NEWS NOTES FROM THE KENDRICK SCHOOLS

What The Students Are Doing This Week.

The first and second grades made pictures of snow men, cut from white paper, and pasted on a black back-ground. They were then put upon the front board.

Several weeks ago they painted vases for Christmas presents. These were a secret until Tuesday, when they took them home. They also took home their yarn "bunnies."

A small Christmas tree has been decorated by the primary room. They drew names for Christmas presents and the presents were exchanged Wednesday.

The fifth and sixth grade children entertained the children and teachers of the four lower grades with a short Christmas program Wednesday morning. This room also entertained their parents and friends in the afternoon. After the program Santa appeared and distributed gifts and a treat to the children.

The General Assembly program last Friday was given by the sophomores as follows: Bible reading, Elbert Long; Song, Mabel Taber; Reading, Elbert Long; Song, Glee Club; Reading, Mr. McGregor; General song.

The high school gave a very interesting program Wednesday after which they had a Christmas tree and presents were exchanged.

Both the girls and boys basket ball teams played Leland last Tuesday night. Both the first and second teams of the boys played as it was a practice game. The score was for the boys, Kendrick 56, Leland 1; Girls, Kendrick 28 and Leland 2. The game was very interesting.

school and with the excellent work being done by the grade teachers.

Nabbed on Booze Charge

Robert Thornton was arrested in Kendrick last Friday night by Marshal Gardner on a charge of possessing intoxicating liquor. He was taken to Moscow Saturday morning by a member of the sheriff's force. He will be arraigned one day next week before Judge Nelson of the probate court.

It is said that at the time of the arrest Thornton had a bottle of liquor in his possession.

Shot Coyote in Kendrick

Kendrick still has earmarks of the wild and wooly west. Last Saturday afternoon some hounds drove a coyote into the barn at the Kester Dammarell place just across the street from the Kendrick school house. Arlos Crocker saw the coyote and called Ernest Clem who killed it with a shot from his rifle. This is the second coyote he has killed within the town limits of Kendrick.

Colored Wisdom

The Mose Jacksons were separated. And knowing that Mrs. Jackson was not at home, a neighbor woman's suspicions were aroused when she saw Mose slip stealthily over the back fence and disappear into the woodshed. Deciding to investigate, she hurried around to the front gate and met the grass widower emerging with a wash tub tightly clasped in his arms and trailing a washboard and wringer after him. "What yo' gwine do wid dem nigguh?" she demanded suspiciously. "Hoek 'em," was the emphatic reply. "Dat woman ain't goin' to vamp no other nigguh wid mah weddin' presents." Exchange.

Received Bad Burns

Archie Clark of Fix ridge was in Kendrick last Tuesday. He has been under the care of Dr. Moorehead since he burned his hands some time ago. He was filling a gasoline lantern when the gas ignited from the burning lantern and caught a half gallon bottle of gasoline on fire. In attempting to throw the bottle out the back door it struck the floor just inside the door. Archie's clothes caught fire and his right hand was saturated with burning gasoline. He was alone in the house with his two little children, his wife being in a Moscow hospital. By the time he got the children outside his clothing was a mass of flames. After stripping off his overalls and woolen shirt he rushed in the house and put out the fire with a table cloth. Aside from burning his hands very badly he was uninjured.

Changed It's Name

"I wonder," said Legget, "why old Tomlinson changed the name of his new bungalow?" "Changed its name?" repeated his friend. "Surely not. He was rather proud of it, because he'd thought it out by himself. It was called the Nutshell, wasn't it?" "That's right," said Legget; "all the same, it's altered." At this point a third man spoke. "Tomlinson," he said, "got tired of that name because small boys used to ring the bell and ask if the 'kernel' was in."—Tacoma New Herald.

Miss Bonnie and Alva Craig drove to Lewiston Thursday and were accompanied home by their sister Bertha, who will spend the holidays with home folks.

A Modern State Prison

The Idaho Home Industries Association is squarely back of a campaign to insure a comprehensive, practical and sensible building program for Idaho's educational, charitable and penal institutions, according to Norman B. Adkison, secretary-manager of the Association. The members of the association feel that the institutions have extended during the past few years—entirely beyond their construction appropriations until not only a few of them but practically every one is over-crowded and in many instances sanitary conditions are extremely unworthy of the state of Idaho.

The state penitentiary with almost 400 inmates was built in those "eye for an eye and tooth for a tooth" days of punishment for 200 prisoners. Outside prison officials, sanitary officials, humanitarian committees, state officials, business men and all those who visit the present prison have condemned it as unfit not only for rehabilitating citizens but even for punishment. Young boys, sentenced for minor infractions of the moral code, are locked up night after night with three or four hundred criminals in a cell not large enough for one. There is no guess-work about there being a "school for crime" and sanitary conditions are filthy and most disgusting. In spite of the most watchful vigilance on the part of the authorities, criminal and degenerate practices are a common rule.

A ten-year construction program for the building of a new and modern state prison is the plan advocated by the Idaho Home Industries Association with all contracts let to Idaho contractors and business men and all building materials as far as possible furnished in the state. The first building in the opinion of Mr. Adkison, who it will be remembered was Gov. Moore's secretary for two years, should be a dormitory for first and young offenders. This will have to be built from new material and will be a direct outlay by the state. But it is the most important need of the institution at this time. In the succeeding years old fire-traps and mad-houses can be torn down and the material used in the construction of cell-houses until a modern institution results.

According to the members of this Association this proposal is not made from any "silk glove" or "namby-pamby" ideas of handling prisoners but merely on the grounds of decency and the introduction of business methods in state business. The present institution is a disgrace to all of the people of the state in the opinion of many.

Santa Claus Coming

Word has been received here that Santa Claus will be in Kendrick, this evening to take charge of the gifts brought to the Methodist church, for the Children's Home at Lewiston. Santa has written the committee that he is very much pleased to hear that the boys and girls of Kendrick have decided to give something to the Children's Home, and so he is making a special trip here to see them, for he thinks they must be an exceptionally fine crowd. He says anything that boys or girls can eat or wear or play with will be just fine. He wants you to wrap it in white, and bring it to the church this evening.

NEWS FROM THE NEIGHBORING TOWNS

Clipped From Papers Published in Latah County.

Vast Mineral Resources

Walter Scott better known in all parts of North America as "Death Valley Scotty" because of his wonderful mineral discoveries in Death Valley, California, some years ago, spent Monday in Deary. For the past few weeks he has been prospecting in Ruby Creek and Potlatch sections, going over the territory as only an experienced prospector can and overlooking nothing that would give him an idea of the mineral possibilities of this district. His investigations have convinced him that there is vast mineral wealth hidden in our hills and valleys, and announced his intention of returning in June to make further investigations.—Deary Press.

Appointed On Advisory Board

T. Driscoll and Dr. T. A. Elliott left Sunday for Spokane, from which place they left Monday for Seattle, where they will attend a meeting of the Pacific Northwest advisory board of the American Railway association, of which organization Mr. Driscoll has long been a member. Dr. Elliott was recently appointed a member of this organization and is attending his first meeting, which took place at the Olympic hotel, Seattle, on Wednesday of this week.—Genesee News.

Favors Bear Ridge Road

Al McKee, of Lapwai, one of the heaviest taxpayers in the Kendrick Highway District, was in town the first of the week. Mr. McKee stated that he was highly in favor of the road building program mapped out for this district, providing state or federal aid could be secured to help defray the cost. He stated in part:

"I believe that a good surfaced highway connecting with the state highway at Spalding and Deary, would do more toward developing the Potlatch country than anything else that could be done. If this main trunk line is built the lateral feeders from the various ridges will follow in the near future. If there is a project in the state that is feasible for the state to recognize it is this few miles of connecting link that will so materially shorten the traveling time from the north end of the state to the Lewiston valley."

Mr. McKee stated that he had a mineral spring in Pine Creek canyon, which would be tributary to this new highway and if the project is completed he and a prominent physician of Lewiston plan to build a sanitarium there. He stated that the water had been analyzed and pronounced extremely good.

Likes California Fine

Fred Bailey writes that he and his family are settled in sunny California and that he wants the Gazette sent right away as they missed it since they have been without it for several weeks. He started work the day after their arrival and has been busy ever since. They like their new location very much and enjoy the warm, sunny days. Fred says he sees a good deal of two former Potlatchers, Jack Whybark and Stewart Reid. The Baileys are now located at 11419 LaGrange Avenue, Sawtelle, Cal.

The Perfect Ad

Walt Mason in Editor and Publisher: I read an ad in the Weekly Drum describing the merits of Beeswax Gum, which cleans the teeth, disinfects the breath and lessens the chance of sudden death, which puts new life in the lagging step and gives one's liver its youthful pep, relieves the mind of its weight of care, abates the nuisance of falling hair. The words were few in this trenchant ad, no windy sentences made me sad. Sincerity was its poignant note; I felt at once in my mouth and throat a keen desire for a pound or so of this Beeswax Gum, which was so good to know. 'Twas a busy day, I had much to do, and I tried to think of the work in view; but I yearned and yearned for the Beeswax brand, until the pressure I couldn't stand, so I left my work to a faithful chum, and went and purchased some chewing gum. This is the trick that an ad will do, if it has the flavor of being true, if it seams the work of a man sincere, who would not lie for a keg of beer. I read some ads that are works of art, compiled by men who are doubly smart; they have command of enchanting words, they have a style that would charm the birds, their line of argument's good as gold, but all their eloquence leaves me cold. They don't seem able to make me feel that truth abides in their soaring spiel. They write of bargains in Belgian hares, but I'm not driven to go downstairs and buy a hare while they're selling cheap—the advertiser his wares may keep. The perfect ad is one that's tense with strong conviction and common sense, that makes you feel you must go and buy a mustache cup or a pumpkin pie, a cockatoo or a chicken roost, or whatever it is the ad may boost.

Juliaetta School Notes

The school held a Christmas program last evening. The program consisted of plays, singing and reading, each room participating.

A contest is being carried on between the high school girls and boys. Each group is trying to excel the other in selling Christmas seals for the tuberculosis association. The losers will entertain the winners with a party at the close of the contest.

Last Friday evening the high school gave the seniors a party, which was a prize awarded to them for bringing in the most money at our carnival. The evening was spent by playing games. Delicious refreshments were served at the close of the evening.

The literary society put on a program for the assembly last Friday afternoon. Among many other numbers was a negro play which had been prepared by four of the high school students.

There have been several absences from school this week in the seventh and eighth grades on account of illness.

The fourth, fifth and sixth grades are paying particular attention to their health. Each pupil was weighed and they are going to keep a record of their diet this week and next. In addition to this, the fifth grade is making booklets on food and vegetables which are bone and flesh builders.

Those who received honors this month are: Fourth grade; Dole Goans, LaVerne Hutchison, Fay Cochran and Agnes Nigh. Fifth grade; Margaret Taylor and Dorothy Bowen. Sixth grade; Charles Noble.

The primary room is working on a project to gain in weight. The children were weighed and their height taken. They have made 2 charts, one is called the "Milk Drinkers", and the other "Bread Eaters". The children are trying hard to live up to the seven health rules.

Mrs. Key is planning a party for her room to be given this morning. They will have a short program and all will receive their Christmas gifts.

The patrons, teachers and the trustees gave Mrs. Key a little surprise last Monday in the basement of the Baptist church. Refreshments were served by the ladies and a set of salad forks were presented to Mrs. Key. We regret seeing Mrs. Key leave our school, as she has been very successful in her work here.

The teachers from here attended the observation classes in Kendrick, conducted by Miss Hospers, rural supervisor for this part of the state. They expressed their opinion as having received much pleasure and benefit from the illustrations given.

They were especially interested in the new spelling method offered by Miss Hospers.

At a recent meeting of the Juliaetta school board Mrs. Myra Claypool was elected to fill the position as primary teacher, caused by the resignation of Mrs. Beulah Long Key, recently married. Mrs. Claypool will assume her duties at the close of the holiday vacation.

Bee Flappers Are Killed

Flappers in the bee kingdom are quickly killed by the inhabitants of this colony.

This interesting disclosure was made in Spokane by G. A. Slocum, Washington State college professor, during a recent lecture on "Re-Queening and Queen introduction". He said in part:

"A colony of bees live intensely and earnestly. The propagation of the species is the work of the queen. An excitable queen, one that skips egg-cells, or that runs around and acts flapperish is killed instantly by the workers. They want their queen to be matronly and tend to her business."

Professor Slocum declared that there is only one queen in a colony of bees and that she flies away only once during her lifetime.

West Virginia Dairyman

Gives Some Poor Advice

Constantly farmers are told how to run a dairy herd, but seldom are they openly given advice on how to run it down.

A West Virginia farmer, long a dairyman, an honor pupil in the graduate school of experience and hard knocks, offers six rules for dairymen who want to flirt with bankruptcy. It's this way:

"Feed timothy to cows—it's good for race horses.

"Keep water ice cold—shivering gives the cows exercise.

"Cow-testing associations are needless—they show how to save and know.

"Don't have any windows in the barn—the hired man might look out.

"Avoid heavy milkers—they take up too much time.

"Don't weigh the milk—it might cause extra figuring."

THE earth on Christmas Eve exclaimed To winter, with a pout, "My old brown coat is shabby now, In fact it's all worn out, It's ragged here and tattered there And torn the other way. I ought to have a brand new one To wear on Christmas Day."

Old winter blustered for awhile And loudly banged the door, And then gave in as he has done So many times before.

And lo! when Christmas morning dawned All gold and blue and bright, Earth wore a truly regal coat Of ornate pure and white.

Santa Claus and Holly
By Frank Herbert Sweet

A BIG touring car swung in at a small south Georgia junction to get a Christmas box, then had to wait for a train to stop and pass before the expressman could be at leisure.

Going back toward his car, the owner noticed a white-haired woman gazing up the track anxiously. He wanted to make a record distance this day, and was impatient at losing time. But he paused at her irresolution. "Anything I can do?" he asked.

"No, sir, thank you. Only I'm afraid I've missed my train, and I'm not much on traveling. My car broke down, and the colored boy didn't know what to do. If a neighbor hadn't rescued me," with a laugh, "I don't suppose I'd ever have got here. It's twelve miles to my plantation."

"Going far?"

"Yes, a long way—to Lakeland, Florida."

Them started, and glanced toward his chauffeur, who was standing by the car door.

"Too bad!" he said. "I suppose you are planning to get through to Lakeland for Christmas. Why—have you your baggage anywhere handy?"

"Only a suitcase and a package of Christmas cooking I got ready last night in a hurry. You see, I'm just making a flying visit to see my daughter before she leaves. She's just married."

"Well," with sudden briskness coming into his voice, "hop into my car. There's plenty of room, with only my wife and daughter. We're bound for Lakeland, too, and will be there the day before Christmas. My man will get your baggage."

"B-beat the railroad?"

"Yes, in my car, with the train's poor connection, I don't—"

"Hop in," he repeated, taking her arm and urging her to the car. "We're glad to have company to talk with. Here you are," as the chauffeur came with the suitcase and a small box. "Now we're off!"

It had all happened so swiftly that the old woman hardly realized it before they shot out of the town and were speeding on their way toward Lakeland at better than fifty miles an hour.

But still she did not realize it. Fifteen miles over the rough country roads in the decrepit plantation flivver had all the sensations of more rapid and dangerous travel than sixty in this big, easy-running car. She settled back luxuriously. The women were nice, too.

Another thing was revolving pleasantly in her mind, and presently she had to mention it.

"The plantation house servants and field hands all expect a little remembrance, my going so far and its being Christmas," she mused. "Then there's Josephine. I didn't see how I could do it all, but not having to pay train fare down will make it all right," happily. "Plantations don't yield much spare money these days."

"Christmas is too much of a burden for light pocketbooks," objected the car owner. "I don't believe in them anyway. I gave up Christmas-giving long ago. Foolish habit. I tell my daughter that, but she won't listen. The Christmas box I stopped for was for her. Wastes money, time and patience. Give money outright, if you have to."

"That's what I'm going to do, partly," apologized the old woman. "Half is presents for the help at home, but the other half to my daughter. She's just married, and her husband starts for Mexico Christmas Day. Got work there, she writes, and it stands to reason he can't have much money. Maybe this will help Josephine and Harry."

"Eh? E-h? Harry—Josephine—Mexico." Then he closed his lips tightly and looked straight ahead.

An hour or so later, while going through an unsettled piece of country, the old woman's hand fell softly on his shoulder.

"Please stop just a minute," she breathed. "I never saw such a holly tree, so full of berries! I want some."

"Christmas stuff is nothing but foolishness and bother, and—"

"Oh, I beg your pardon. Of course! Games, you help cut the branches."

Before they got in, with the chauffeur's help, she insisted on fastening bunches of holly all about the car.

At first the owner scowled. Then presently his gaze began to wander from sprig to sprig, and the scowl began to change to something like a grin. At Jacksonville he drew up before a big Christmas store.

"Got to get something to match that holly," he muttered. "Foolish to have all that stuff outside and no Santa in. And maybe Josephine will expect something."

"Josephine? eagerly. "You got one too?"

"Same one," the grin expanding. "My son's just married. Don't give presents, though—in money. Tom don't need any, for he's going to manage a chain of banks. Still and all, I expect they'll appreciate the half you spoke of. And yes, better come in the store with me and pick out a basketful of clap-trash for those darkies."

Unlucky

In some countries it is regarded as unlucky to carry anything from the house Christmas morning until something has been brought in.

IT WAS just a few days before the great holiday and a delightful snow storm was in progress. The wind as it whistled past whispered of the grand and glorious "Christmas Spirit."

The most prosperous Christmas in many a year had struck Cedar Junction. Happy, snow-bedecked crowds swarmed the downtown district, ablaze with glistening lights and decorative displays.

Perhaps old Silas, who lived on the rural route just outside of town, was the only human being to whom Christmas meant nothing. He had become separated from everyone who had ever been dear to him, and as the years slipped by he had grown strangely morose and indifferent. Children were afraid of him and grown-ups stayed clear of him.

Now, it seems there were several social clubs in Cedar Junction, and at Christmas time they all did their bit toward making everyone happy.

But Sil had always been forgotten. No one seemed to ever think of making him happy.

This year a new member had entered the Men's Card club, one Joseph Bartlett, an extremely fine fellow all round, who was always suggesting something new and original.

At their final meeting before Christmas, when all had been satisfactorily arranged, 'twas Joseph who smilingly arose, filled to the brim with the Christmas spirit and made the following motion:

"Say, boys! How about making 'Old Sil' on the rural route, happy this Christmas?"

At first there was a dead silence. Every one was too shocked to speak.

But when the idea finally dawned upon them, all seconded the motion.

In the midst of the other celebrations, the "Happy Twelve" of the card club were busy making preparations for the call on Sil. They trimmed a small table tree delightfully, with "Silas" inscribed on a huge star at its peak. Then they prepared a cherry punch, purchased a super-box of excellent cigars and sailed forth headed by Joseph, the brave, who was thoughtful enough to slip a deck of cards into his coat pocket besides.

'Twas about 9 p. m. and Sil had retired as usual, at an early hour, when there came a loud knock upon his door.

Jumping out of bed with a thump, he roared: "Who's there?"

"Merry Christmas," shouted the club.

"Well, what of it?" cried Silas.

"We have come to celebrate with you. Let us in."

"What do you mean, you band of scoundrels? Get out of here before I call the police."

The others were ready to flee for their lives, but Joseph was not to be put off so easily. Then came the big surprise.

"Sil, don't you remember your brother, Joseph, whom you thought to be dead? It is I! For God's sake open the door!"

With a crash, the door was swung open and the brothers were in each other's arms as tears streamed down the cheeks of Old Sil, but they were Christmas tears of joy.

Then followed such a celebration as Cedar Junction had never beheld. All who passed the little house wondered why the lights at Old Sil's place were burning all night. But the biggest shock of all was when they actually saw a sparkling Christmas tree in the window.

We do not hesitate to say that this is the Greatest of all comedies.

Also we will show "ARIZON'S GRAND CANYON" which is all in natural colors. It is most beautiful piece of photography. A sight of a life time.

Room for Christmas By Frank L. Stanton, in Atlanta Constitution

WELCOME, Mister Christmas! Here is where we live, With room for you, and always Just all you have to give. Come in! The fire's burning And fine the table's set, And hear us sing the old song: "This life's worth living yet!"

WELCOME, Mister Christmas! We love you more and more When we see you on the threshold Of the dwellings of the poor. You bring the weary wanderers From where their feet may roam To the light, and cheer and comfort Of all our hearts at home!

Legume Hays and Grain Will Help Heifers Along

"Heifers that stop growing or that lose flesh, waste feed and interest on the money invested in them," says W. J. Fraser at the University of Illinois. He further points out that summer is the time to put cheap growth on heifers. Too often, because of poor pastures, heifers make too slow gains or are stunted.

Tests made by C. C. Hayden at the Ohio experiment station showed alfalfa hay to be slightly superior to soy-bean hay when fed liberally with corn. Either alfalfa, clover or soy-bean hay when fed with corn, is capable of supporting better than so-called normal growth in heifers. When legume hays and corn are available, Hayden concludes that a greater variety of proteins or high-protein grains do not seem necessary to grow choice heifers.

Oil Meal for Calves

A pound of gain for every three and one-third pounds of oil meal fed, was the record made in an Ohio calf feeding experiment. A saving of one-third the alfalfa hay was made when two pounds of oil meal was added to the ration of corn silage and alfalfa hay. Calves fed corn silage and alfalfa hay for 140 days gained at the rate of 1.33 pounds. The addition of two pounds of oil meal raised the daily gain to 1.93 pounds, an increase of .6 pound daily.

Three Kinds of Flies

There are three different kinds of flies that bother dairy cows to a large extent. The common house fly annoys cattle by crawling over them and feeding on the secretions about the eyes, etc., but do not suck blood. The stable fly is provided with a beak which enables it to suck blood. The horn fly, is distinctly smaller than either of the other two flies. Sanitation is the most important method of disposing of all these pests.

Satisfactory Dairy Barn

By the statement that every dairy man should have a suitable barn, it is not meant to imply that a fortune should be invested in one. Under present conditions, it is doubtful whether any farmer is justified in incurring great expense for the erection of an elaborate dairy barn. There are a few qualifications which make a dairy barn a suitable place. The most important are probably warmth, light ventilation, sanitation and convenience.

When Christmas Comes—

By B. B. in Baltimore Sun

A BABY coach, a doll that winks;
Soldiers, soldiers; wood and lead;
A windup toy that almost thinks;
A little bureau and a bed.
A kitchen made of tin, with all
The pans and dishes on the wall.
A sled with reindeer painted bright;
A pair of skates for boys with brains;
A ball and ball, electric trains;
A ship full-rigged and proud of mien
To sail the briny deep serene.
A doll house lit with wondrous light;
A book of fairies sweet and bright;
A fat balloon you blow and blow
Until it will no larger grow.
And then, released, the air comes out
With funny whistling, till you shout,
And dance and clap your hands to know
What lovely Christmas things there are
That only could have come from far
Beyond the realms of ice and snow,
And from behind the fairy star!

Under the Mistletoe

by Martha Banning Thomas

IT WAS very annoying. Very annoying indeed! Marcia gave an irritated flip to the pages of her magazine, and set her pretty back more firmly in her chair in the car. The exceedingly fine looking, ruan opposite was buried in his newspaper. If Marcia could have seen the corners of his mouth, she might have been even more upset. That pleasant mouth with the humorous twist. That mouth which opened wide with shouts of ringing laughter. That mouth she had so adored . . . a few months ago. That mouth now twitching with ill-concealed pleasure behind the curtain of the paper.

"Well, accidents will happen! If two persons who have quarreled choose the same train on the day before Christmas to go home, what can be done about it? Nothing!

Marcia read the first page of a story fourteen times, and could not have told on a bet, a single sentence that passed before her eyes. She gave up the attempt and glued a pensive gaze on the passing landscape. If her heart fluttered in uneven jumps no one was the wiser. Marcia bristled with independence. She would carry this emergency through with a high hand. Besides, Phillip got off at a station before hers.

Marcia and Phillip Stood Just Where They Were.

The snowy fields whirled by. Even from the train she could see the fluffy bunches of white on the pine trees. There was a holiday feeling of excitement even in the stuffy car. The porter was gay with a sprig of holly in his buttonhole. In spite of her resentment she could not prevent a thrill of happiness running through her veins.

Home again after many months of hard work in New York! Home to the jolly fireplace, the absurd and lovable dog, and best of all, home with the rollicking family of younger brothers and sisters. And, mother!

They had planned, Phillip and she, to have this Christmas together at her mother's. Phillip had always lived in New York. Of course he had known about the country and small country towns, but not as Marcia had. They had spent many delightful hours talking over the good times they would have sliding down hill, going about singing carols on Christmas eve, stuffing the stockings for the children, tramping through the woods. All the country entertainments which go so perfectly with the holiday season. And Phillip had loved it all.

He had an aunt, an elderly creature who lived in the next town. Phillip talked of her and said he had almost promised to spend Christmas day with her, but now he couldn't think of it. He must go home with Marcia, and Aunt Caroline could go hang!

Of course, reflected Marcia, that was where he was bound for now. Too annoying that his seat happened to be near hers.

The train ran smoothly on polished rails. A soothing lullaby seemed to click from the wheels. Marcia subsided into deep reverie.

It must have been an hour out of New York when there came the grating pull-back of the brakes. The train jolted and jerked. Marcia sat up in startled suddenness. She found herself looking straight into the dark eyes opposite. She stared at Phillip and Phillip stared at her.

A tearing crash! The sharp splinter of glass! Frightened cries! The car was in an uproar!

The porter stood among them. "All right, everybody! All right! Don't you go to get skeered! We ran down the end of a freight . . . nobody hurt. Stay right where you am!"

Marcia and Phillip stood obediently just where they were. Phillip's arm was around Marcia's waist. Marcia's frightened face was pressed close to Phillip's lapel on his coat.

"Thank God, you're safe!" whispered Phillip. His voice shook. Marcia was swept off her feet by a surge of sweet comfort. Phillip near in an accident! Phillip, holding her close, trying to save her from pain and distress. Before she hardly knew what she said, she heard her voice whispering in his ear! "Come home with me, please! I want you to!"

Phillip thrust her away from him in pretended concern. "But what about Aunt Caroline? Dear, dear Aunt Caroline!"

"Oh, pshaw! Phillip Henderson, you know, as well as I do; that you never went there before in your life and are just doing it because you haven't any place else to go!"

The man grinned. "Well, of course, if you insist, and all that sort of thing, I'll do it to save wear and tear on the disposition."

After several hours of work by the wrecking crew, Marcia and Phillip were again on their way towards her home. One of the boys met them at the station with an old-fashioned sleigh. A moon spilled silver on the hills. Mother met them at the door. Candles shone from the windows. A howling mob of youngsters hurled themselves on Marcia the minute she stepped on the threshold. It was all as merry and perfect, a scene as you could find in a long journey.

But there was a moment of secret understanding between the mother, of Marcia, and Phillip. They stood together in the hall under the mistletoe. Marcia had been carried into the living room on the tide of her joyous reception.

"I got your letter," said Phillip "with the seat number and train. It was awfully good of you to find out for me. How did you manage?"

"Oh, the way we mothers the world over manage things, when we want our daughters to be happy. It was such a silly quarrel between you two. I did not plan the wreck, however. That literally threw you together very successfully."

They laughed together. Then Marcia's mother called to her. "Come here a minute, daughter. I want you to see the decorations in the hall."

Marcia's mother was a woman of imagination. She left the lately arrived travelers in the hall under a friendly bit of mistletoe. And what that scrap of Christmas-green saw and heard is nobody's business!

Control Stomach Worms by Change of Pasture

Sheep heavily infested with stomach worms cannot be thrifty and profitable. At the Ohio experiment station it is recommended that control be obtained by frequent change of pasture and by dosing.

Dosing may consist of either copper sulphate or nicotine sulphate (Black Leaf 40). Never use both treatments at the same time. The copper sulphate solution is made by dissolving two ounces of dark blue copper sulphate crystals in one gallon of water. The nicotine sulphate is prepared by adding two teaspoonsfuls to one quart of water.

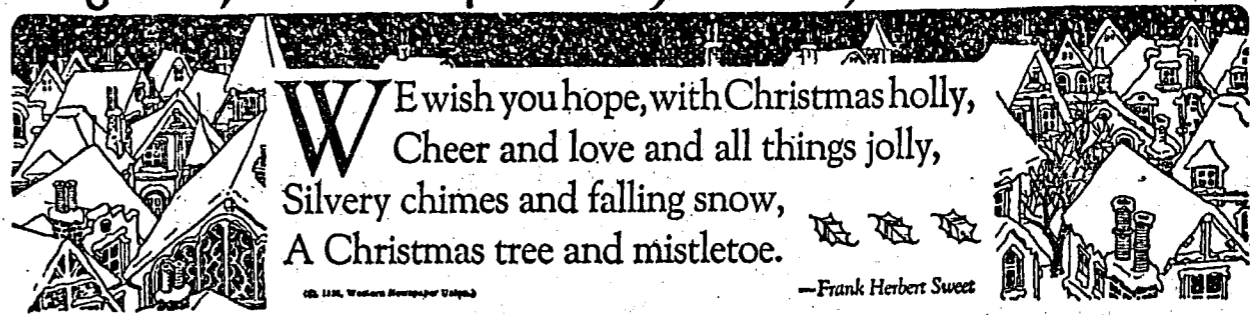

Keep the sheep off feed for 18 hours before and six hours after treatment. If possible, turn them on pasture not grazed by sheep for two months previous. Give sheep weighing 50 to 60 pounds one ounce of either solution, but never both. Sheep weighing 60 to 80 pounds need one and one-half ounces, and all sheep over 100 pounds, three ounces. Dose with an oil can or syringe.

Burning Weeds in Fall Will Kill Their Seeds

Fall is the best time to burn weeds. The burning of weeds is a practice that should be universally followed in places where they cannot be used for green manure. The use of fire destroys the seed as well as the unsightly dead plants.

Where weeds are burned in the fall there is less chance for the seeds to be scattered than later, when the plants have died from frost. It is a good plan to mow the weeds close to the ground while they are still green and immediately rake them into piles. In this way the seed will not be rattled out. The piles should be rather small—half the size of a haycock—so that they will dry out quickly and burn up completely. Set fire to the piles, and see that the loose ends are raked into the coals when the center has burned.

Dairying Is Profitable if Good Cows Are Kept

Dairying is profitable when good cows are maintained. The kind that are capable of producing no more than the average cow in Iowa—140 pounds of fat a year—is not the kind to buy. The man who owns a herd of that sort really owns nothing better than a manure factory. If he feels that it is worth while to milk a bunch of cows and get nothing better out of it than the manure they produce, he is justified in buying that kind, but if he really wants to get paid for the feed he puts into them and get wages for the time spent in caring for them, he must start with a better grade of cows. In the long run it would be much better for those farmers who have started in the dairy business or who are contemplating doing so in the near future to pick up the best cows they can in their own neighborhood, then buy a good pure-bred bull and start grading up a herd.

Origin of a Style

"During the time of Louis XIV two Englishwomen had come to be presented at court. They arrived too late to have their hair dressed in the current style, so for a price they powdered their tresses and the style caught on immediately," writes Eileen Bourne in Liberty, explaining the Eighteenth-century vogue of powdered hair.

Dairy Facts

Alfalfa hay and corn stlage together supply ideal roughage for dairy cows.
Individual stalls and palls are advisable so that each calf will get its share.
When the calves are about two weeks old, they should be taught to eat grain and hay.
Feed the cows according to their production; about one pound of grain to three or four pounds of milk.
Weigh and test the milk and estimate the cost of the feed to determine which cows are helping pay the bills.
For dairy cows on pasture a mixture of equal parts of ground oats and corn is ordinarily the most practical ration. In the case of extremely heavy milkers during the late summer it may pay to add a little oil meal.
Cool milk or cream to not less than 50 degrees F. within a few minutes after it is drawn or skimmed. Maintain this temperature.
Weed out the unprofitable cows. It is wiser and more profitable to milk three good cows than six or eight poor ones.

The Test of a Man

"The place to take the true measure of a man is not in the forum or the field, not the market place or the amen corner, but at his own fireside. There he lays aside his mask and you may judge whether he's imp or angel, king or cur, hero or humbug. I care not what the world says of him, whether it crowns him with bays or pelts him with bad eggs; I care never a copper what his reputation or religion may be, if his babes dread his coming and his better half swallows her heart every time she has to ask for a five dollar bill, he's a fraud of the first water, even tho he prays night and morn till he's black in the face, and howls hal-leujah till he shakes the eternal hills. But if his children rush to the front gate to greet him and loves own sunshine illuminates the face of his wife when she hears his footfalls, you may take it for granted that he's true as gold, for his home is a heaven and humbug never gets that near the great white throne of God. I can forgive much in that fellow mortal who would rather make men swear than women weep; who would rather have the hate of the whole world than the contempt of his wife—who would rather call anger to the eyes of a king than fear to the face of a child."—Selected.

FEEDERS MUST BE BOUGHT VERY LOW

How much can a man pay for feeders this fall? This is a question that is puzzling many farmers at this time.

The safest answer is to study past results and then make as intelligent a guess as possible. For example, during the feeding season just closed, it cost 21.58 cents to put one pound of gain on lambs on 14 farms co-operating with the Colorado Agricultural college and the United States Department of Agriculture. The previous year it cost 18.76 cents to make a pound of gain. In 1925-26 lambs weighing 70 pounds put on 22.5 pounds of gain at 21.58 cents per pound for all costs. These feeders cost $13.75 per hundredweight in the feed lot. They should have sold for $15.98 per hundredweight fat to enable these operators to come out even. This would mean $2.23 per hundredweight higher than the purchase price. They actually sold for $13.01 per hundredweight.

If one takes the $2.23 as the necessary margin between the price per hundredweight of feeders and of fat lambs when they gain 22.5 pounds, then one needs to know how much fat lambs will bring in 1927 in order to find out how much the farmer can afford to pay for feeders this fall. Actually when feeder lambs weigh 60 to 65 pounds and are selling for 10 to 11 cents per pound, it will take nearer $3 per hundredweight for a profitable feeding margin.

When all things are considered it will require an optimist to believe that fat lambs will bring more than $13 or $14 per hundredweight as an average in the spring of 1927. They may sell higher at times. They certainly can sell for less if the big lamb crop comes through. If the farmer takes $12 as a mark to aim at, then he can figure that his feeder lambs should come into the feed lots around $9 per hundredweight to give a reasonable chance for paying out, provided the market has been estimated correctly.

Many things can happen to upset these estimates, yet one thing is certain: After a lamb is purchased, it costs money to feed him through, and as far as possible one should try to sell him so that these costs can be met. The farmer has little control over the final sale price. This throws the problem back to buying the feeder at a price low enough so that he can be fed at a profit.—R. T. Burdick, Associate Economist, Colorado Agricultural College.
