Squirrels Soon Be "Ripe"

Word has gone forth that two squirrels have already been seen, which brings to mind that the great sport of shooting these rodents will soon be on. Small rifles are being cleaned and within a very short time the hardware stores will have to get a large shipment of shells to supply the demand, if street talk of what is going to happen has anything to do with it.

The parties who claim to have seen the squirrels are said to be strict observers of the Eighteenth amendment, so it must be true.

LEWISTON MILL SOON START SECOND SHIFT

As an indication of returning prosperity and that the Clearwater Timber company has faith in the eventual return of business normalcy, announcement has been made that a night crew will again be started on February 18 and it is expected both crews will have a six-day week employment. The addition of the crew will give employment to about 300 additional men, many of whom have been without employment since the night crew was laid off November 30.

The Clearwater Timber company has maintained continuous operations with the day crew and the night crew will be off for only a little over two and a half months.

The company is now operating largely from the winter hot pond but some logs are being taken from the large forebay and it is expected the forebay will be entirely cleared of ice within a short time. The larger part of the ice has already disappeared but some is coming into the forebay from the river which will not interfere with the movement of the logs in the forebay to the mill.

The season has been especially favorable for logging at the camps back of Headquarters and large crews have worked continuously while coast logging camps have been closed down. The railroad has had no difficulty in the daily operation of the logging trains from Headquarters so that the supply of logs can be increased as needed to supply the double shifts at the mill.

Local Improvements

J. J. Pickard, local undertaker is having the rooms in his undertaking parlors repapered and redecorated, workmen having been engaged for the past several days at the task. When completed it will give Mr. Pickard one of the neatest places of the kind in this section of the country.

Elk Herd Liberated

The herd of 28 elk, which has been in a corral at Bovill since their arrival from Montana, was released last Saturday from the enclosure, and are now wandering through the hills adjacent to Bovill. A calf died with some sort of mouth disease, and this was the cause of their release, as it was feared the herd might contract it through being confined in the corral. Upon examination of the dead calf the veterinarians decided that whatever was the cause of death, it was not infectious. The entire herd was examined upon their release and found to be in "good health" according to the vets.

Word from Mrs. Eichner

A short note from Mrs. Bertha Eichner and son, Harley, from Long Beach to The Gazette asking to have their paper left in the Kendrick office, further says: "We are leaving here for San Francisco and Paloalto about February 8. We are fine and the weather is warm and nice." Their friends here will be more than glad to learn that they have recovered from their recent injuries received in an auto wreck.

STATE CHAMBER SUBMITS HIGHWAY REFERENDUM

Votes, resolutions and letters dealing with Idaho's proposed "Speeded up" highway program are beginning to come into the office of the Idaho State Chamber of Commerce in answer to the referendum submitted by this organization to more than 800 civic and official bodies in the state. The survey covered by the chamber includes all chambers of commerce, highway district commissioners, newspapers, legislators, granges and the six members of the special committee appointed by R. E. Shepherd, president of the state chamber to gather public opinion in their communities and report. "At the present time of writing the material sent out by the chamber for studying the proposed plan, has been in the hands of these organizations only 10 days. For the convenience of those expressing their opinions on the plan the highway department presented two proposals. The first of these included a special session of the legislature to raise the gasoline tax one cent and authorize the issuance of treasury notes sufficient to finance a 1930 program. The second proposal involved the issuance of similar notes in the total amount of $10,000,000 over a period of four years with $3,000,000 the maximum for any one year.

Wherever complete votes have been taken on both proposals the majority is in favor of both proposals. However, the cross-section of opinion so far indicates that there is a strong leaning toward proposal No. 1 but a reticence to commit either for or against the second and larger proposal. A great many organizations have failed to take any action on the second proposal after voting for the first one. While, in some sections of the state the opinion is grouped, nevertheless, positive and negative votes are coming from all sections of the state.

To date 30 chambers of commerce, four American Legion posts, six boards of county commissioners, nine special committees, 18 highway districts and nine service clubs have reported. There are also 17 more votes, including legislators, newspapers, individuals and mass meetings.

As fast as the vote comes into the state chamber office it is compiled and will be announced publicly through the press of the state.

Million-Dollar Rain

A good-sized installment of that "million-dollar" rain that one so often hears about, fell in the Kendrick section, the early part of the week, but just whether it will all be saved or not is a problem as much of it has gone to the creek and away to the river. Had the frost been out of the ground it could have been properly called that "million-dollar" rain.

Charge Fur Mail Fraud

The following news item, appearing in the papers of Wednesday, may be of interest to those of this community who occasionally have furs for sale:

Jacob Goldstein, president of the Fulton Fur company of St. Louis, was arrested Monday by postoffice inspectors on a warrant charging him with using the mails to defraud in connection with the purchase of hides from trappers and shippers by mail. Goldstein refused to comment on the charge. He is held under $5,000 bond. Postoffice Inspector William Noah said his department had received about 250 complaints against the Fulton company from various parts of the country. It is alleged the company solicited shipments from trappers, offering prices slightly above the market, but paid for purchases at about 30 per cent below the market.

Sold Many Seals

Mrs. Thorwald Nelson, chairman of the Christmas Seal sale on Big Bear ridge, reports $11.61 worth of seals sold by the local schools.

Ervin Halseth rode horseback throughout the neighborhood and sold $3.65 worth of seals. His work was commended by the anti-tuberculosis association at Moscow.

And the Next Day It Snowed

Just about the time everyone was getting ready to go squirrel shooting and were greasing up their fishing rods and reels getting ready to snag a few of the funny tribe, it snowed. And thus endeth a long story.

STATE NURSERY TO SELL TREES FOR SMALL PRICE

The state nursery at Moscow, operated by the School of Forestry of the University of Idaho, which grows thousands of forest and shade trees each year, has just announced that the bulletin listing the trees is available to Idaho citizens this coming spring is just placed in the mails. The bulletin is an eight-page leaflet and besides giving a list of forest and shade trees which might be obtained from the state nursery gives a list of valuable information as to the choice of tree species, planting and care of ornamental, woodlot or wind-break and roadside tree stock. A statement is made that flowers, shrubbery or fruit trees of any kind are not handled, just ornamental forest and shade trees, there being about 40 different species listed. This offers a wide choice for all tree planting conditions in Idaho.

As a means of encouraging general tree planting, the ornamental and shade trees are supplied at cost of production to citizens of Idaho. Farmers over the state may obtain trees for woodlot shelterbelts and for windbreaks at half the cost of production since the federal government takes care of the remaining half. The cost price includes such items as purchase of tree seeds, planting, nursery care, transplanting, packing and delivery to the local railroad station.

A chart is given on page five of the bulletin which lists the various trees recommended for planting in each of the 44 counties of Idaho. The trees are grouped as hardwoods and conifers, the former referring to the broadleaved trees which shed their foliage in the fall. The conifers are commonly called evergreens since they retain their leaves throughout the year—except larch.

Directions for receiving the trees and instructions for proper planting are also included. The statement is made that in planting, care should be exercised to avoid allowing air spaces around the roots of trees.

Death of Mrs. O. G. Gentry

This community was shocked and much sympathy expressed when the word was received Tuesday of the sudden death of Mrs. O. G. Gentry at the hospital at Troy, following a heart attack.

Mrs. Gentry was well and favorably known here, she having been a resident of Big Bear ridge for many years and only removed to Troy last fall, where her husband is engaged in the barbering business.

Besides her husband, she is survived by a daughter, aged six years; her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Rufus May of Troy, one brother, Lloyd May, of Troy and four sisters, Mrs. Rilla Erlich, Clarkston, Wash.; Pearl May, Moscow, and Ruby and Gertrude May, Troy.

Funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the Troy Methodist church, the Rev. J. T. Croot officiating. Interment was made in the Moscow cemetery.

Water Situation Better

The water situation in Kendrick has almost reached its normal condition and everyone has water now with the exception of a few residents in the lower end of town. There is still a bad leak in some of the old mains, which will be taken care of as soon as possible.

Those in charge of the water situation are to be congratulated upon their being able to handle a bad situation in as fine shape as the present dilemma has been handled and all who live in Kendrick should congratulate themselves as well upon being able to have water as much as we have. The city authorities have had men working almost day and night with the electric thawing machines and keeping the big auxiliary pump working when necessary to keep water flowing through the mains all the time.

Commercial Club Meeting

The regular monthly meeting of the Kendrick Commercial club will be held next Tuesday night, February 13, at the Commercial hotel. The meeting will be of a social nature and members will be accompanied by their wives and such friends as they may care to bring.

Valentine Social

The Lutheran Ladies aid invite you to spend a social evening at the Taney school house, on Big Bear ridge, Friday evening, February 14. There will be a fish pond and lunch will be served.

Come and bring your friends.

Here Checking Cars

State Traffic Officer Ernest Robinson of Lewiston was in town Saturday checking cars that did not yet display the 1930 license tag. Only a few were found, but they were advised to secure license tags at once. The dead-line on time expired the first of the month and those who are using their cars without the 1930 tag are subject to arrest and fine. Better watch your step for that is just what they said they were going to do down at Lewiston if they find cars there without the necessary tags.

SEED POTATOES MUST BE CERTIFIED, SAYS BENNETT

The following from E. R. Bennett, of the extension division of the University of Idaho, will be of interest to all who expect to plant potatoes for the market this spring:

The testing of seed potatoes, which was done at Lewiston last year, proved to be a great aid, both to the grower and the certifying authorities, in determining the desirability of the stock for seed growing purposes. Owing to weather conditions last spring it was impossible to get a report out as early as had been expected. However, the information was in the hands of the growers in time for seed potato planting.

The directors of the association, in cooperation with the certifying authorities, have decided this work is so important that it shall be a requirement in the production of certified seed potatoes.

Thirty pounds of the stock you are intending to plant for seed potatoes this coming spring should be sent to Moscow by express, collect, so as to reach there previous to March 1.

Varieties which will be accepted for certification are as usual the Netted Gem, Idaho Rural, North Idaho Rural, Bliss Triumph, Early Ohio and Irish Cobbler.

Please do not treat these potatoes as a vegetable to give them a uniform treatment at Moscow.

Where several in the neighborhood are to plant from the same stock one sample will be sufficient as one from each will increase the work and expense in making tests.

Send the stock to C. W. Hungerford, College of Agriculture, University of Idaho, Moscow, Idaho.

"Yimmie Yonson's Yob"

The home talent play, "Yimmie Yonson's Yob," was given, again, on Monday night in the local opera house to what might have been termed a good-sized audience, weather conditions being taken into consideration. The play was none the less enjoyed by all who saw it—some going for the second time and many coming in from the near-by ridges through the rain to witness it—and all felt well repaid for the time and money spent.

The same cast that presented the play last week was on hand with the exception of Miss Marjory Davidson, who is ill with the mumps. Her part was taken by Miss Eldwa Jones, who carried it as though she had played it many times before.

The entire company are to be congratulated upon their presentation of the play.

An Ad. Correction

W. F. Behrens last week in advertising the new Case General Purpose tractor made the advertisement read "New Case Farmall." This was purely an error and was not done with the purpose in view of misleading anyone as to the real name of the tractor he has for sale, which is the "New Case General Purpose, Model C. C." which he now has on display at his show room in Kendrick.

These errors are regrettable and this was purely an oversight in writing the ad.

School Nurse Inspects

The rural and grade schools of Latah county will be visited by Miss Laura Caples, health nurse for the four northern Idaho counties for the anti-tuberculosis society. Special attention will be given to health inspection and education.

Band Practice

It is announced that there will be band practice Monday night, February 17. All members are asked to be present at this meeting so that reorganization may be effected and preparations made for the coming summer.

GOV. BALDRIDGE ASKS INCREASE OF GAS TAX

Increase of the tax on gasoline one cent per gallon will be the principal business of a special session of the Idaho legislature, it is declared by Governor H. C. Baldrige in a statement issued the other day in connection with the proposed "speeded up" highway program. The reason for this increase, the Governor pointed out, is to raise funds to match more than $1,000,000 of cooperative funds which are available this year and which will be lost if not matched by the state.

The legislature will be asked to do other things in connection with the whole program but they are in the nature of amending existing laws. A law already exists authorizing the state treasurer to issue treasury notes in anticipation of gasoline tax. All the Governor is asking the legislature to do in this connection is amend that law so it will be workable; that is, so any treasury notes issued may be paid back over a five-year period instead of a six-months period.

The legislature cannot authorize the issuance of treasury notes covering the larger "speeded up" part of the program. The attorney general has held that for the law makers to do so and pledge the full faith and credit of the state behind them would be an unconstitutional act.

This part of the program, however, does contemplate asking the legislature to pass an act which would submit to the vote of the people at the next general election, November, 1930, the question of whether or not this part of the program should be continued, so that the special session the Governor points out, would, if called, make financial provision only for the year 1930.

If the "speeded up" program is carried through the five-year period counties and highway district now levying a property tax to raise funds to match federal aid will be relieved of this tax and all the new roads built by the state will be taken over and maintained by the state.

At present there are 4259 miles of highway in the state system. The following tables gives the construction status of this mileage now and as it will be January 1, 1930:

	Jan. 1, 1930	Jan. 1, 1936
Miles paved or oiled.....	588	2742
Miles crushed rock or gravel .....	1878	1032
Miles graded (not surfaced) .....	473	0
Miles unimproved .....	1320	485

W. W. P. Building New Line

Construction crews of the Washington Water Power company are taking the field this week to begin construction of a new 72 mile, 110,000 volt transmission line from Spokane to Kellogg, Idaho, according to the announcement of M. W. Birkett, vice-president and general manager of the electric service company.

This new line will be one of the major construction projects for the Inland Empire this year. Four construction camps, with 60 men at each camp, will be established for the building of the line and the work is expected to require several months for completion. The line will be of the double pole type and will replace a 60,000 volt line built in 1907. Its operation will increase the reliability of electric service to the Coeur d'Alenes and will furnish additional power required by the mining industry of that region.

Ed. Rauschke Still Unconscious

Otto Rauschke returned from Seattle Monday, where he had been for the past six weeks with his brother, Ed. Rauschke, who was severely injured in an automobile accident nearly eight weeks ago, and who is suffering from concussion of the brain, and not a fractured skull, as was reported.

Mr. Rauschke is still unconscious but the physicians say he still has a chance for recovery as he is somewhat improved and now notices any unusual noise. He is under the care of one of the best physicians in Seattle and everything possible is being done for him.

Indian Nomenclature

"Sioux" as applied to a large group of Indian tribes is a shortened form of "adowessiou," which in turn is a corruption of "Nadowe-jaw," the name given to these Indians by the Chippewas. It signifies snake or adder, and by metaphor, enemy.—Pathfinder Magazine

ROAD QUESTION IMPORTANT ONE AT THIS TIME

Supplementing the Governor's explanation of that road question in this state, the following information is sent out by the Pacific Slope News agency from Boise and sheds a new light on the road question:

Now that the mass of information concerning Idaho's proposed "speeded up" highway program has been made public through the State Chamber of Commerce meeting at Pocatello, January 16, an opportunity is presented for reducing the whole thing to a short, concise and clear statement which will say in few words exactly what is proposed.

First of all, Idaho is short of having sufficient funds to take up all available federal aid this year and beginning 1930 the national government proposes to increase the annual amount $620,000.

The logical place for the state to get more money for highway purposes is from the tax on gasoline. This is now 4 cents per gallon and Governor H. C. Baldrige proposes to increase it to 5 cents. To do this requires legislative action.

The year 1930 is at hand. There are not sufficient funds in sight, even with the increased gasoline tax, to take up the federal aid that will be available. Therefore, Governor Baldrige is proposing to issue not to exceed $1,000,000 worth of gasoline tax anticipation notes to be paid back at the rate of $200,000 annually over a period of five years, beginning in 1931. There is a state law permitting the issuance of treasury notes in anticipation of gasoline tax, but this law is so worded that it ties up all gasoline tax as fast as it comes in until the notes are paid, thus leaving no money for highway work. To change this so the notes can be repaid over a period of five years requires legislative action.

The "speeded up" part of the program calls for obtaining $10,000,000 more in tax anticipation notes during the remainder of the construction period. The notes will be issued as needed for construction but not to exceed $3,000,000 in any one year.

This part of the program, the governor feels, should have the endorsement of the voters of the state and consequently he is urging that they approve or disapprove it at the general election this fall. To do this requires legislative action.

These three things, therefore, which are necessary to put the entire program into effect, namely: increasing the gasoline tax from 4 to 5 cents per gallon, amending the tax anticipation note law to make it workable and enacting the machinery to submit the question of the $10,000,000 loan to a vote of the people, are the governor's reasons for desiring to call a special legislative session. If no action is taken until the next regular session convenes the program will be delayed three years owing to the fact that approval by the people can be given only at a general election.

Idaho is not the first state to finance highway construction by the issuance of treasury notes in anticipation of gasoline tax. No less than 20 other states have used this method. The United States bureau of public roads has record of more than $640,000,000 raised in these states, repayment of which is financed in whole or in part by subsequent gasoline tax collections.

You Can Pay Now

If you are anxious to pay the second half of your taxes, you may have that privilege at any time between now and the twenty-third day of June. The second half of Latah county taxes amount to $285,554.89 according to a report given out at the treasurer's office. There are also some $15,000.00 due on delinquent taxes, payable now, making a grand total of $300,554.89 now due the county in unpaid taxes.

HOW FORD METHODS CUT COST OF DISTRIBUTION

Lower profits in selling save you at least $50 to $75 in addition to the many savings in manufacturing

TWENTY-SEVEN years ago the Ford Motor Company was formed to provide reliable, economical transportation for all the people. That original purpose has never changed. The constant effort in every activity is to find ways to give you greater and greater value without extra cost—frequently at lowered cost. This applies to distribution and similar important factors, as well as manufacture.

For the Ford Motor Company believes that its full duty is not only to make a good automobile at the lowest possible price, but to see that there is no waste, extravagance, or undue profit in any transaction from the time the car leaves the factory until it is delivered to your home. It is obvious that hard-won savings in production will be of little value if they are sacrificed later through excessive selling costs.

EVERY purchaser of a motor car has the right to know how much of the money he pays is for the car itself and how much is taken up by dealer charges. If these charges are too high, one of two things must happen. Either the price of the car must be raised or the quality lowered. There is no other way. The money must come from somewhere.

In the case of the Ford, the low charges for distribution, selling, financing and accessories mean a direct saving of at least $50 to $75 to every purchaser in addition to the still greater savings made possible by economies in manufacturing. Ford charges are not marked up or increased to cover a high trade-in allowance on a used car.

The profit margin on the Ford car has always been fair to both the dealer and the public. Within the past three months, it has been possible to effect still further economies. Today, the discount or commission of the Ford dealer is the lowest of any automobile dealer. The difference, ranging from 25% to nearly 50%, comes right off the price you pay for the car.

THE business of the Ford dealer is good because he makes a small profit on a large number of sales instead of a large profit on fewer sales. He knows, too, that the extra dollar-for-dollar value of the car makes it easier to sell and more certain to give satisfactory service after purchase.

Consider also that the Ford car is delivered to the purchaser equipped with a Triplex shatter-proof glass windshield, an extra steel-spoke wheel, and bright, enduring Rustless Steel for many exterior metal parts, in addition to four Houdaille double-acting hydraulic shock absorbers and fully enclosed four-wheel brakes.

If for any reason you wish to buy certain small accessories, you will find that these, too, are sold at the usual Ford low prices. Replacement parts are also available at low prices through Ford dealers in every section of the country.

THESE are important points to remember in considering the purchase of a motor car. They show why it is possible to put so much extra quality into the new Ford and still maintain the low price. They are also the reasons why more than 35% of all cars sold today are Model A Fords.

Tendency Is to Small Ranches

Temptation Has Been to Overstock in Years of Good Prices.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

On western cattle ranges the tendency is toward operation on a smaller scale and greater distribution of land ownership, Virgil V. Parr of the United States Department of Agriculture, points out. To maintain profits, he says, the ranchman will need to pay closer attention to the details of his business, the management of his herds, and of the range he owns, controls, or shares with other ranchers.

As a rule ranching now includes more farming and cropping than in the early era of the open range. Also ranch acreage is decreasing, but in the northern Great Plains area, Mr. Parr points out, many ranchmen are adding to their owned holdings by acquiring abandoned homesteads of settlers who have given up their efforts toward dry farming.

Methods of Management.

In Farmers' Bulletin 1395-F, "Beef Cattle Production in the Range Area," just issued in a revised edition by the United States Department of Agriculture, Mr. Parr has summarized the methods of management that have proved most profitable and satisfactory in the range area. It is intended as a guide to aid men engaging in the business and as aid to established ranchers in comparing their methods with the best practice.

"The temptation to overstock during years of good prices," Mr. Parr warns, "is one of the most difficult things a cattleman of the western ranges has to overcome. There is a tendency among many to stock heavily during good years to recover losses sustained during bad years, and the usual result is that the gamble is carried one year too far and a repetition of loss occurs generally about the time previous losses are recovered."

Desirable Feeding.

For economical feeding a good stand of forage grasses is highly desirable. Range improvement is good business, either on owned land or by co-operative agreement between cattlemen operating on the open range. "Many stockmen," says Mr. Parr, "when they consider range improvement, think first of artificial reseeding. Investigations on the typical range areas have definitely shown that natural revegetation is far more practical than attempts at artificial reseeding. The first essential is to limit the number of stock to approximately the proper carrying capacity. Secondly the range should be so grazed as to give an opportunity for a high percentage of the palatable vegetation to reach maturity."

Native bulls are usually better foragers than are animals imported from eastern herds. Mr. Parr discusses the possibilities of range breeding of purebred stock for sale to ranchers who wish to improve or maintain the quality of their herds. Farmers' Bulletin 1395-F includes a fairly complete consideration of most of the important problems of the range regions. It is available for free distribution to those who apply to the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Pruning Walnut Trees When Young Best Plan

Wayward offspring of the forest monarchs need some training in their early youth if they are to grow up into trees that make good lumber. This is true of second growth walnut.

The young walnut tree, overcrowded by other trees, retains its lower branches indefinitely unless it is pruned when young. And when the tree matures, these lower limbs produce large knots that extend so far into the trunk that they ruin its value for lumber. But a few minutes' time spent pruning the lower limbs makes the sapling grow more tall and stately. And when the tree matures, the effort yields big dividends in a clear log that can be cut and sold at a good price.

Agricultural Squibs

Roadside markets cannot have continued success unless they sell quality products.

Sell cows that test low in butterfat; get highest cows in their place, and increase the herd average.

A Wisconsin authority says that Americans eat $400,000 bushels of pickles a year, or two quarts, on an average, for each person.

Keep plenty of good fresh water before the ducks at all times. Young ducklings do not need water to swim in, but they certainly need plenty of water to drink at all times.

Some soils are peculiarly adapted to alfalfa growing. Some soils must receive special preparation, such as liming, fertilizing, summer fallowing, inoculation of seed, and other artificial applications.

No grower is doing all that he can for maximum fruit setting in Delicious and Staygreen unless hives of bees are present in their plantings and effective pollinating varieties are mixed in the planting or are in adjacent rows.

Sanitation Pays in Raising Pigs

Indiana Producers Are Enthusiastic Over Increase in Profits.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Hog producers of Indiana who have tried raising their pigs, according to the sanitation system of hog production developed by the bureau of animal industry of the United States Department of Agriculture, are enthusiastic over the increase in their profits which the system made possible, says Dr. J. E. Gibson, federal inspector in charge of hog-cholera control work in Indiana. Doctor Gibson reports that the increase in returns resulting from the use of the system, over the returns received by the same producers under their former methods, has been about $6 per pig, on an average. The system involves the farrowing and raising of pigs under such conditions that they do not have parasites, especially roundworms, which if not controlled, retard growth and cause death in many instances.

Adoption of System.

The plan of getting the system into practice was to go to the farmer in a township who had been the least successful in raising hogs and induce him to try out the system. So many farmers applied for supervision that all could not be served.

One farmer who had become greatly discouraged was about ready to quit hog raising. He took up the sanitation plan. He had to buy all the feed used except pasture. He formerly had not been able to make his hogs average 200 pounds under eight or nine months. This year, under the new system, he had 38 shots which averaged exactly 200 pounds at five months and five days. They sold for $11.50 per hundredweight, bringing a total of $807, or $374 more than cost of feed.

Benefits to Farmers.

Another farmer who had been able to raise, on an average, only four or five pigs to the sow, raised seven pigs per sow this year and attributed the results to the sanitation. Altogether, in Indiana this year more than 6,000 hogs were raised under the plan with benefits amounting to $36,000. There was an average increase of two pigs saved per sow on farms where the sanitation was used.

An Irishman lay dying when the odor of cooking assailed his nostrils. Summoning his weeping daughter to his bedside he said:

"Nora, darlint, ain't it doughnuts that I smell?"

"Right for ye, father," the girl replied.

The daughter delivered the message to the mother in the kitchen and brought back this answer:

"Mither says ye cannot have one of them doughnuts; they are fer the wake."

Human Brotherhood Pays

(By Rabbi Jacob Tarshish, Temple Israel, Columbus, Ohio.)

There is no greater ideal to set before the people than that of human brotherhood.

The time is coming when men and women must stop mouthing the sentiment and begin actually believing it. The word "prejudice" must be written out.

Capital must learn the great part organized labor plays in the building of prosperity, and labor should learn the incalculable value the capitalist gives to our modern system.

The native American, instead of hearing the perpetual slogan of 100 per cent Americanism, should know that the Englishman is not the red coat of the revolutionary war; that the Germans are not barbaric Huns; that the Chinese and Japanese do not constitute a yellow menace; that the Russian government did not come into existence to destroy the world; that the French are not a decadent nation; that the Italian is not a man with a stiletto.

There never was a time, and there never will be, when all men will look alike, think alike, or live in the same country under the same conditions. The greatest virtue of man is to see good in all people.

The Dyed Dress

By BEATRICE VANDERGRIFT

(Copyright.)

MARY BENNETT had no new dress and no money to get one. And David Lang was coming back to town after being away four years at college and abroad. David's father had been the local druggist, but a new soft drink of his own concoction had made him a millionaire.

The town's social leaders, the McConnells, were giving David a dance. They had two pretty, unmarried daughters.

Mary ruefully imagined that David had forgotten her and she had no new dress to catch his eye afresh. In despair and with a vain hope, she took her one old evening dress down to be dyed. It had been a light blue and Mary ordered it to be dyed a dark blue. The girls might not recognize it.

When she called for it on the afternoon of the dance, it had been dyed a vivid lipstick red. Mary had never worn red. She hadn't dared to. But there was no time for the dyer, an uncle of David's who had stayed poor, to rectify the mistake.

Mary had already seen some of the other girls' new frocks. Irma McConnell's was deep green that made her skin look like a water lily's. Grace's dress was canary yellow and was nothing more than a great fringed shawl. Both Grace and Irma were pretty. How would David ever notice Mary among them, even in the vivid old red gown that everyone knew by heart?

At the dance, Mary danced twice with boys she had always known, then sat alone, watching the gay circle that moved wherever David went. He was very handsome in his tuxedo, the first that Mary had ever seen him wear.

Mary's throat thickened as she watched him. At last, in despair she went up to one of the bedrooms to powder. She had read it was the approved thing for girls to do who did not seem to be especially popular. A group was coming down the hall, laughing.

"Poor Mary!" giggled one of the McConnell girls. "Thinks she's distinguishing her old standby. And red of all colors!"

"Yes," a voice replied, "I thought I recognized that dress. Feel kind of sorry for Mary. She's a nice girl, but she sure has more nerve than I. I to come to a party like this with that dress. But let's be nice to her—it's not her fault."

More nerve than she! Let's be nice to her! Mary was furious. At first she thought to let the girls know she had overheard, but then the humiliation of it all overwhelmed her. As the girls entered the room she went out quietly, without looking at them.

Should she leave without saying a word and go home?

Why do girls have to be so mean? The dress looked all right, except that it was old and was dyed such a crazy color. But why should a dress spoil her party?

The injustice of it. She would never go to another party as long as she lived!

Mary retreated down the stairs and crossed the dance floor to the dark porch. She could not go back in among the dancers, the men indifferent, the girls laughing at her pitiful attempt to have a gay new dress in David's honor. But she hadn't wanted it red! They could have spared her that much humiliation.

A man stood beside her. It was David.

"Don't you want to come in and dance?" he asked.

"No, thanks," returned Mary bitterly. "I would rather be shot than go in there again."

"Why, what's the matter?" he asked kindly.

"This dress," she blurted.

"What's wrong with it?"

"I've worn it a hundred times. It's old—I had it dyed, thinking I could fool them—I hadn't wanted it this idiotic color, though."

"What's the matter with the color?"

Inquired David with a curious touchiness. "I think it's the most beautiful dress here."

"Now you're making fun of me," said Mary dryly.

"I'm not," contradicted David. "I have a professional right to think it beautiful. I dropped it at uncle's just as he was going to dye it and he let me do it. I'm sorry I got the wrong color, but I thought," he added with a thine of pride, "that I picked a pretty one. I've been looking for the girl who owned this dress ever since. I—I've woven quite a romance about it, Mary."

Mary smiled and went in with him to dance, secure in the knowledge that he had eyes for no other gown. For her dress was his own handiwork and, manlike, he took pride in it. Therefore, she herself began to have a personal value for him.

Of course, after David married Mary he never noticed her clothes again. He irrevocably paid for them.

Pied wagtails are attractive birds, with bold, swinging flight, says Nature Magazine. Their call is somewhat like their relatives, the plovers, as they fly, then alighting beside a stream or stagnant pool to feed, while constantly wagging their long tails. These pied wagtails of England are clad in contrasting black and white. The white wagtails, more common on the continent, are gray and white.

"The Country Store"

The following piece of poetry, was sent the Gazette by Mrs. L. M. Benjamin of Palouse, Wash., and a little note attached to it said: "Your paper is read in a dozen stores of this very kind." Anyway, we figure it is worth printing:

Old Wilson keeps our country store. It has most everything that anyone could ever want, or that the stage can bring. There's hummin' tops, long whips and sleds that all boys like to see; everything a farmer needs, from saws to rope and tea. Pots, pans and coats, hats, gloves and shoes, fancies for the girls. They say old Miss Tuttle Fish has bought a set of curls. Way toward the back there is a stove where I can warm my nose—if I can find a little room to even put my nose.

The men they sit and talk and chew and spit into the sand that Wilson has in boxes close, some spitters always land. They talk about the wind and clouds and if it's goin' to snow; or if it's maybe warmin' up for water's gettin' low. Ed. Martin tells about his cow that got choked on some corn, or Lanky how his pawin' horse will wake him in the morn; Bill Smith has one he likes to tell about his dogs and cats that sets old man Baseum off about his mice and rats. They cut more wood, shuck more corn and stack more hay a-sittin' round that old black stove than on a summer day; They talk about the president, what congress ought to do, Then they tell funny stories I like to listen to. Ma says their stories aren't so nice. She thinks they are a bore; But my, the men do like to stay down at Wilson's store.

Street Tractor Crushes Two
 Down at Houston, Texas, on Monday an ambulating tractor turned engine of destruction, crushing out the lives of two men and wrecking a dozen motor cars as it ran wild in a street.
 The machine, a combination tractor-grader used in street construction, began its swath of destruction when the driver, A. McCarthy, lost his balance in rounding a corner and fell beneath it and was ground to death.
 Its exhaust roaring and with all the battering power of an army tank, the uncontrolled tractor lumbered on its way, battering and smashing automobiles.
 Wade Gatewood, a pedestrian, essayed to stop the wild charges as other frightened persons fled to safety. He met the fate of the driver.
 Gatewood, employed by the state highway department as a tractor operator, leaped on the machine and grasped the emergency brake. It broke and he was thrown under the plunging monster.
 The machine continued its destructive progress for more than 100 feet before it came to a stop.

Ice Gorges in Clearwater
 Two monster ice jams that had formed in the Clearwater river above the big dam were holding the river back for a distance of about a mile and a half Tuesday morning of this week. The timber company's steamer, "Clara," was unable to clear the ice from the quarter-mile blockade a short distance above the dam. Many people go almost every day to witness the sight.

Airplane Designations
 The letters on the wings of airplanes have the following significance: N is an international symbol which designates that the plane is from the United States; N designates that it is an experimental plane; C designates that it is a licensed plane. The numbers have no special significance aside from the fact that they show the number of registration of the plane.

want being that we are prone to visualize, was not long lived, and usually had a small family. He had maladies of his own like rheumatism and blindness, and succumbed to the white man diseases like a leaf to the autumn frost. In certain animal-like traits he seemed superior; he swam by instinct and was immune to the poisons of carrion flesh and noxious plants which were deadly to the whites. He could eat twice as much as a white man, but could not fast as long. The white man excelled him in even Indian feats of strength and skill, could shoot straighter, jump farther, and usually prevailed in hand-to-hand struggles. John Colter, naked and bare-foot, outran a whole band of Indians, stopping long enough to kill one of them with the redman's own spear.

Mentally, the Indian is hard to classify or compare. He was both above and below what we have come to know as a "moron." He had some clever instincts, and could imitate, but lacked reasoning powers. In school, he learns to write like copperplate, but arithmetic is painful. He has never invented any mechanical device worth speaking of. In baseball, he acquires speed and curves, can bat, catch, and run, but rarely displays headwork or team work. The quick clever thinking so essential to good football is usually clear "over his head."
