Per Capita Potato Yield Right Guide

Price Trend Upward When Production Is Low.

Per capita production of potatoes in the country, as a whole, is as good a guide as any, when the grower is trying to decide whether he should store his crop in hope of higher prices that prevail at harvesting time, or sell them for the marketprice when they are dug, according to C. R. Arnold of the rural economics department of the Ohio State university at Columbus.

Arnold reports that the bureau of agricultural economics of the United State Department of Agriculture has been studying records for the past 27 years, and finds that when the national production has exceeded 3.8 bushels per capita, the price has tended downward during the ensuing season. The trend has usually been upward when the production has been less than 3.2 bushels per capita. Only when the indicated crop was not much more than three bushels per capita was the grower usually justified in holding his potatues other years the chance of profit was too uncertain to balance extra cost of risk, storage and shrinkage.

Production in the late potato states, according to the federal investigators. is the most important factor in determining the season's price level.

Cleanest Culture Helps

Strawberry Leaf Spot The Ohio station gives the following advice about handling leaf spot of strawberries:

"Plant resistant varieties; the majority of present-day commercial varieties are somewhat resistant. "Set plantations where both air and water drainage are good. When setting out plants remove and destroy the diseased leaves; do not leave them about the patch. Practice the cleanest culture possible.

"Rotate strawberries with other crops frequently. It is rarely profitable to fruit a strawberry planting more than two years, due in part to the accumulation of fungous pests. Many plantations should be plowed under after one crop has been secured.

"In renovating a plantation to be frulted the second time, destroy all diseased leaves. The fungi causing the leaf spots over winter on affected leaves. Mowing off the old leaves and burning over the plantation is advisable when a planting is badly infected. "If these recommendations are followed closely spraying will not usually be necessary. However, one to three applications per season of 4-4-50 Bordeaux spray may be profitable in controlling unexpected attacks."

Pigs will usually begin to eat a little feed when they are three to four weeks old.

Cattle and alfalfa make the best combination to keep fertility on the soil so let both be taxed alike.

Pigs fed semi-solid buttermilk gain faster than those fed skim milk. A possible explanation of the fact may be that the skim milk was too bulky.

Calves that have had no grain, but have suckled good milking cows, may be sold direct to the butchers at seven and nine months old at attractive

A lamb that is kept gaining from birth until ready for the market will produce its gains at a lower cost than if it is allowed to fool away its time on part of a ration.

Barley, in an experiment recently completed at Colorado Agricultural college, proved slightly superior and a little cheaper as a feed for hogs than corn for making gains.

Cattle feeders surely do need a little protection because the cattle market fluctuates so much.

Hogs are very susceptible to both internal and external parasites. They must be guarded against these, or profit may be easily turned into loss.

CREEP-FEEDING LAMBS FAVORED

Young Animals Are Ready Quicker and Weigh More.

Three-fourths of the annual income from sheep raising may be realized from the lambs if they are handled properly and creep-fed, says S. F. Russell of the Missouri College of Agriculture. It is because of this fact that the college has developed the Missouri plan of sheep movement, which has for its goal the production of market-topping lambs. The plan is being 15-tf followed intensively in northeast Missouri. In this section of the state, including 22 counties, there are 405,000 head of sheep. This is nearly onehalf of the total number in Missouri, and 100,000 head more than in the entire state of Tennessee.

The major portion of income from these flocks is from the production of market lambs. During the same pea pound and returned about $3 per fleece. A comparison of these two sources of income from sheep raising shows the importance of developing the lamb industry.

One essential that will help to produce top lambs is creep-feeding. A desirable grain mixture to start lambs is one consisting of two parts cracked corn and one part bran. When lambs are about two months old reduce gradually the bran content of the ration until it is eliminated and feed six parts shelled corn to one part peasized linseed-oil meal until lambs are marketed. Here are six reasons why creep-feeding pays:

1. Lambs will be ready for market two weeks sooner and will weigh five to ten pounds more per head.

2. They will shrink less in shipping. 3. Fewer "culls" will be produced. 4. They will dress a higher percent-

5. They will bring more dollars to the producer, because fat lambs are in greatest demand. 6. They will make more economical use of the grain they consume than at any other time during their lives. In creep-feeding lambs the following essentials should be carefully observed: (1) Put creep, if possible, in shed where sun shines. (2) Have your creep ready for use by the time first lambs are two weeks old. (3) Keep troughs clean. (4) Feed all lambs will eat. (5) Don't stop the grain when the ewes are turned on grass.

Mineral Mixtures Are

Beneficial to Swine The following mineral mixtures for hogs are recommended by Carl P. Thompson of the animal husbandry department of the Oklahoma A. and M. college for those who wish to mix their own:

(1) Air-slaked lime of ground limestone two parts and common salt one parts; (2) bone meal, spent bone black or bone flour two parts and common salt one part: (3) wood ashes two parts and common salt one part; (4) air-slaked lime or ground limestone one part, bone meal, bone black or_ bone flour one part and common salt one part.

Thompson recommends that the mineral mixture be placed before the hogs at all times to permit them to eat what their appetites call for. If it is desired to put the mineral in their feed add one pound of the mixture to 100 pounds of feed.

Market Discriminates

Against Heifer Calf The market seems to discriminate against heifer calves and apparently quotes higher prices for steer calves of equal finish and quality. Very often such difference in market price results from the fact that the heifer calves have been on full feed too long. If they had been marketed 30 or 60 days sooner, they would have returned a greater profit. Heifer calves, which are full fed on grain as long as steer calves, will carry more surface fat as well as more internal fat. Their carcasses are not as desirable.

Avoid Market Losses

When ready for market, hogs should be assembled a sufficient length of time prior to the date of shipment to allow them to become rested. They should not be crowded into small pens or houses nor fed heavy rations. It they are driven to the loading point they should not be rushed on the way. The leading chutes should not be too steep, should be made secure, and have the sides protected so that the animals will not fall off.

Oil Kills Lice

It is not much trouble to get rid of lice on hogs, since either crude oil or the waste oil taken from the crank ease of your car will do the job. Sprinkling with a garden sprinkling pot or a sprayer is a convenient way. It is a good plan to put all the hogs in a nen or stall with just room for the hogs to crowd in close together. Then sprinkle them well over their backs and sides. The oil will spread entirely over them if they are left in the pen li

Two Important Factors

in Development of Pigs Pigs which make good gains during the suckling period will be ready for market earlier and usually return greater profit. The two most important factors which determine the development of pigs during the suckling period are the ability of the sow to produce milk and proper sanitary measures to provide healthy conditions for the pigs. Sow differ in their ability to produce milk, and the poor milkers will have small, unthrifty pigs at wenning time. Pigs which make good gains during the suckling period have a decided advantage over pigs raised by sows which are poor milkers. Strong, rugged pigs are most resistant to diseases and worm infes-
