If doctors could put their business on a cash basis they would certainly prosper.

It is hard for a husband to understand that when a wife has helped him save money she should ever want to spend any of it.

King Tut died at the age of 15 years and yet they call him "Old King Tut". Right now he must be almost old enough to spoil.

Benjamin Franklin: Three faithful friends: an old dog, an old wife and ready money.

Rudolph Valentino, film shiek, will divorce his wife because she interferes with his "art." Says this handsome devil of the screen: "To generalize on women is dangerous; to specialize on them is infinitely worse." Just what does he mean? Isn't he interesting? Imagine this play actor, this strutting hero of the screen discussing women, thinking of them as his play-things! There are thousands of commonsense women who are as far out of his reach as the angels in heaven.—Ex.

William Allen White says that he gets his exercise by being pallbearer for golf players who exercise to prolong useless lives.

A little, old Quaker lady was asked what she used to make her complexion so lovely, her whole being so bright and attractive. She answered: "I use for the lips, truth; for the voice, prayer; for the eyes, pity; for the hands, charity; for the figure, uprightness; for the heart, love."

One reason why men are considered such prizes is because there are not enough to go around. It is estimated there are two million more females in the world than males and that's why some flappers are sheikless.

There are approximately 26,000 people killed by autos annually, and of this number about 10,000 are children. Millions of dollars of damage to autos also results. The cause: carelessness, fast driving—booze. It is estimated that a third of the auto accidents are caused by intoxicated drivers. And yet we still have people who say that prohibition laws are an infringement on their personal liberty.

Kendrick needs more houses and needs them badly. This fall there would have been fifteen or twenty more families in town if they could have secured a place to live. G. F. Walker said that he had many calls for houses, by people who wished to move here for the winter to send their children to school. He was unable to accommodate but few of them. Both the town and school suffer from this lack of residences. It is time for a goodly number of people to follow Ed Long's example and build their own homes.

There is nothing more encouraging in a community than to see public improvements going on from year to year. This fall the town council is doing a good work in surfacing the alleys with crushed rock. The cost is comparatively small but the improvement is a much needed one and permanent. A town that maps out a conservative program of public improvement with the idea in mind of putting over at least one project every year, is the kind of a town that will prosper. People like to live in a clean, well kept town and Kendrick is rapidly approaching that stage.

The most outstanding case of neglect is a stretch of several blocks in the west end of town where a number of property owners are allowing their back yards to mar the beauty of the landscape. These yards are along the railroad track and may be looked upon by those who pass through town on the train. They give a wrong impression of the balance of the town. This condition might easily be changed if a number of dilapidated sheds were torn down and a few wagonloads of rubbish removed from the yards.

At a recent meeting of the town council it was suggested that trees be planted along the alleys back of these yards to shut off the view from the train. This method would ultimately bring about a better condition, but it would be more practical for the property owners to clean up the dirt rather than have a screen built to hide it.

CREEK INDIANS USED NO JAILS

Lash and Gun Constituted Only Penalties.

Okmulgee, Okla.—The ancient whipping tree and the old capitol of a vanished Indian nation still are doing service in this city.

In the heart of Okmulgee stands the council house of the Creek nation, erected in 1878. The Young Men's Christian association and the chamber of commerce have their headquarters in the building, and a bus line uses one corner for an office.

The building and its grounds occupy a block in the center of the business district. Among the numerous trees on the grounds are two where the excruciating and the legal whippings took place.

The Creeks had no jails. They had only two methods of punishment—whipping and shooting. The punishment for robbery, for instance, was 50 lashes for the first offense, 100 lashes for the second, and death for the third. In cases of execution, the condemned Indian was tied to the tree and shot. Damage suits were settled in cash, work or 50 lashes on the bare back.
The council house is a two-story building of native sandstone. On the first floor were the departments of government; on the second, the legislative halls.

The Creeks were one of the five civilized tribes moved by the government from the southeastern part of the United States to this territory about 1830.

They established here a complete system of government, similar to the American republic, but with much simpler forms.

Their legislature was composed of the "house of kings" (senate) and the "house of warriors." The head of the state was the principal chief, elected for four years by a majority vote of the males of the nation. His assistant was the second chief elected in the same manner.

There was a high court and a district court, each district having a prosecuting attorney, a judge and a company of light horsemen, who were in the nature of mounted police.

The council house belongs to the city of Okmulgee. Efforts are now being made among the remaining Indians to move the building to a national Indian park planned near here.

Cliff Dwellers' Corn Made to Grow Again

Vernon, Utah.—Seed from corn that grew in Utah long before the advent of the white man is yielding from two to five ears to the stalk, on the farm of Jefferson Hall near here.

The seed was found in an ancient cave of the cliff dwellers. Twelve hills of the corn was planted but only two hills grew.

Some of the stalks have attained a height of seven feet while others are maturing at a height of four. A peculiarity of the ancient corn is that the leaves are much wider than the ordinary corn, some of them reaching a width of five inches. It also yields a greater number of ears, about five growing to the stalk.

kicked Mr. Yenni. Rev. Taber took him to Kendrick for medical attention, and it was found that no bones were broken, but he sustained bad bruises on his hip. Len is getting around with more ease, but is still crippling some.

Who Said Chicago Women Didn't Have Pretty Feet?

Chicago is preparing to entertain some 6,000 delegates to the fifteenth annual convention of the National Retailers' association during the second week of January and will endeavor to prove to the world at large during that time that Chicago women have the most beautiful feet of any women in the world. When one of the committee advertised for models for perfect feet he was flooded with more girls than he can use, and our photograph shows a member of the committee passing on a bunch of Chicago's most perfect.

RUINS YIELD RELICS OF CLIFF DWELLERS

Archeologists Find Objects 3,000 Years Old.

Denver, Colo.—Colorado has established its claim to an extensive field of valuable archeological ruins through research work accomplished by J. A. Jeancon, curator of ethnology and archeology of the Colorado state museum, and a party of students of the Colorado university. Mr. Jeancon headed an expedition financed by the Denver Chamber of Commerce and the Colorado State Historical and Natural History society.

The two months' work of the party was done in western Colorado at the foot of Chimney Rock mesa, 22 miles west of Pagosa Springs, along the Piedras river, and revealed ruins of cliff dwellers' settlements estimated by Mr. Jeancon to be 3,000 years old. One thousand primitive houses are located in the Piedras river valley. On Chimney Rock mesa are 110 more houses, including a three-story pueblo, all virtually untouched by investigating scientists.

ies of this expedition are two skulls, one of the round-headed type of the present Pueblo Indians, the other of the long-headed type of their predecessors in that section of the country. The earliest trace of mankind in that particular section of Colorado, reports Mr. Jeancon, is that of a people known to scientists as "basketmakers," who constructed their houses of poorly-fitted masonry and earth, and whose principal art was that of basket weaving.

These ancient people were conquered and assimilated by the "post-basketmakers," who brought with them pottery, and possibly the bow and arrow. With the invasion of the people known as the pre-Pueblos the racial change noted in the two skulls occurred. Whether the two earlier races were ancestors of the present-day Pueblo Indians is not known, but Mr. Jeancon believes the pre-Pueblos were ancestors of the modern Pueblos, the latter being of somewhat mixed origin.

Principal Discovery.
The principal discovery of the expedition was a huge circular pueblo, 85 feet in diameter, which at first outward appearance was nothing but a sagebrush-covered mound. Upon excavation of this mound the pueblo was found and in the center of it was discovered what appeared to be a "civic center," accepted by archeologists as having been the place where the tribal dances and ceremonial rites of the ancient people were practiced.

In the surrounding country twenty pit houses were excavated, all of which had been constructed by the ancient dwellers. In one of these houses lay the skeleton of a man aged about sixty at death. The jaws of the skeleton revealed traces of pyorrhea. With the skeleton was found a broken heart-shaped pot, characteristic of the pre-Pueblo Indian.

Another large pit house yielded a stone mortar for grinding meal, with a few flecks of meal still adhering to it. An ancient burial ground yielded parts of two coil baskets, apparently made by coiling thin strings of clay one upon the other.

Army's Biggest Gun to Test Railroads

Washington.—Movement of the army's newest and biggest coast defense gun, a 14-inch rifle, on railway mount, which weighs 730,000 pounds, from the proving grounds at Aberdeen, Md., to Fort McArthur near San Diego, Cal., will start soon, the trip to require about two months.

The decision to send the gun west was made to test trans-continental railway lines for the movement of heavy railway artillery which will be used in supplementing the fixed coast defenses in time of war.

The gun will go from Aberdeen to Chicago over the Pennsylvania road, to Council Bluffs over the Chicago & Northwestern, to Ogden over the Union Pacific and complete the journey from Ogden westward on the Southern Pacific.

Told of Death of Son Who Enlisted Under False Name

Washington.—The story of a run away boy who enlisted in the navy under an assumed name and was never again heard of by his mother until he perished with the sinking of the submarine S-51 was just filed at the pension bureau. The mother is Mrs. Catherine McCarthy of New York. The son, Sylvester McCarthy, who enlisted some time ago as "John J. McCarthy," gave as his next kin the name of an aunt. She was notified of the boy's death and carried the news to his mother, who filed the claim.

Low-Flying Planes Scare Hens From Laying Eggs

Santa Rosa, Cal.—Low-flying airplanes are playing such havoc with the chicken business in Sonoma county that the county board of supervisors is to be appealed to in an effort to force an increase of the altitude of the machines. The roaring air motors and their great hawk-like shadows demoralize the chicken flocks, poultry men say. The chickens scurry for cover and suspend all egg-laying activities until they have regained their composure, which usually takes some time.

Crowding During Winter Is Harmful to Poultry

Quite a number of farm poultry raisers make the error of housing too many hens and pullets together during cold weather. Hens will lay as well if yarded and well cared for as if on free range. But they dare not be crowded when they are confined.

If the hens are being fed and forced for egg yield alone, we must get them into winter quarters in their pens early in the fall and keep them there without changing them about. Introducing new hens into the flock of laying birds always causes more or less confusion, and this helps in decreasing the number of eggs laid.

BEAUTY'S YOUTH

Beauty was young in those days, even younger than she is now, for Beauty has never been and will never be really old.

She Stretched Her Arms.
There will always be a newness and a freshness about her. Her loveliness will always strike people as something young and full of life. But she was even younger then.

So young that she had only a very little idea in her fair head, only one little bit of an idea. The idea she had was that she was so beautiful that nothing else mattered.

Nothing else was of any importance save her beauty. She stretched her arms one morning as she awoke and looked at herself in a glorious mirror that she had. She sighed a happy sigh of satisfaction and said to herself:

"I am so beautiful that nothing else matters."

Then she looked out of her window at the golden sunlight and smiled.

"Golden Sunlight, you, too, belong to me," she said.

"Later I shall play with you. Together we will dance and the dance will be the most sparkling dance ever seen."

"We will run after each other in and out of the shadows. We will play in the forests and the glow of our beauty and the sunbeams of our playtime will laugh and scamper with our merriment."

"I will be with you, Sunlight, in a very short time."

The sunlight gazed brightly in through the open windows, well pleased with the plan.

Below her window was a garden, a garden of many gay, sweet-scented flowers.

"Wait for me, flowers," she called out of her window.

"Later I will come down and wander among you. As I move about the wind will stir your scent and it shall be wafted far over the garden so that all will say:

"Ah, the sweet-scented garden. How lovely it is."

"Wait for me, flowers, and I will be there."

She looked up a moment at the blue sky and she threw a kiss far up into the air.

"To you, Blue Sky, I throw that kiss. Wait for me, Blue Sky."

"I will come and play with you. For a while we will play the game of earth gazing."

"We will sit upon your soft carpet of blue and look down and see all that there is to see on the earth."

"We will see the flowers and the forests, the rivers and the mountains and the lakes."

"We will see the prairies and the cotton fields, the meadows and the jungles. We will see the whole world."

"When we get tired of looking at everything we will get out the magic box of paints and we will draw streaks of color across everything."

"We will make you, Blue Sky, a sky of rose and pink and gray, and we will blow little fluffy clouds, edged with lavender and purple, and scatter them about."

"Wait for me, Blue Sky. We will have much to do."

So Beauty talked as she awoke in the early morning, and so she lived, mingling with the most beautiful of the old world's belongings.

But as yet she had to learn that there were other things, too, besides Beauty, oh, yes, Beauty had still other things to learn.

But she was very young, was Beauty.

And oh, she was very beautiful!

Most Ignorant People

A school teacher asked her class in what part of the world the most ignorant people were to be found. A small boy volunteered quickly, "In London, England."

The teacher was amazed, and questioned the lad as to where he had obtained such information.

"Well," he replied, "the geography says that's where the population is most dense."

Hurt When He Lit

Elmer took his baby brother upstairs—a forbidden place to play. As a result, both fell down the stairs. When mother started to reprove Elmer, he pleaded, "Please don't scold, mother. It wasn't so bad coming down—but, O, gosh! when we lit."

Accident Brings Invention

Earth's Temperature
The earth is like a steam boiler jacketed with a layer of asbestos, the central portion, whatever its nature, occupying about three-quarters of the earth's radius, with an outer shell of rocks. If this is so, it will take at least a hundred thousand million years for the internal temperature to fall to half of what it originally was.

Another "Bull" Durham advertisement by Will Rogers, Ziegfeld Folies and screen star, and leading American humorist. More coming. Watch for them.

If You Want to Look Like This — Don't Smoke

You are going to be disappointed when you look at the face in this Advertisement. It will be such a shock from the type of Faces you always see in Advertisements. They generally get some Guys face to use in a Collar or Underwear Ad that looks like he was just born for that Ad. You never see him in real life or anything that ever looked like him. These "Bull" Durham people conceived the idea of something new. They felt that you were tired looking at such handsome faces in Ads, it was so discouraging to men who looked at them because they knew they could never look like these fellows themselves. So they wanted a homely face that would be an inspiration to other homely men, (because there is a terrible lot of hard looking Birds among you readers). So after looking the World over they picked on me. I don't smoke "Bull" Durham, so the Moral is IF YOU WILL SMOKE IT, YOU WILL NEVER LOOK LIKE ME. I am the horrible example of a man not using it.

POULTRY

ROUNDWORMS CAUSE BIG POULTRY LOSS

Roundworms of poultry and intestinal parasites are directly or indirectly responsible for the greatest loss to poultry flocks. In many cases where birds become unthrifty, poor in flesh, and finally die, roundworm infestation, combined possibly with incorrect feeding methods appears to be the only tangible cause.

Outbreaks of infectious disease are more often found in flocks harboring roundworms than in worm-free flocks. This indicates that the parasites must be a factor in lowering the vitality and resistance of the birds to disease. In some states it is estimated that intestinal parasites are responsible for more than 50 per cent of poultry losses. A large share of these losses is directly attributed to roundworm infestation.

It has been reported by some poultry-packing establishments that between 75 and 80 per cent of the birds purchased are infested with some form of intestinal parasites. Such infested birds represent an economic loss not only to the poultry raiser, but also to the packer.

Nematodes or roundworms are cylindrical in shape and unsegmented.

There are several species, four of which are quite common. These are the large roundworm, the ceca worm, the gape-worm, and the gizzard worm. The symptoms caused by these four species of roundworms are so similar that it is not always possible to tell when fowls are infested with any particular type except in isolated cases when the infestation is with gape-worms. Young birds may become heavily infested in a relatively short time, but may not show it immediately.

Diseased Poultry Must Not Be Sent to Market

"Be extra careful not to send a sick fowl to market," reads a warning sent to 92 county farm bureaus by F. A. Gougler, director of the poultry and egg department of the Illinois Agricultural association.

"We should not forget the serious epidemic of poultry diseases that developed throughout the country last year and which may appear again this year," the statement reads. "Since symptoms of many diseases are very much alike, every effort should be made to prevent sick birds from reaching the market, which may cause another embargo."

The appearance of the chicken disease which caused the embargo to be placed on live poultry last year has begun again to show up in the New York market. The embargo last winter caused great loss to western farmers. Director Gougler issues this warning with the hope that the spread of the disease and ultimate loss may be prevented this year, and to forestall the embargo, which was so disastrous last year.

Government and state authorities are working quietly but thoroughly to stamp out the disease wherever it appears.

Pertinent Suggestions to All Poultry Owners

The following questions which are put to the record flock keepers of Iowa by the Iowa State college are pertinent suggestions to all poultry keepers. "Do you Remember?" they say:

When milk ever spoiled the fertility or hatchability of an egg?

When a chick didn't make good growth when it had milk in its ration?

What time you used to have getting a lot of early chicks hatched with hens?

When you had a mongrel flock and wished some one would come along and get you started with a good breed?

The time you had raising chicks on the old ground that had been used for 25 years without a change?

How your chicks acted when they were affected by worms and coccidiosis?

How you tried to fight internal parasites without new ground?

Poultry Facts

Feed nothing that will sour or spoil quickly.

The poultry yard sheltering a lot of "back-number" roosters is not going to bring profit to the owner.

Don't begrudge the mature birds a few days' rest—feed them all they will eat and they will soon be back on the job again.

Water is also an essential, and, although hens drink little in cold days, such inclinations as they may have for the liquid should be satisfied. The egg is about 75 per cent water.

The chicken house should not be shut up without a particle of ventilation simply because the weather is cold. Pure air without drafts is necessary and this is the chief reason for the success of the muslin curtains. Houses that are kept closed up perfectly tight soon become stuffy and damp.

The KITCHEN CABINET

(© 1925, Western Newspaper Union.)

FOR THE CONVALESCENT

The feeding of those who are ill or just recovering, is a great problem. The physician's orders should be carefully regarded as a patient's appetite is no guide as to the right kind of food. Many lives that have been saved, have gone out because of wrong food.

It is well to bear in mind when dealing with people who are ill that they are weak mentally as well as physically. They should be humored as one does a small child, using patience and firmness.

One who is ill from such fevers as typhoid, when recovering is ravenously hungry and will eat more and of such foods than is good for one. Liquid foods, because of easy digestion, may be given in larger quantities, but solid food must be given in small quantities.

Those who are ill tire of foods served in the same way. Even the manner of serving helps a great deal in the appeal of a dish. Pretty dishes, a tray spotless and brightened by a flower, all add greatly to the eagerness with which the food is received.

Here are a few suggestions which may be varied as to the patient's taste or conditions:

Bisque of Clam and Sago.—Boil an ounce of sago in salted water—the water in which the sago has been soaked overnight. Cook perfectly clear, or transparent, then add one-half cupful of hot milk and a teaspoonful of butter. Put the clams through a meat grinder, bring them to the boiling point in their own liquor, add the sago, season to taste with salt and pepper, thicken with cracker crumbs and serve in a pretty bowl with thin toasted bread.

Pineapple Pudding.—Place one-half cupful of water in a double boiler. When boiling add a tablespoonful of sugar and stir in the yolk of an egg mixed with a teaspoonful of cornstarch. Stir until smooth and thick, then add one-half cupful of grated pineapple or pineapple juice. Heat to boiling, then fold in the stiffly beaten egg white and chill.

Soy Bean Oilmeal Is an Excellent Poultry Feed

Tests at the Indiana experiment station covering four years and involving 980 single-comb White Leghorns and Barred Rocks proved soy-bean oil meal equal to tankage or meat scraps for laying hens. Mineral matter must be added to the soy-bean oil meal, however, to make up that deficiency.

The Purdue standard basal ration was used in the tests. It consists of grain, 100 pounds of corn, 100 pounds of wheat, 50 pounds of oats and mash, 50 pounds of bran and 50 pounds of middlings. To this was added 80 pounds of tankage or 35 pounds of meat scraps or 45 pounds of soy-bean oil meal plus 10 per cent of minerals or 47.5 pounds of whole soy beans plus 10 per cent of minerals.

The mineral mixture consisted of 22 pounds of steamed bonemeal, 24 pounds of finely ground limestone and 15 pounds of salt. The addition of mineral matter is necessary to prevent a great growth of fat.

The United States Department of Agriculture considers soy-bean oil meal an excellent feed for growth and egg production.

Plane Is Destroyed by Furious Bull

Soignies, Belgium.—An infuriated bull vented its ire upon a disabled airplane recently and when the animal concluded that its job had been done the machine was beyond repair. The airplane carrying eight passengers from Paris to Brussels was forced down by a defective motor and landed in a pasture 15 miles from Brussels.

The bull, aroused by the chugging of the motor, made straight for it, while the pilot and passengers jumped out and made their escape in a mad rush across the field. The animal charged the machine again and again and kept at his work of destruction until the passengers got out of the danger zone.

Augsburg Confession's Original Draft Found

Nuremberg, Germany.—The original of the Augsburg Confession, which forms the doctrinal basis of the Lutheran church, has been found in the archives of the Germanic National museum, thus ending a search in which theologians and historians have been engaged for years. The Confession, drafted by Luther's friend and collaborator, Philipp Melancthon, was sent on June 15, 1530, to Nuremberg's city council, and thence to the Diet convoked in Augsburg by Charles V.

PHILIPPINE ISLANDS HAVE NEW PROBLEM

Deserted Half-Breed Boys and Girls in Sad Case.

New York.—The well-known human nature, as is pointed out everywhere by every one every day, has not been reformed to any great extent by the equally well-known civilization. Human nature, in fact, seems to be just about the same old thing, doing the same old business at the same old stand. However, human nature seems to be like fashions and morals in this: It varies considerably with location.

For example: It does not surprise an American woman social worker in the Philippines to come upon a case where an American has deserted his woman and children; American husbands and fathers have been known to do the same thing in the United States. But it is rather startling to find the same kind of case in the Philippines complicated by the sale of a girl of twelve—half American, with blue eyes and freckled face—traded to a Chinaman for a pig!

American occupation of the Philippines since the Spanish-American war of 1898 has given the islands the material benefits of civilization. American administration has added to the prestige which the nation now enjoys both in the Far East and the Near East. The Philippines, nevertheless, have not entirely escaped that result of contact between a dominant race and a weaker people which world history seems to show to be inevitable.

Serious Situation. Americans in the Philippines, in short, are now confronted by a serious situation that has not hitherto attracted public attention in the United States—the necessity of caring for several thousands of abandoned and neglected children of American fathers.

There are said to be 18,000 children of American blood among the 11,500,000 people of the Philippines. The American Guardian association of Manila, officially incorporated in 1921 to deal with the situation, has 4,000 listed as in need of assistance. Of these 2,000 are "desperate" cases where prompt aid is imperative if the boys are to be saved from vagabondage and the girls from immoral exploitation. Says Mrs. Mary Frances Kern of Chicago and New York, who has returned from a first-hand study of the situation:

"Foreign occupation always leaves traces like this upon a country. It is a marvel that these traces are not greater in the Philippines, 10,000 miles from home as they are. With the changes in the islands since American possession, due to the shifting about of our pioneers and to the Philippinization of the insular government which forced great numbers of Americans from minor posts, many American men were obliged to leave through sheer necessity. Often they failed to return. And, above all, death has taken very many."

It is unfortunately true that the Filipino women who have consorted with American men have largely been of the peasant class. Many of these widowed or abandoned women, unable by the hardest drudgery to earn more than 50 cents a day, have taken new partners or drifted into immorality. The boys are left to care for themselves. The girls are 'loaned' to relatives or friends. This is usually the first step toward their immoral exploitation when they attain maturity at twelve to fourteen years.

Deplorable Conditions. "American women in Manila, supporters of the Guardian association, break down and weep when they tell of girls of twelve found locked in chicken coops because they would not obey the demands of their masters; girls of eleven blinded by disease; girls of twelve traded to Chinamen for pigs. Cared for and educated, these boys and girls will become decent men and women and useful citizens—the bulwark of Americanism in the Far East in years to come."

The American Guardian association of Manila has annually expended from $15,000 to $20,000, contributed by Americans in the islands, and has been able to care for about 150 boys and girls. Now the demands of the situation have become too large for the 6,000 Americans to meet.

Gov. Gen. Leonard Wood of the Philippines has asked the American people to co-operate by raising a fund of $2,000,000. This fund is to be invested in the United States, through a trust committee, and its earnings disbursed through the American Guardian association of Manila. W. Cameron Forbes of Boston, former governor general of the Philippines, is national chairman of committees formed throughout the country. Mrs. Kern, authorized by General Wood, has opened headquarters at 3 West Fortieth street, New York city.

Find 800-Room Dwelling in Underground Ruins

Albuquerque, N. M.—Ruins of ancient Pueblo Bonito, N. M., which revealed to geologists a prehistoric underground settlement, are declared to be only the "upper story" of still another buried village.

Neill Judd, director of excavations of the National Geographic society, has announced that diggings disclose the second underground city covers at least three and a quarter acres. Among the dwellings found in the pueblo, Judd said, was a building of 800 rooms, of which 500 were on one floor. Many of the underground dwellings stand four stories high, he said.

RADIO FOR XMAS

What More Acceptable Gift Can You Give Your Family For Christmas?

Radio wipes out the boundaries of any farm, bridging the miles which separate the farmer from the city and bringing the whole world to the farmer at a turn of the dial.

Radio destroys isolation. Radio carries not only entertainment but news-information and education, putting the farmer as closely in touch with things as if he dwelt in a hundred cities at once.

Entertainment in the way of music and singing is but part of radio's service to the farmer. It is the news paper, text book and information bulletin combined and blended with the speed of the telegraph and the convenience of the telephone.

These things make it important that the receiving sets used on farms be fully adequate in their possibilities. They need not be expensive, but they must be capable of clear, undisturbed reception over a wide range.
