

GOOD HIGHWAYS A GREAT BENEFIT

Farmers Along Improved Highways Benefitted.

Right now the farmers of those sections served by good highways are reaping the benefits from their investments in road improvements as represented in special taxes, says the Tribune. They are delivering their milk, cream and poultry to the markets regularly with no greater expense or exertion than during the summer season. All the products that may be stored on the farms are available for marketing at any time and many of the farmers are finding it very profitable to deliver their fat hogs in trucks rather than on foot. Truck delivery is possible now while before the building of good roads, it was a question of wading the hogs through the mud from the farms to the shipping point.

While the farmers along the highways are enjoying the fruits of their investments, there is another class of farmers who are practically isolated from town and market and except for their daily paper and their radio, they know little about how things are going on the outside. The milk and cream routes are practically abandoned and the roads are largely deserted, the rural carrier and the village physician being the most conspicuous figures now navigating the lanes of mud and water.

In the daily news reports from the surrounding country, the condition of the highway systems is reflected in the reports of business. Kendrick reports business dull and practically no travel on the roads that serve the many tributary farming sections. Kendrick is considering a road improvement program and the view is held the condition now being experienced will convert the larger percent of the farmers to the cause of better highways.

The farming sections between Cottonwood and Grangeville are considering plans for improving the lateral roads so that they can reach the main improved highway regardless of weather conditions. There is a big demand for the improvement of the highway from Craigmont to Nezperce and on to the top of the Kamiah hill and it is believed this will be the last winter the farmers of that part of the prairie will be isolated.

While some communities are complaining of poor business and poorer roads, Kamiah reports an unusually heavy winter travel and splendid business at the stores. Kamiah now has the improved hill highway to the Nez Perce prairie, the Seven-mile canyon road to Winona and Camas prairie, and the improved highway to Koonkia and these roads are bringing the farmers and the stockmen into Kamiah to do their trading.

The improvement of the lateral roads has been a serious problem in all highway districts but it is probable the Lewiston highway district has come nearer solving this matter satisfactorily than any other district of the central Idaho country. At the present time there is practically no road in the Lewiston highway district that is not either surfaced or on a program for surfacing this year. This improvement plan has been made possible by the cooperation between the district and the farmers residing along the roads up for improvement. When the farmers want a road improved, they ask for a hearing with the district commissioners and an arrangement is entered into by which the district will provide the engineering and supervision and the farmer will donate the work for improving the grade according to the plans adopted. The district then crushes and distributes the surfacing and the job is completed to the satisfaction of all. It is expected the outside dis-

Ship Pulp Wood

The pulp wood industry has been revived in this section during the past month or so and at the present time shipments to the paper mill at Millwood, near Spokane, total several cars a week. A cutter near Stanford has been billing out a car every other day, loading with skids and horses. Shipments are also being made from Deary, Avon and other points. The price received is $11 per M. on board the car, $4.50 more than pulp brot some four years ago when a considerable amount of it was shipped from this section.

Pulp wood is white fir, which for many years was considered practically worthless by the farmers who, when clearing land in the early days would simply cut it down and burn it, while turning their other timber into lumber, wood, posts, etc.—Deary Press.

Team Over The Grade

An accident that miraculously proved neither fatal nor serious occurred on the grade just north of Troy, Tuesday. Paul Johnson was hauling in a load of beans, when one of his horses slipped over the edge of the grade. It dragged its mate and the sled with it, all landing in a heap forty feet below. Mr. Johnson jumped before the sled went over the embankment and escaped injury. Mr. Shepherd who was driving immediately behind Mr. Johnson's sled at once hitched his team to the sled load of beans that pinned down the fallen team, and dragged it off them. The horses rose to their feet and climbed back to the road. The crowd that collected soon had the sled and load back in the road. Beyond some small injuries to the harness no damage was done to driver, team, sled or load. Even the beans were not spilled.—Troy News.

Invents Static Eliminator

R. A. Sturgis, a Spokane switchman, has invented an arrangement for the elimination of static in radio sets and has already sold the invention for $100,000 and expects to get another $150,000 from royalties. It is said to be a simple contrivance and one that can be sold for $10.00—and who, that owns a radio set, wouldn't give $10 to be free from that troublesome static that spoils what might otherwise be a splendid evening's entertainment?

Here's hoping that the invention is soon on the market and that a shipment will reach Genesee soon!—Genesee News.

Lowell Smith's Body Found

The skeleton of a boy was found by Lewiston Boy Scouts on the west bank of the Snake river about three miles below Sileott, last Saturday afternoon. It was identified the following day by Wickliffe R. Smith of Southwick, as that of his adopted son, Lowell Mason Smith, 11 years old, who fell from a bridge across the mouth of Elk Creek on May 15, 1925, when a railing broke.

The shoes worn by the boy were the only means of identification. They still remained attached to the feet when the skeleton was found.

The remains were shipped to Southwick where funeral services were held Monday afternoon by the Rev. Geo. F. Calvert of the United Brethren church. The funeral was largely attended.

Crow Farm Brings $83 Acre

The Crow farm, '87 acres, five miles southwest of Moscow, which was sold at referee's sale Saturday at Colfax, was bought by Harold Davis, cashier of the Colfax National bank, for a client, bringing $83 an acre. The land, says the Star-Mirror, was sold by James Devine, referee. Attorney A. H. Oversmith of Moscow acted as auctioneer. The land was sold in order to distribute the estate of the late T. N. Crow. While the place is known as one of the good wheat ranches in the district, there is little in the way of improvements.

Auto Turned Turtle

While driving home from the Rebekah party at Kendrick last Tuesday night, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Woody had a very unpleasant experience. When they started down the hill southwest of the George Davidson home, their car went over the embankment and turned upside down. Mr. and Mrs. Woody were both imprisoned underneath the car, but were uninjured. They called for help and finally Miss Jones, school teacher, who boards at the Ben-secter home nearly a mile from the scene of the accident, heard them. She called up the Davidson home and notified them and the car was soon turned right side up and the occupants released. It seems little short of miraculous that Mr. and Mrs. Woody were not seriously injured.

Agronomy

Farmers contemplating growing seed of any grass should keep in mind that the resulting crop should be high in purity or freedom from weed and other crop seeds. Fields to be seeded in grasses should be well and carefully prepared. Weeds present should be killed by thorough preparation of the seed bed. Cultivated crops could well be used to precede grass seedings.—H. W. Hulbert.

Poultry

In mating the flock the proportion of males to females depends upon the activity of the breed, the age of the birds, the size of the flock, the season, and whether the birds are penned or on range. In general, with the small active breeds, use one male to 20 females on range and one male to 15 females when penned. With the heavier breeds use one male to 15 females on range and one male to eight or ten females when penned. With old breeders, both males and females, fewer females can be mated to a male. This is also true when matings are made in February and March. In large flocks more females can be mated to one male than in small flocks.—R. T. Parkhurst.

Livestock

A few pounds of grain each added to the allowance of good, clean hay, increases the colt's chances of making good. Dry shelter and a clean bed, with access to salt and fresh water, are also quite necessary. Give him a chance to grow a set of sound legs and feet by trimming the feet at least twice a year. Attention at more frequent intervals is desirable. Nature trims the feet where they are weakest first, without regard to shape, so nature's remedy should not be relied upon.—J. E. Nordby.

In The Home

See that the child masticates his food thoroughly. This is important. It insures that adequate time will be taken for meals, lessens the chance of digestive troubles, and aids in the formation of sound healthy teeth. From infancy children should be given something that requires chewing, such as hard toast, hard crackers, etc. Raw vegetables and raw fruits should not be given before the child is able to thoroughly chew them.—Marion E. Hepworth.

Chain hosiery selling scheme has reached this community in a more or less virulent form. Before you take hold of the proposition, better analyze it! Figure it out with a paper and pencil and see if it isn't a fact that if you get your hosiery for a little or nothing, some of your friends are paying for the stockings you wear.

Luther Burbank has produced a 12 foot corn stalk bearing 14 ears of good corn. Surfaced highways indicate progress, prosperity. Mud roads bring isolation, degeneration, and eventually, poverty. Mud roads belong to the past. They are too expensive for modern times.

The other day in an Ohio city a Masonic lodge placed the sum of $5000 in a savings bank that pays 6 per cent interest on the dollar, and with the $5000 a note to the effect that it must never be touched until one hundred years from now, or in 2025, says an exchange. Then the original sum, with the compound interest that has accumulated is to be taken out of the bank and used for building a new Masonic temple. In the year 2025 when the original deposit is withdrawn it will not be just $5000—it will be more than $1,000,000. Hard to believe, isn't it? And yet you can figure it out for yourself. Your banker friend will show you how depositing a dollar a week for your growing boy will give him a fine start in business when he becomes of age. Studes in English
By Wickliffe R. Smith

Rhetoric is divided into two parts: Invention and style. Invention is the science of finding out something to say: Style is the art of saying it. The Romans used a small, sharp-pointed steel instrument for writing on waxen tablets. This instrument was called a stylus, and from this word we get our word style, which denotes manner of writing or speaking. Style may be mastered by a close, painstaking and discriminating study of words. Read good books, and refer to a dictionary and a good work on Synonyms. Discriminate in every case where the meaning or use of a word is in doubt and you will soon be master of a smooth, easy-flowing style of which you may justly feel proud.

Synonyms
Pale—Pallid—Wan. Pale is applied to both persons and things. We speak of a pale face, a pale blue sky, a pale green dress. Pallid is a much stronger word than pale. Sudden fright may cause a person's face to become pale. Protracted illness, hunger and fatigue will bring on pallidness. Wan is a stronger word than pallid—a heightened form of pallor.

Contagion—Infection. Both these words mean the communication of something undesirable. A contagious disease is communicated by outward touch or contact. An infectious disease is communicated by invisible influences working inwardly. Small-pox is contagious; typhoid fever is infectious.

Incorrect Sentences.
The work cannot be did in a day.

The man was laying on the ground.

I have rode many wild horses.

I have ate my breakfast.

The sun shined all day yesterday.

Correct Forms.

The work cannot be done in a day.

The man was lying on the ground.

I have ridden many wild horses.

I have eaten my breakfast.

The sun shone all day yesterday.

A Dig For The Women

These remarks from the pen of O. Henry: "A man asleep is certainly a sight to make angels weep. What good is all his brain, muscle, nerve, influence, family connection? He is at the mercy of his enemies, more so, of his friends. He is about as beautiful as a cab horse leaning against the Metropolitan opera house at 12:30 a. m., dreaming of the plains of Arabia. Now, a woman asleep, you regard as different. No matter how she looks, you know its better for all hands for her to be that way."

Bought 13,000 Acres of Timber

When the Craig Mountain Lumber company Saturday purchased 13,000 acres of timber land on Craig mountain, the tracts lying from four to 18 miles from Winchester, where the company operates a sawmill, the transaction embraced the largest single timber deal, as to acreage, in northern Idaho in years, says the Tribune. The reported estimated price is $1,300,000. The purchase was made from Thomas R. Patton and Dr. A. Weise Hammer, Philadelphia, the former a retired capitalist and the latter a physician.

The purchase price is not made public, but is based upon a cruise and estimated to be made by Ernest F. Nichols, Frazee, Minn., as designated in the purchase contract signed in the law office of Tannahill & Leeper. The lumber company was represented by W. C. Geddes, vice president and general manager, and the sellers by George R. Gardner, Spokane. The cruise is to be made immediately, the purchase having followed a long negotiation.

The purchasing company's previous holdings embraced 12,465 acres of timber land, 6000 acres of timber without land and 7500 acres of cut-over land. The new purchase brings the holdings up to about 40,000 acres. The new purchases interlock with the old holdings and can be reached conveniently.

The timber is generally known as western yellow pine, a late trade name being Pondsosa pine.

Estimates of the value an acre of such timber in the Craig mountain district range from $60 to $100 an acre.

The timber was acquired in 1906 and 1907 by Philadelphia capitalists. It was during the period that the construction of the Lewiston and Southeastern railway, over Craig mountain from Lewiston, seemed assured and the lands were bought along the survey for that road. This railroad did not mature, due to the action of the Northern Pacific in rushing extension of its road out of Culdesac, which served the same district.

The growth of their business and the increase of sales has enabled them to reduce the price $300.25, which makes them slightly higher than a wheel tractor. Track trouble is almost a thing of the past, as they are built of the hardest magnazite steel obtainable.
