somebody who is kinder and nobler and gentler." She ceased abruptly, fearful of breaking down her reserve and saying too much.

"Well, if Bill's case is hopeless"—his hand came groping for hers, while he held her with his searching, wistful glance—"I wonder what mine looks like. That is, Dolores, I—"

"Yes, John?"

"I've played fair with my friend," he whispered eagerly. "I'm not going to ask you to marry me, so long as I live, I shall want to serve you. When you're married to this other man, and things do not break just right for you both—if I have something he wants, in order to make you happy, I want you to know it's yours to give to him. I—I—I—guess that's all, Dolores."

"Thank you, John. Would you like to know this man I'm going to marry?"

"Yes, I think I'd like to congratulate the scoundrel."

"Then I'll introduce you to him, John. I first met him on a train in Death valley, California. He was a shaggy old dear, all whiskers and rags, but his whiskers couldn't hide his smile, and his rags couldn't hide his manhood, and when he thrashed a drummer because the man annoyed me, I just couldn't help falling in love with him. Even when he fibbed to me and disputed my assertion that we had met before—"

"Good land of love—and the calves get loose!" he almost shouted as he held up his one sound arm to her. "My dear, my dear—"

"Oh, sweetheart," she whispered laying her hot cheek against his. "I've taken you so long to say it, but I love you all the more for the dear thoughts that made you hesitate."

He was silent a few moments, digesting his amazement, speechless with the great happiness that was his—and then Dolores was kissing the back of the hand of that helpless, bandaged arm lying across his breast. He had a tightening in his throat, for he had not expected love; and that sweet, benignant, humble little kiss spelled adoration and eternal surrender; when she looked at him again the mists of joy were in his eyes.

"Dear old Caliph John!" she crooned. "He's never had a woman to understand his funny ways and appreciate them and take care of him, has he?" She patted his cheek. "And bless his simple old heart, he would rather give up his love than be false to his friend. Yes, indeed, Johnny Webster respects 'No Shooting' stens when he sees them, but he tells his friends and pretends to be very stupid when he really isn't. So you wouldn't be false to Billy—eh, dear? I'm glad to know that, because the man who cannot be false to his friend can never be false to his wife."

He crushed her down to him and held her there for a long time. "My dear," he said presently, "isn't there something you have to say to me?"

"I love you, John," she whispered, and sealed the sweet confession with a

Southwick News

Born Thursday, March 30, to Mr. and Mrs. Ed Reeser, a girl.

An oyster supper was held at the Roy Southwick home in honor of Mr. Southwick's Sunday school class. Those present were: Lorena Thornton, Carren Snyder, Dorothy Stainaker, Dolly Jones, Flora Smith, Marjorie Kauble, Nellie and Dean Baker, Ward Helton, Lee Kirk, Dan Ziemann, Herman Smith, Charlie Greenwood, Johnnie Longteig, Delbert Hayward, Herbert Holmes, Alonzo Douglas, Opal and Howard Southwick, and Mr. and Mrs. Roy Southwick. All reported a fine time.

Miss Black and Mrs. Ziemann went to Lewiston Friday to be present at the spelling contest. The spellers who accompanied them were Dan Ziemann, Howard Watts, Pearl Stump and Janey Ziemann. Dan Ziemann won first prize in the first class of spellers.

Dora Helton and Ed Wetmore were united in marriage, Saturday morning, at Lewiston. They returned to Southwick Saturday afternoon. A charivari party was given them Saturday evening. We all join in wishing them many happy years of married life.

Mr. and Mrs. Dean Baker and Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Baker spent Sunday at the Homer Hayward home.

The Tom Armitage family and Charlie Hayward spent the day Sunday, at the Walter Bateman home.

Leland Items

Mrs. Elliott, whose serious condition we mentioned in last week's news, passed away last Friday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Leonard Davis. Mrs. Davis brought her to her home last December, where she could care for her, and all that loving hands could do was done, but her work was done and God called her home. The funeral was held at the church here Sunday at 11 a. m. and the remains interred in the Kendrick cemetery.

Mr. M. Smith and J. M. Woodward went to Oakesdale this week to attend the funeral of Mrs. Asa Woodward.

Mrs. Mushiitz is conducting the eighth grade examinations here this week.

A baby girl arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. B. Goudzward last week.

Those who went from here to compete in the spelling contest at Lewiston, Saturday, were: Alfred Evans, Alva Craig, Myrl Oylear, Edyth Thornton and Lelia Webster. They were accompanied by Mrs. Dean, Mrs. Ralph Oylear and Mrs. Claud Craig.

Mr. and Mrs. Woodward were dinner guests Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Smith.

Little Miss Myrl Oylear got a ducking in the creep, Sunday, while trying to get a ball that had rolled into the creek which was swollen by the melting snow. It might have resulted seriously had she not been rescued after being washed down for some distance.

Monday night some thief or thieves broke into both Smith's and DeWinter & Goudzward's stores, taking what money they could find, which consisted mostly of pennies and nickles which had been left in the tills. Some cigars were also taken. They entered the Smith's store by prying out a window in the back and DeWinter & Goudzward's by prying the back door open. It's too bad such people can't be caught and put where they belong.

Big Bear Ridge

Mr. and Mrs. Will Elliott, Mr. and Mrs. Rufus May spent last week at the Leonard Davis home near Leland.

M. J. Sundseth of Sandpoint was a visitor at the A. Hooker home the first of the week.

John Heath returned from Texas ridge the first of the week.

Miss Inez Johnson finishes a successful seven months term of school at Rimrock this week.

Preaching services at the Lutheran church Sunday, April 9th, at 11 a. m.

Ingvald and Miss Emma Aas were Lewiston visitors Friday and Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Ira Gentry and family have moved to the George Wright farm.

A number of neighbors and friends attended the funeral services of Mrs. Chas. Elliott at the Kendrick cemetery Sunday.

The last Literary program for this season will be held Saturday evening, April 8th.

Dan Jones has returned to Kellogg, Idaho, having visited friends here.

American Ridge Social

There will be an Epworth League social, Friday evening, April 7. Everybody welcome. Refreshments will be served and a slight charge will be made. Money to be used for buying song books. E. W. Fraser, president.

The Danger Point

in trying to save on painting
Repairs Cost More Than Paint

WHEN the paint on your property begins to check and crack, it is time to paint again. Unless your house is protected by a smooth, elastic film of durable paint, decay will set in and rapidly depreciate it.

Decay is expensive and wasteful. Price lumber alone, to get an idea of what it will cost to repair or rebuild. Paint saves this cost.

The best paint is the most economical in the long run. It spreads easily—saves labor cost. It covers a larger area per gallon than "cheap" paint.

But most important, the best paint serves five or more years longer than "cheap" paint.

We have been making the best paints for 73 years. They are scientific in formula and preparation. They meet the weather conditions in the West.

They contain the finest materials—PIONEER WHITE LEAD, pure linseed oil, pure zinc and pure colors—combined scientifically in exact proportions. They are the best paints we know.

WHY FRESH AIR IS GOOD MEDICINE

PROF. C. E. A. WINSLOW, Yale University, New Haven.

EVERYONE knows that fresh air is one of the best medicines and incidentally one of the cheapest. More and more doctors are prescribing "the fresh air cure" for all sorts of diseases. Yet not all people know fresh air when they see it or realize to what it owes its tonic qualities. Here are the principal signs by which you may know "fresh air."

(1) Fresh air is cool air. Air that is above 68° F is always harmful except for very old people. Whenever the indoor temperature rises above this point the circulation is upset, one tends to become dull, languid, and inefficient, and the delicate membranes of the nose and throat are injured so as to cause a great liability to colds and other respiratory diseases.

(2) Fresh air is moving air. Still air blankets the body and produces a deadening, numbing effect. Air in gentle motion stimulates the skin.

(3) Fresh air is moderately moist air. Either very dry or very humid air is harmful.

(4) Fresh air is variable air. Slight changes in temperature and humidity are stimulating and wholesome for the body.

These four qualities are always found to the best advantage out of doors and it is for this reason that sleeping, working and living in the open is one of the best ways of keeping the body fit, vigorous and efficient.

When you must be indoors, don't forget your good friend, the thermometer. The best thing that ever happened for the health of the children of New York was a regulation requiring the placing of a thermometer on the front of every teacher's desk, with a heavy red line opposite 68 degrees. A thermometer of this kind in every living room and work place, with somebody watching it to turn off heat or open windows as soon as the temperature passes 68 degrees, would cut in half the number of colds and other nose and throat diseases from which Americans suffer as a result of overheating.

Forest Protection Week

The week of April 16-22 has been designated a Forest Protection Week. The Governor has issued a proclamation requesting the co-operation of the citizens of the state in this campaign. The American Legion has also been asked to help. As more than two-fifths of the total area of the state, or approximately 23,000,000 acres are forested the importance of the forests to the state is easily seen. A great effort will be made to impress upon the people of Idaho the necessity of using every precaution to prevent forest fires during the coming summer.

Legume cultures, supplying nitrogen-gathering bacteria, are being supplied at cost to Idaho farmers by the department of bacteriology of the University of Idaho, according to Professor W. M. Glubs bacteriologist at the university experiment station. Orders are coming in rapidly, indicating a favorable season for such crops as alfalfa, clover and peas.

This service is made at cost to Idaho farmers. The cultures are sold in bottles at 75 cents each. This amount is sufficient to inoculate the seed for three acres. It is announced that persons desiring to secure some of the cultures should communicate with the department of bacteriology at once.
