Essentials for Caring for Milk in Hot Season

During the winter months it is comparatively easy to handle milk so it will keep sweet. In the summer months comes the real test. You cannot handle milk and cream successfully during the summer without having some means of cooling it quickly and keeping it at a low temperature. The use of a tank is the most satisfactory means which can be employed. The pump should be kept going so that fresh water direct from the well is flowing through this cooling tank. On many farms where such a tank is used all the water going to the various stock tanks is first pumped into the cooling tank, the overflow water going to the stock. Keeping milk sweet is almost entirely a matter of cleanliness and temperature regulation.

You cannot call yourself a successful dairyman until you have learned how to produce clean milk. Milk is a human food and should be treated as such. Dirty milk always sours more quickly than clean milk and quite often has other bad flavors. These bad flavors and the souring are caused by bacteria, which are tiny organisms too small to be seen with the naked eye. They are everywhere present and every particle of dirt has upon it large numbers of these tiny organisms. Most of the bacteria which get into the milk come from dirt on the cow, which falls in the pail while you are milking. These organisms also get into the milk from the utensils, such as cans, pails, strainers, coolers and separators which have not been properly cleaned and sterilized before using.

The bacteria reach their greatest activity and multiply most rapidly when the temperature of the milk is high. They increase very slowly at lower temperatures and for this reason milk should be cooled as quickly as possible and kept at least as low in temperature as water fresh from the well. Milk would never sour if it were possible to keep all the bacteria out of it, but some of these organisms get in spite of our efforts to keep them out, and the only thing we can do is to keep them from increasing rapidly in numbers.

Briefly, then, the essentials in caring for milk in the summer are to milk in as clean a manner as possible, wiping the flank and udder of the cow with a moist cloth before milking, or even washing if these parts are very dirty, careful cleansing and scalding of utensils, protecting the milk from flies and dirt after it has been drawn and finally cooling it as quickly as possible and holding it at a low temperature. It may be possible to get along without a milk house or milk room but the best results in keeping milk or cream in the proper condition will come from having a room planned for the purpose of handling it in the best manner possible and the cooling tank is perhaps one of the most essential features of the milk room.

Causes and Control of White Scours in Calves

White scours is sometimes a source of severe loss in very young calves. While usually considered as an acute contagious disease of calves, it frequently occurs as a chronic condition which may be fatal to the calf but which retards its growth and development markedly.

Veterinarians at Cornell university regard an acid condition of the droppings of the calf as an important symptom of this disease. The acidity results from bacteria which are usually introduced through the milk fed to the calf. The acid prevents the digestion of the casein of the milk, thus producing the whitish appearance of the droppings, which is characteristic of the disease. The navel of the newborn calf is also a frequent source of infection.

At Cornell the preventative measures taken for this disease include bathing the navel with an antiseptic and applying a drying powder to close up the opening as soon as possible. The amount and temperature of the milk fed the calf is carefully regulated and great care used to feed under the most sanitary conditions.

Control methods employ the use of barley water, made by adding boiling hot water to finely ground barley and allowing it to stand until nearly cool. In severe cases the milk is replaced altogether by barley water for a temporary period. Usually, however, equal parts of barley water may be used with whole milk. The principal use of the barley water is to soothe the inflamed membranes of the intestines.

The acidity is corrected by using a solution of one ounce of bicarbonate of soda and two drams of aromatics in a pint of water. This is given once daily and has proved very effective. It can be given to the calf by means of a funnel and rubber tube.

Sweet Clover Makes Hay of Excellent Quality

First year sweet clover makes practically as good hay as alfalfa. It should not be mowed until rather late in the season, however, or the stand might be injured. Second year sweet clover is more rank in growth and makes a coarser hay, but if cut at the proper time a very good quality of hay can be obtained. It should be cut before it starts to bloom and preferably on a cloudy day or in the late afternoon.

Ranchmen View Results at Idaho Sheep Station

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Ranchmen from various parts of the Northwest recently spent a day at the United States sheep experiment station, Dubois, Idaho, where animal husbandmen of the Department of Agriculture demonstrated the results of much of the work which has been carried on there for several years. There were 75 visitors, including representatives of several state experiment stations and several men from the department at Washington. Montana, Idaho, Utah, Colorado and Wyoming were represented.

At this station the department has been working for a number of years on sheep-breeding problems, range management and winter maintenance. A part of the field day, which was held May 29, was taken up by a shearing demonstration in which ranchers had an opportunity to observe the yield and quality of fleeces from the various lots of sheep. About 750 animals were sheared that day, and during the season 2,300 fleeces were taken off. Most of the sheep being raised there are Rambouillet and coarse-wool, fine-wool crossbred types such as Corriedale and Columbia, the latter a type developed by the department.

The Rambouillets at this government ranch are an American type developed particularly for this region where feed is comparatively sparse. They differ from the old type in being larger and smoother and freer from wool on the face. Detailed records are kept on the wool and mutton produced by all the different types, the feed and grazing, labor and the financial returns.

The Corriedales have been found to produce an excellent quality of wool, but the Columbias yield heavier fleeces and their lambs are heavier. A cross of these two crossbred types is being tried out and so far has been very successful both as a wool and mutton producer.

The field day visitors were taken in automobiles over the range to show them the results of protecting the range where 17,000 acres has been inclosed by a fence for three years. This has been found an effective way for building up a good stand of grass, as the feed inside the fence was much better than that just outside as a result of protection against roaming stock. The department also has demonstrated the value of assuring a water supply by the drilling of wells and the construction of reservoirs. It has been found to pay to haul water as much as three miles during very dry weather, the cost being about one-fourth cent a head daily during these periods. The water required daily per ewe is between two-thirds and three-fourths of a gallon.

At the winter headquarters, where there is a stockade for 2,500 ewes, sunflower silage has been fed along with alfalfa hay with great success. The yield of this feed has been about four tons to the acre. Other feeds being tried there are alfalfa, sweet clover, peas, oats and peas, different rates of seeding being used.

Farrowing Troubles Can Be Eliminated by Feeds

Often a brood sow is unjustly condemned. If she kills or starves her young, it is sometimes the fault of the caretaker.

She should be fed sparingly for the first few days after farrowing, increasing gradually, so that the milk will not be produced faster than the pigs can take it. By injudicious feeding, the milk glands are unduly stimulated, and if the milk is not all consumed, will cause irritation and inflammation. The suffering mother will not allow the pigs nourishment, thus starving them, or in her pain, she may sometimes kill them. Correct feeding will eliminate nine-tenths of the troubles at farrowing.

LIVE STOCK NOTES

Working the stallion is a good method of giving him exercise.

Allowing young pigs plenty of sunshine is a big item in raising them successfully.

Calves, pigs and lambs that make their owners the most profit are sired by pure bred sires.

To toughen horses' shoulders after the winter's rest, bathe them with salt water daily for a week.

If there is plenty of feed, especially skim milk, and the pigs are strong and robust, they may be weaned at eight weeks.

The fundamental principle in feeding weaned pigs is to keep them with keen appetites. Feed just as much as they will clean up readily.

Let the hogs have free access to the minerals in self-feeders. Add one part tankage at first and the hogs will learn more quickly to eat the minerals.

DAIRY

Best Plan to Get Good Cows Is to Raise Them

Profitable dairy cows may be secured in two ways. First, they may be purchased. This is, no doubt, the most expensive way, but necessary in many cases in order to get a start. In purchasing cows you take chances on getting individuals not as good as they look, for often the best judges of dairy animals are fooled in the value of cows. Then, also, there is the chance of bringing in diseases such as tuberculosis, contagious abortion, and udder troubles, says J. P. LaMaster, chief of the dairy division of Clemson college.

The second and best way to get good profitable cows is to raise them on your farm. All dairy cows depend for their value on the inherent tendency to convert feed into milk and on their proper growth and development. That is, they must have well-bred ancestry. Although the cows you now own may be grades and poor grades at that, you can insure the value of your future herd by breeding these cows to well-bred pure bred bulls.

A well-bred bull is not only a registered bull, but one having a sire coming from a line of high butterfat and milk producers, and out of a dam with a good butterfat record, nothing less than 400 pounds in one year, she also having come from a line of high producing ancestry.

The tendency of the normal cow is to revert to the original wild cow which gave only enough milk for her calf; so unless by selection you increase the ability to produce, you will soon have only boarder cows which will not pay you for the feed they eat or the labor necessary to manage them.

The most profitable system of dairy farming is to have the most of the cows freshen in the fall. In order to do this it is necessary to breed the cows during November, December and January. If you do not have a good bull or do not live near a farmer who owns a good bull to which you can breed your cows, begin now to locate one for your own use. The dairy division of Clemson college will assist you in locating a good bull.

Tells of Blackleg and Ways of Its Prevention

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Immunitation by vaccination is the only practicable and effective means of protecting animals against blackleg and eventually ridding pastures of the infection, says the United States Department of Agriculture in Farmers' Bulletin 1355, prepared by Dr. John R. Mohler, chief of the bureau of animal industry. This disease, which is found in all climates and altitudes in practically all parts of the world, is the cause of great losses in this country, particularly in the great cattle raising and feeding sections of the West.

In the new bulletin all of the important information on this disease has been brought together in concise form. The nature of the malady and the characteristic symptoms are so described and compared with those of other diseases that there can be little danger of confusion. Cattle, especially young animals from six to eighteen months of age, are most susceptible, but sheep and goats also are subject to it, and in exceptional cases hogs have contracted it. Man, horses, dogs, cats and fowls appear to be immune from the infection. Improved animals seem to be less resistant to it than common or low-grade stock. Spring and fall are the seasons of greatest prevalence, but blackleg may occur at any time of the year.

Medicinal treatment has been found worse than useless as animals sick with the disease are sure to die, and the longer they are kept alive the greater the danger of infecting others in the herd. Those sick with blackleg should be killed and burned or buried deeply in quick lime. Protection against infection is afforded by vaccination, and there are a number of reliable preparations on the market. Formerly the Department of Agriculture manufactured and distributed blackleg vaccine, but, as a result of an act of congress, this distribution was discontinued beginning July 1, 1922.

Copies of the bulletin may be had, as long as the supply lasts, by writing to the Department of Agriculture, Washington.

A Timely Suggestion
This is the season of the year when the prudent and careful housewife replenishes her supply of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It is almost certain to be needed before the winter is over and results are much more prompt and satisfactory when it is kept at hand and given as soon as the first indication of a cold appears and before it has become settled in the system. There is no danger in giving it to children as it contains no opium or other harmful drug.

SAVING MONEY Through Force of Habit---

We all find it hard to save money until we have "developed the habit." Everyone knows that if we do a thing once or twice it becomes a habit—we do it unconsciously.

The habit of saving money is not hard to acquire, as thousands of successful men and women will testify, but there must be a desire to get the habit.

Better than a gift of money is the gift of making money. A large part of that is the habit of saving, because it provides capital with which to work.

START NOW, and "develop the habit" of saving money—Save a definite amount each week, but START NOW.
