SILENT LEADERSHIP

Next Sunday is the seventy-first birthday of Theodore Roosevelt. Ten years have passed since this strenuous American slipped out of life in his home at Sagamore Hill. His birthday is celebrated as Navy Day in recognition of his efforts to advance that part of our national defense. When he was young he served as Assistant Secretary of the Navy, and as President of the United States he sent the fleet on its spectacular trip around the world.

Always Roosevelt stood on the side of preparedness. At the same time he left us no cause to doubt his reaction to the recent Shearer activities:

"The men who do iniquity in the name of patriotism, of reform, of Americanism, are merely one small division of the class that has always existed and will always exist,—the class of hypocrites and demagogues, the class that is always prompt to steal the watchwords of righteousness and use them in the interests of evil-doing."

Other Roosevelt Sayings:

Aggressive fighting for the right is the noblest sport that life affords.

There is no room in our healthy American life for the mere idler, for the man or woman whose object it is throughout life to shirk the duties which life ought to bring.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

As the season for counting one's blessings draws near your newspaper congratulates itself upon the possession of a thoroughly good name. William Allen White of Emporia, Kansas is responsible for it. When this robust resident of the corn belt turned down big outside offers to stay put as a country editor in his little home town he wrote the name "Gazette" high in the interest of the whole country.

Because White chose to make his observation of men and events independently he remained a country editor. He was a young man with his way to make in the world when he came to this decision. Since those days he has taken the plain folks of Kansas with him into many a struggle for justice and liberty, the whole nation has followed his movements. The great papers of the country long ago got the habit of copying the editorials he dug out in his shabby little Gazette office. National political leaders came knocking for advice at the door of his red brick house in Emporia. He did not stint them.

Mrs. White, we are told, sets a good table and the country editor with the salty tongue has the knack of making people of high estate feel as at home with him as do his neighbors. He is nigh on to sixty years old now. The whole nation has learned the whereabouts of Emporia, Kansas through listening in on his little local Gazette. All this White accomplished without moving away from his flat prairie town. And always he has minded the everyday needs and hopes of his local readers. Many a treasured clipping in family Bible or yellowed scrapbook shows how humanly the Gazette editor went out of his way to say the kind thing about some body, to write the soothing little word of sympathy, to praise the work of some struggling young hometown chap he happened to know about. Significant honors have come to William Allen White but one can safely guess that in the hearty performance of his daily task this country editor has found life's richest satisfactions.

With Armistice Day just around the corner it is fitting to recall White's epitaph for Woodrow Wilson: "God gave him a great vision; The devil gave him an imperious heart. The proud heart is still; The vision lives."

The New York booze servers of the olden days are reluctantly coming to the conclusion that prohibition is really here to stay. Just a few days ago a strange sight was witnessed in the Hotel McAlpin—an old time bar was being carried to a big truck that was waiting outside. The hotel proprietors have waited all these years, thinking the drink selling would come back, but they have finally given it up as hopeless, and this magnificent bar, with 50,000 wine, cocktail and Tom Collins glasses, 110 cocktail shakers, and 25 silver containers for holding ice were bundled up and shipped to Bermuda, where such things are still useful.

HUMANS BORN GAMBLERS

Every human being has a certain amount of the gambler instinct in him. Of late, the public has fallen for stocks, something the average small investor knows absolutely nothing about. During the recent 18-month stock market orgy, it is estimated that some fifteen million small investors (little gamblers) gambled with big business (big gamblers) to the tune of approximately $15,000,000,000, but the government income tax department is not able to find any new millionaires in this group of little gamblers.

ARE YOU A SUCKER?

The high powered stock selling organizations' principal asset is a sucker list of potential investors, many of whom may consider themselves experienced buyers of securities, but at some stage in their careers have been a stock buying sucker. —Are you on a sucker list? Sooner or later the seller of illegitimate securities ends in jail, and when he does, he passes on to someone else whose term behind the bars may not start until later, a precious heritage of a sucker list. The next time some one you don't know personally tries to sell you securities, laugh in his face and give him a positive "no" as your answer,—tell him to remove your name from his sucker list.

My advice to the public is,—beware of get-rich-quick stock peddlers, or stock selling schemes, and consult your banker before parting with your money.

THE UNEMPLOYED PRINTER

An elderly printer came into the office one day this week seeking employment. He was broke. He had worked in shops large and small from one coast to the other, had been proprietor of several small papers at various times in his long printing career had earned several modest "stakes" and lost them, and now, approaching the setting of the sun, he finds himself begging for the chance to earn his daily bread.

Life is full, to full, of tragedy. Men such as this printer, who have prospered and lost, are to be found everywhere, and in every vocation. In some cases it is their own prodigality which causes their undoing, in others, it is external circumstances which they cannot control. In either case they deserve our sympathy and kindness.

May this unfortunate printer find a modest berth somewhere, that will enable him to earn his daily bread and to preserve his pride and self-respect, until the shadows gently fall about him,—until he passes to the land where all troubles cease.

"Civilizing" Rural America

In progressive localities the farmer no longer wallows in mud, or over gravel, when he comes to town to sell produce or to see a movie. Feeder roads with low cost waterproof wearing surfaces of oils or asphaltic materials are rapidly replacing the cow trails.

The telephone, the radio, and the automobile have done much to "civilize" rural America, and now good roads are finishing the job.

THE TOWN IS COMING BACK

Indications that the tide of industry, which has swept toward the big cities, will again turn in the direction of the small towns are pointed out by Thomas C. Powell, president of the Chicago and Eastern Illinois Railway Company, in the September number of Nations Business.

The Pierce high school recently completed a $12,000 gymnasium, one of the finest in this part of the state for a small school, and paid for it in cash on completion. The Pierce district is one of the richest in the state with over $2,000,000 assessed valuation. The new gym is 40 by 84 feet in size, double construction and has the finest of maple floors on the playing floor.

The Enterprise says, "The annual corn show which closed last Saturday was a success in every way and elicited many favorable comments from the hundreds of visitors who attended both days of the show. There was a larger and more varied display of agricultural products of fine quality than last year."

A chain of bakeries has been started, with Moscow as the central point of distribution, and with small bakeries in all the surrounding towns. The new firm, capitalized at $50,000, will be known as "Sherman's Inc."

A conference of sawmill men will be held in Spokane soon, to discuss plans for fighting blister rust. This disease has spread to 3,000,000 acres of timber in Northern Idaho, Western Montana and eastern Washington.

Aerial motion pictures were taken last week of Moscow, the University campus, the mills at Lewiston and Potlatch, and the town of Lewiston. These pictures are to be used by the state chamber of commerce in its publicity campaign.

Governor Baldrige has asked the public utilities commission to start an investigation of freight rates to the various markets where Idaho products are sent.

Miss Berry, an instructor in the University, was struck and severely bruised by a hit and run driver in Moscow Tuesday night.

Carl Olsen is building a new garage at Troy.

It is reported that farmers who have certified seed potatoes for sale will receive a higher price this year for several years past. Predictions are that extra good seed will sell at $5 per sack.

One thing that seems rather strange is the fact that people who send to the mail order houses don't seem to accumulate any more money than the rest of us.—Salmon Recorder-Herald.

The small town, he finds, not only has advantages over the large city as a place to live in, but industry is beginning to discover that the small plant located in the moderate sized community, measured by the new yardstick, Kilo-Man-Hours, frequently shows a higher rate of production than the huge plant in the crowded industrial center.

"The smaller cities," he says, "are not only favorable to industry, but are not compelled to resort to artificial sunlight; to ultra-violet ray transmitting gas, nor to establish hospitals for the cure of diseases resulting from the lack of fresh air and sunlight."

A man who can live in the midst of flowers and trees and grass and still be within 15 or 20 minutes of his place of business is a lucky person indeed.

His life will be much happier than if he is constantly in fear of being swallowed up in the relentless wave of population which bursts forth from the congestion of a great city only to dominate and disfigure the surrounding countryside.

A number of people have told us recently, as they came in to pay their subscriptions, that they like our little paper. Some have written from distant places, sending a check, and a letter expressing their appreciation of The Gazette. Experiences of this kind are very encouraging. We want to do all we can to make The Gazette a welcome visitor in every home. Sometimes when things are quiet, it is difficult to fill our columns with real live news, but if the people of the community will cooperate and help us, we shall be able, we hope, to put out a good issue practically every week.

Beans as Poultry Feed Do Not Rank Very High

Beans do not seem to rank very high as a poultry feed. Some poultry men use boiled cull beans as a supplement to the regular ration but not as a substitute for the laying mash or scratch grain. Potatoes are not a very desirable poultry feed especially when they are high in price. Cull potatoes are sometimes boiled and mixed with a little bran and fed to the hens to supplement the regular ration. The best way to use cull beans and potatoes is to feed at noon the amount that will be readily eaten by the hens. Keep the laying mash before them so they will eat plenty of egg-making material. Feed the regular scratch grain ration morning and night. The use of the beans and potatoes will reduce the amount of mash the hens will eat but will not cut down mash consumption enough to seriously curtail egg production.

Prevent Diseases

According to the United States Department of Agriculture, no sure remedies are known for contagious abortion in cattle, hog cholera, influenza of hogs, horses, and other animals; tuberculosis of cattle and poultry; distemper of dogs, cats and foxes; heaves of horses; bacillary white diarrhea, fowl cholera, roup or diphtheria, and chicken pox of chickens, and blackhead of turkeys. These diseases must be conquered by methods of prevention.

Since milk is one of the most easily contaminated foods, it is important that it be kept away from disagreeable odors and in a cool place. A brick or cement milkhouse furnishes the needed conditions in a most satisfactory manner.

Pigs at Weaning Time Need Plenty of Grain

Pigs at weaning time should be getting all the grain they will eat. The ration should include tankage or some form of milk. With a good pasture on which to run, pigs should be getting a good start for market weight. Pigs which are doing well should make a pound a day gain in weight. Self-feeders are a convenient means for feeding corn and tankage, and the use of self-feeders results in as good and often better gains than the hand-feeding method. A self-feeder should keep the feed dry, keep feed before the pigs at all times, and prevent waste.

Plenty Good Features

Poultry houses that are built today are sensible; though they have plenty of fresh air, they have no draughts, though they contain more hens to the square foot, there is no dampness which is so fatal.

Two essentials that can be had for the taking are provided—sunlight and fresh air—and with these there is no reason why we should not have the healthiest race of fowl found on the face of the globe, and as a result an increased production of eggs.

Sweet clover seed for spring seeding should be secured early so that germination tests may be made and the need for scarification determined. If it contains more than 50 per cent hard seed, scarification will be profitable.

Whenever a farmer begins applying needed limestone and growing legumes in his regular rotation he not only is guaranteeing a higher average yield in his succeeding grain crops, but also is dodging, in a large measure, the bad-wenther flux.
