Kendrick Union Services

Regular union services will be held on Sunday, August 2, by the Methodist and Presbyterian churches of Kendrick. At the morning service at the Presbyterian church, Rev. David Oastler will bring the message on "The Land of Sinim." He extends a special invitation to young people to hear this message, which will be of interest to them.

At the evening service in the Methodist church, the sacred drama, "Lydia Seller of Purple," will be presented by the high school class of the Daily Vacation Bible School. It is based on chapter 16 of The Acts of the Apostles, and relates graphically the experiences of Paul and Silas in the city of Philippi. Mrs. Clapp will direct the drama, the cast for which follows:

Lands 14-inch Trout

Marvin Long, Roy Ramey, and a few others who claim to be fishermen have nothing on John Brewster Thompson, who took his fishing outfit and went down to the Potlatch last Saturday morning and jusa above the depot hooked and landed as pretty specimen of the rainbow trout as one would care to see—and it measured exactly 14 1/4 inches on the print-shop yardstick. The yardstick is absolutely correct, as we do not use it to sell by, hence, there is no give to it.

It might be a good idea for some of these would-be fishermen to ask young Thompson how he did it.

Fishermen Return

Mr. and Mrs. Ira Bolon and A. K. Carlson returned Monday from a week-end fishing trip to Lake Chatcolet, where they went in the hope of landing a nice string of bass. The fish were not biting and they succeeded in landing only four of this specie but they were very nice ones, at that. Chatcolet is one of the best bass-fishing places in this part of the state, but they are moody fellows and positively will not eat when they are not hungry.

LITTLE CHANGE IN MARKET SITUATION

during the corresponding week last year.

With more high protein wheat available, premiums were lowered slightly. Receipts at Kansas City were still mostly from Kansas on earlier purchases. Shipments were mostly of old wheat being transferred to Eastern points. Harvesting of winter wheat was about half completed in Colorado at the close of the week, according to trade estimates, and marketings were increasing; 594 cars had been received to July 24, at Denver, compared with 204 cars for the corresponding period last year. No. 2 hard winter was quoted FOB Colorado shippings points at 30c to 33c per bushel in bulk. Mills and elevators at Forth Worth were bidding 49c to 49½c for No. 1 hard winter, ordinary protein, on the basis of Galveston export rate and 49½c to 50c per bushel for 13 per cent protein wheat. Exporters were bidding 48½c per bushel for No. 1 hard winter delivered on track at Galveston.

Offerings of soft red winter were hardly sufficient for trade requirements, and prices advanced ¼c per bushel in the principal markets. Growers were not selling freely, while mills were actively in the market for new crop wheat. At the close of the market July 24, No. 2 soft red winter was quoted at Kansas City at 45½c to 46c, at St. Louis at 51½c to 52c, and at Cincinnati at 53c per bushel. Receipts at St. Louis were principally from Illinois, while demand was rather general, with mills taking a smaller proportion than in other years because of good local supplies. Rains in Ohio during the week threatened damage to the new crop and the quality of current receipts was lower than the first arrivals.

Spring wheat markets held steady, with premiums on cash wheat firm as a result of an excellent demand for current offerings; 1204 cars of wheat were received at Minneapolis, of which nearly half were of winter wheat. Receipts at Duluth totaled only 232 cars. Samples of wheat submitted by country shippers of lots ready for shipment, indicated that the market movement from early sown grain would get well under way during the coming week. Most of the samples averaged light in weight, but high in protein and showed the effect of the intense heat. At the close of the market July 23 No. 1 dark northern was quoted at Minneapolis at 8c to 12c over the September price, which closed at 54½c. No. 1 hard winter from the Southwest, was quoted at 2c to 9c over the September price. No. 1 dark northern was selling at Duluth on the same date at 62c to 66c and No. 1 northern at 61c to 65c per bushel. Canadian spring wheat markets weakened under a continued slow export demand for Canadian wheat and the July delivery at Winnipeg declined 2½c during the week. At the close of the market July 24, No. 1 Manitoba was quoted at Winnipeg at 55½c per bushel.

Pacific Coast markets held about unchanged, but trading was of small volume, with offerings light and demand dull. Winter wheat harvesting began in Washington and Oregon during the week and spring wheat was maturing rapidly. Considerable amounts of grain acreage were reported being abandoned or cut for hay in the drier areas. Receipts of old wheat at Portland continued large, but consisted principally of the transfer of grain from country points to terminals by domestic marketing agencies. Offerings of new wheat were light, with farmers showing little inclination to sell at current low prices. Inquiry for wheat from both domestic and export mills continued dull because of the slow demand for flour. Export business in wheat was also of limited volume and sales for the week totaled around 3000 to 4000 tons to the United Kingdom and the Continent. Prices held about unchanged compared with a week ago, with No. 1 Big Bend Blue-stem hard white quoted at Portland at 59c, and at Seattle at 58c per bushel, sacked. Hard winter and western red were quoted at the latter market at 51c and western white at 52c per bushel. Soft and western white were quoted at Portland at 52c and hard winter, northern spring and western red at 49½c per bushel. No. 1 dark northern spring from Montana with 16 per cent protein was quoted in bulk at Seattle at 82c.

California wheat markets remained quiet, with prices about unchanged from a week ago. Growers generally were not pressing supplies upon the market at current prices, which would net growers 80c to 85c per 100 for No. 1 or soft white, FOB Sacramento valley points. Mills were generally taking only sufficient wheat for immediate needs and were placing most of their orders on outside markets. Washington and Oregon wheat was offered at the close of the week, delivered San Francisco, at $1.00 per 100, for No. 2 soft or western white. Red spring feed wheat was offered at 95½c per 100. No. 1 hard winter with 13 per cent protein from Texas and New Mexico was offered in bulk delivered California points at $1.02½ to $1.05, while No. 2 hard from Utah and Idaho was quoted at the same price. Local No. 1 hard and soft white wheats were quoted at San Francisco at $1.05 to $1.12½ and at Los Angeles at $1.07½ to $1.12½ per 100.

It looks now as if the whole world lost the World War.

UNCLE SAM HELPS US SOLVE FOOD PROBLEM

Uncle Sam, who is continually busy trying to do something to improve the condition of his people, is now seeking to give us some information on how to get better and more nourishing meals for less money. The United States Bureau of Economics at Washington has worked out a plan to help families with low incomes solve the food problem, and in writing of this laudable work in the current issue of the National Republic, Oliver McKee, Jr., says:

"For the first time in our history, Uncle Sam has set out to teach the American people better food habits. The drought and the business depression provided the initial impulse, as many thousands of American families in all parts of the country have faced the problem of getting a satisfactory food supply with little ready cash. So it is that the Bureau of Home Economics has worked out a plan, at the request of the President's Emergency Committee for Employment, whereby every cent spent for food will count to the maximum in preventing malnutrition, and in maintaining the necessary standards of health. Though these food plans have been worked out primarily to help families with low incomes, they nevertheless have a much wider application than this. We have been a wasteful people, in our food, as in other things, and the guides may prove helpful to those who do not feel the pinch of financial depression.

"The need is not so much for conservation, as it is to know how to spend wisely for food. At times such as the present, when many families find their income cut to the bone, it is most important that food standards be not lowered. For if they are lowered, not only will adults suffer, but the children's health will be undermined, and suffer a handicap which will stay with them to the end of their days.

"Says Dr. Lillian M. Gilbreth, chairman of the women's division of the President's Emergency committee: 'Because of the drought there is less than the usual reserve of home produced foods, and in many rural sections practically everything must be bought. In periods such as we are experiencing now, the danger is that lack of funds will result in a diet which is not properly balanced from the standpoint of health. For this reason the President's Emergency committee for employment asked the Bureau of Home Economics to work out an adequate diet at the lowest possible cost.'

"It is a well known fact that even in prosperous times many persons do not eat proper food to insure good health. Indigestion, soft and poorly formed teeth, and poorly shaped bones often rise from unsatisfactory diet. It is among the undernourished, too, that tuberculosis most easily finds its victims. A lowered efficiency and resistance due to insufficient diet, again, often lead to such diseases as rickets and pellagra. The lack of a certain vitamin in the food in many children and adults, leads to pellagra. In 1929 it is estimated that at least 200,000 persons suffered from this disease. In ordinary times, this disease is largely confined to certain parts of the southern states, where many people live on a diet that is dangerously close to the margin of safety. Unless an educational campaign is conducted, therefore, there is a strong possibility that this disease will greatly increase in 1931."

Something to Think About

The person who, through carelessness, causes a fire is in exactly the same class as the motorist whose carelessness results in damage to the property or lives of others.

There is no such thing as an "individual fire." The deficit it creates must be paid for, in one way or another, by the entire community. When John Jones' factory burns it is not only John Jones who suffers—but all his employees, and all other property owners who must make up the taxes lost through the fire. No company has yet written an insurance policy which in the broader sense compensates for lost time, lives, opportunity, livelihood.

The citizen who allows fire hazards to go unattended in his home or place of business, who fails to take every measure that makes for fire prevention, is not only derelict in his duty to the community—he is a direct menace to the lives and property of all other citizens.

That idea of making Fords out of vegetables is nothing new. We've been getting vegetables in tin cans for years.

Desert Explorers Find Odd Things of Interest

The Libyan desert expedition in search of the lost oasis of Zerzura under the leadership of Major Bagnold, returned to Cairo unsuccessfully, so far as its primary object was concerned. The expedition discovered northeast of Oweinat a remarkable circle of stones standing three feet high and nine yards across, similar in formation to Stonehenge. This circle is in the desert 150 miles from the nearest water. They then returned to Sellma, and for the first time the journey was made across the desert to Assut on the Nile by way of the Kharga oasis, following the northern part of the Arabian way—the old slave trade route from Darfur to Assut, altogether over 1,000 miles long, which used to be traversed by camels in about 40 days, the distance from Sellma to Assut being about 420 miles. Major Bagnold stated that the slave track was clearly marked by the skeletons of camels, and that there were over 200 camel skeletons to every mile. Although it had not been used for 50 years, in certain parts the tracks of the camels were plainly visible.

Mankind Never Able to Change Nature of Cat

It seems that the house cat of today behaves in much the same manner as it did in the bygone ages. The animal's association with man has not changed its habits in one particular. It goes about in its own way and takes its own time and all efforts to make it take some part in the operations of the household have failed. The animal resents any interference with its coming and going. Miss A. S. Firkins, of Columbia university, has put the cat to an intelligence test. Seventy-eight cats were secured from a pet show and put through a series of tests. The first problem put before the cats was how to reach food placed inside an inclosure. Most of the cats solved this by stepping upon a plate which opened the way. The problems were then increased in difficulty, the hardest being one which required the cats to touch seven plates, one after the other, to get the food. Only two of the contestants were smart enough to do this. One of the conclusions arrived at was that male cats are smarter than the females.

Sailors' Refuge

Robert Richard Randall was the founder of Snug Harbor, Randall was a sea captain who retired from the sea in the late Eighteenth century and settled down on a large farm on the edge of which is now Greenwich village. When he died he left his property to an institution known as Sailors' Snug Harbor for Ancient and Decrepit Seamen. His relatives did all they could to break the will, but in 1881, over thirty years after the captain's death, the Supreme court upheld the bequest. In the meantime the city of New York had grown so enormously that the trustees decided it would be better to lease the land contained in the Randall farm and locate the seamen's home on Staten island. At the time of the captain's death or prior, his farm brought in an annual income of about $4,000; at the time the trustees made the change it was yielding $40,000. Today it is estimated that the annual earnings of the property are about $4,000,000.

Bowling Old Pastime

Bowling has been played for centuries in Germany and the Low Countries, where it is still in high favor, but attains its greatest popularity in the United States, whence it was introduced in Colonial times from Holland. The Dutch inhabitants of New Amsterdam, now New York, were much addicted to it, and from 1623 to 1840 it was played on the green, the principal resort of the bowlers being the square just north of the Battery, still called Bowling Green. The first covered alleys were made of hardened clay or of slate, but the modern alleys are built up of strips of pine or maple wood, about 1 by 3 inches in size, set on edge, and fastened together and to the bed of the alley, the surface being carefully leveled and polished.

Old-World Melody

A New Yorker in London was strolling past Lincoln's Inn, one of the old domiciles, which figures in Charles Dickens' "Bleak House." Out of the old building came familiar strains of music. Meditating, as he walked, on the old-worldliness of this Inn built centuries ago, the tune was slow in identifying itself. It wasn't until the last line of the song that the words came to mind. They were, "I'll never go there any more," and the song, of course, was the one that starts: "The Bowery, the Bowery."

Babylonian Lawgiver

Hammurabi was the most illustrious of all the Babylonian kings. He was the sixth of the Amoritic or West Semitic dynasty and reigned 43 years between 2067 and 2025 B. C. Hammurabi promulgated for use throughout his empire one of the greatest legal codes ever devised. A fairly complete copy of the code was found about the Twelfth century at Susa inscribed on a diorite stele eight feet high. Apparently the stele had been taken to Elam as plunder by invaders during the later period of Babylon's decline.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Embassy Captive Saved by Message in Bread

It was hardly surprising to find that the Soviet ambassador to France issued a prompt denial of the story that three of his fellow countrymen were being held captive in the Russian embassy, but something of this kind really did happen in London once, writes a columnist in the Manchester Guardian. Lord Alverstone tells about it in his "Reminiscences." In the mews at the back of the Chinese embassy in Portland place, a piece of bread was picked up, appropriately enough, by a baker, and inside it was a note addressed to a certain Chinese resident in London. The note stated that the writer had been about to pass the embassy in the company of two of his fellow countrymen when he had been hustled inside, and that he was now a prisoner in an attic in the building and feared that something worse was going to befall him. The foreign office was not at all pleased to be confronted with such a delicate situation, but the attorney general was quite positive that diplomatic privileges did not include liberty to incarcerate anybody in an embassy, and, an intimation to that effect being gently conveyed to the ambassador, the prisoner was released. There is room for speculation how far the course of history might have been altered if that bit of bread with its message had not been picked up, for the writer of it was the Sun Yat Sen who a dozen years later became first president of the Chinese republic.

Remarkable Low Note on Australian Organ

On the great organ in Sydney town hall, Australia, is a pedal stop of 64 feet. The pipe actually of that length, the lowest C, does not stand upright, but is bent in several places, so that it may be accommodated in the interior of the instrument. The note this giant pipe emits—the stop is a reed stop, a "contra-posing"—is fearsome. It is more like a cavernous growl than a musical note, and one of the little jokes of the tuner when he is showing visitors through the great array of pipes in this organ is to have the famous 64-foot pedal pipe sounded when the visitor is alongside it and not expecting the shock. It is an unfailing surprise. The vibrations of this low C can almost be counted—in which regard, no doubt, the note resembles that of the basso-profundo, whose boast it was that he had always to begin to sing his lowest note 82 beats before it was needed, since it took so long to become audible to the listener!

Lizard Teaches Lesson

Chuckwallas are gentle and easily handled, and make interesting pets if captured and kept in comfortable quarters with a satisfactory food supply. We know too little of the habits of even our common wild neighbors, and these dwellers in the desert could teach us many things that we do not understand, says Nature Magazine. For instance, if we could eliminate the waste of our bodies by means of dry, uric acid instead of by drinking quantities of water, it would be very convenient at times, and we might go for months without drinking water. Apparently none of the cold-blooded reptiles suffer from the heat, and many thrive in the hottest parts of our low desert valleys, basking on rocks so hot that one can hardly bear to touch them with the naked hand.

Siam's National Flower

The chrysanthemum, regent of oriental gardens, but comparatively new in the Occident, is about to have its one thousand six hundredth birthday. Following its arrival in Japan and China from Korea in the early 800's, the little pompon was immediately adopted by oriental royalty. The chrysanthemum still remains the national flower of Siam. In Japan the 16-petaled flower adorns the emperor's crest: The star and collar, emblem of the Imperial Order of the Chrysanthemum, is the choicest decoration the emperor of Japan can bestow and is seldom found on the breast of any save royalty.

Sell "One"

The advertising manager of a certain company was endeavoring to sell his plan to the board of directors. When he saw that it would be almost impossible to do so, he made this remark: "It is not necessary for me to go into the details of the complexities of this sound advertising plan with one member of this board, because this intelligent man understands advertising well. I would, however, like to confer with him immediately after this meeting." When the meeting was adjourned, every member remained in his seat.—American Mutual Magazine.

Boys on Parade

As in the case of the college student, it takes but little to start the New York street urchin off on a parade. He finds a long pole, or even a discarded and discarded broom, which will do for a flagpole. He and his companions seize on a pile of celery stalks thrown out by a grocer; these are carried as swords or muskets, and the line of youngsters perhaps half a dozen in all, march proudly up the street to the badly sung tune of "The Maine Stein Song."

Husbands and Wives

The man who tells you that he never had an unpleasantness with his wife is a liar—or a dud.—American Magazine.

IMMIGRATION QUOTA HAS BEEN MUCH DECREASED

According to figures made public recently by the National Industrial Conference Board gross total immigration to the United States for the fiscal year ending June 30 will not exceed 155,000, a decrease of 87,000 under the previous fiscal year. Mexican immigration has been cut down by strict application, on the part of the administration, of restrictive rules. It is estimated at 5,000 for the present fiscal year as against 59,000 in 1928. Administrative restrictions have also cut down the immigration from Europe. The change since the adoption of restrictive legislation has been marked. The total number of immigrant aliens during the last nine fiscal years, 1922 to 1930, was 3,301,981, or an annual average of 366,887. The yearly average for the three years 1922 to 1924 was 513,124 and during the last six years only 293,768. Now judging by the immigration figures of the pre-war years and of the year 1920 just previous to the passage of the first restrictive immigration act it can safely be assumed that at least six million immigrants would have come to the United States from Europe alone since 1921, instead of the 1,825,000 that actually have reached our shores. And not only has there been a decrease in immigrants since 1921 but the percentage of common or unskilled workers has dropped from 55 per cent in 1914 to 28.8 per cent in 1930, indicating that under our new laws the quality of immigration is increasing just as the quantity is decreasing.

It is not hard to imagine what would be the situation in our country today had unrestricted immigration been allowed to stand. We would have had at least five million and perhaps six or seven million more idle workers in the country than there are at present, when there are not enough jobs to go around. This is a picture which we do not like to dwell upon. Certainly the restrictive immigration act has been a blessing not only to our American workingmen but to the institutions of the country as well. In fact, further immigration restriction a few months ago became necessary, because of temporary economic conditions, and President Hoover wisely took steps further to cut down immigration with a view to aiding the unemployment situation in our country. The President announced that the State Department, through its consular agents abroad would refuse visas to alien laborers seeking work in this country. This action was taken on authority of the law which permits exclusion of immigrants who are liable to become public charges. In normal times the applicant for admission to the United States who is an able bodied person with means to support himself until he gets to the United States is admitted, if he comes within the quota. But in abnormal times, like the present, when there is no reasonable prospect for employment, the visa is refused.

It is only just that the immigration law should now be rigidly enforced. It is true that there are just as good citizens in the other countries of the world as in America, and that a splendid part has been played by immigrants and the sons of immigrants in the upbuilding of our country. But conditions have now changed and there can be no question that without restricted immigration we would have ere this been engulfed in a flood of alien immigration which it would have been difficult for America to absorb.

It Looks Bad For Our Road

Funds for state highway work will be decreased this year as a result of marked falling off of gasoline tax collections and automobile license fees, it is announced by Alvin Harbour, commissioner of public works. The decrease is such that practically all of the revenue from these sources will be absorbed, in maintenance work and over-head costs, leaving virtually nothing for new construction, the commissioner said. Considerable new construction work will be accomplished with federal aid funds, however, some seventy projects now being contracted. Automobile licenses during the current year have decreased approximately 11,000 or 9 per cent, the commissioner reports. No definite figures are yet available on the gasoline tax decrease but it is apparent that the money derived from this source will be less than was expected. Despite this shortage of funds the 1931 state highway program is being pushed as rapidly as possible, the commissioner said. Editors Note—We don't know a thing about it, but we suppose that these new contracts will mainly be the destroying of already good roads so that curves may be eliminated, while our farmers sit in the mud and rocks and long for a farm to market road. Boost for Kendrick—your town and ours.

NO CITIZENSHIP— WITH RESERVATIONS

The decision of the Supreme Court in refusing citizenship to Professor Douglas Clyde McIntosh of Yale and Miss Marie Bland, both Canadians means simply that this country cannot permit applicants for its rights and privileges to take the oath of allegiance with mental reservations. The fact that both candidates are persons of exemplary character, with excellent records, one as a chaplain in the World War and the other a war nurse, somewhat obscures the issue for the lay mind, but it could not be permitted to obscure it for the Court. The judges had to deal, not with the individuals, but with the issue of law and Constitution that were involved. With this point remembered, it is easier to comprehend the essential propriety of the decision. It is true that both cases were academic. Professor McIntosh, for instance, was not unwilling to bear arms, but insisted upon his right to decide, according to his conscience, whether the cause in which he might be required to do so was just. Considering the fact that he is now fifty-four years of age, no likelihood exists that he will ever be called upon to defend his country. Miss Bland, on the other hand, was unwilling to take the oath if it implied that she must bear arms under any circumstances, although she was willing to perform war services of other character. Considering her sex, there is no likelihood that she will ever be asked to perform any service except nursing. As far, then, as these two individuals are concerned, no danger to the republic would follow their admission to citizenship. But such admission would open the doors to all sorts of compromises, to various kinds of bargains. Some candidate might not like this law and demand the right to observe it or not as he saw fit; some other candidate might have still a different reservation. What would we do in their case? The oath of allegiance requires the applicant to swear that he will "support and defend the Constitution and laws of the United States against enemies foreign and domestic and bear true faith and allegiance to the same." Does this mean what it says or doesn't it? The Court says that it does, and rules accordingly.

By this decision the Supreme Court has drawn a clearly visible line which will dispose of many individual distinctions which are continually being raised by applicants for American citizenship. It is the inherent right of the government to demand certain qualifications of applicants; and in many cases the questions that are raised are by persons notoriously opposed to the system of national defense which the United States maintains as part of its traditions. It seemed incumbent upon the court to strengthen its own precedent, established in the Schimmer case, and it has done so even with two individuals who are not irreconcilable pacifists, as was Madame Schwimmer.

The Rolling Stone

The old proverb, "Shoemaker stick to your last," is so well understood that it seems superfluous to give it space here. There are applications, however, that may be overlooked. A man may continue in the same business all his life and still be a rolling stone that gathers no moss; in other words, he may for all practical purposes be a rolling stone within his chosen business. To embrace new ideas, new methods, new tactics, follow them for a while, only to drop them at the next cross roads, and change to another horse equally as untried as the first, shows a lack of judgment and stability that eventually breeds failure. It is not that we should not be progressive, or discard the old for the new; but before adopting a new system or an untried merchandise, satisfy ourselves that it is better and then prepare to fight it out as long that line in spite of temporary setbacks. To cherish an ideal means constant sacrifice so that that standard may be attained and maintained. Again, to adopt a real improvement, a real new service, to follow it up vigorously for a while, and then forget all about it, is akin to the rolling-stone. We are not gathering any moss. All of the first effort, the hard work is lost because we have not endured. What might have been a blessing becomes a loss. We might buy the goose that lays the golden eggs, but if we fail to feed it we would have to do without the golden eggs. Be careful and slow to choose, but having made your choice, endure so that the ultimate harvest may not slip between your fingers and leave only the chaff in your hands.

In the good old days the small boy did not need a bathing suit, and if ultra-modern fashions keep progressing it won't be long until the whole family won't need any.

Grasshoppers Scourge Plains States
Scarcely brown fields, cut down as by a giant fiery blast, Monday bore testimony in three states to a scourge of grasshoppers. In Iowa, Nebraska, and South Dakota fields denuded of every Green blade showed the effects of a thorough going plague.

In Nebraska 63 of the state's counties have been infested. In one South Dakota field of 1,600 acres, Iowa entomologists found not enough remains to feed a single animal. In Iowa, state officers are seeking an appropriation of $50,000 to fight the pests, moving relentlessly in battle lines from the Missouri river eastward.

Prayers and poison were resorted to as weapons. More than a thousand Union county, South Dakota, farmers knelt on the spot where 60 years ago their fathers knelt, and asked divine aid in a special mass against the scourge. One Pierre farmer, hearing that turkeys would eat the grasshoppers, sent his flock into the fields. He said they came back featherless.

In the famous Arkansas valley of southeastern Colorado the hoppers are also destroying alfalfa and all other crops they come in contact with. Kansas is likewise suffering in many sections.

Verily, the Pacific Northwest is still a land of plenty and the people of this favored section should thank their lucky stars that they are living in this favored land—even if grain prices are low.

Maggies and Huns Mix
The magpie may be a first class scavenger but as a fighter he is far outclassed by the lowly Hungarian partridge even when attacking with superior numbers.

At least this is the opinion of Louis Westcott, who was witness last week to a frustrated sortie made by four magpies upon two Hungarian birds standing guard over their little flock. The battle took place on the Kamiah highway grade.

The four white and black scavengers swooped down upon a covey of 15 half-grown partridges apparently with the intention of providing the larder with fresh meat, Westcott said.

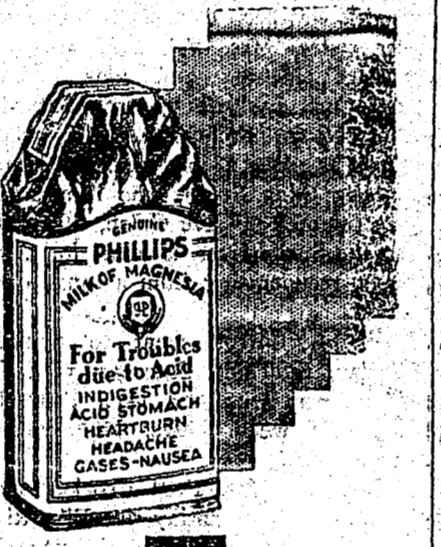

Swelling like two porcupines the father and mother birds eyed the advance while the youngsters scuttled out of sight. When the magpies were within a few feet the parent birds sailed into the air and with well directed counterattack repelled the invaders.

With open beak and clenched claws the partridges pounded and pecked the magpies until the marauders were routed and scooted over the hill to safer and less violent scenes.

Westcott said that the road was lined with various kinds of game birds at 5 a. m. He counted approximately 20 blue grouse in a covey all full grown, and also saw a large flock of young ringneck pheasants.

Fire Eats Way Through Forests
Perhaps the worst forest fires that have visited the Northwest in many years are raging in the wooded sections of northern Idaho, Montana, and Wyoming. In northern Idaho from 25,000 to 35,000 acres of fine merchantable timber has been destroyed and thousands of men are engaged fighting the flames on a 60-mile front. All national forests have been closed to campers.

SICK stomachs, sour stomachs and indigestion usually mean excess acid. The stomach nerves are over-stimulated. Too much acid makes the stomach and intestines sour. Alkali kills acid instantly. The reform is Phillips Milk of Magnesia; or harmless, tasteless dose neutralizes many times its volume in acid. For 50 years the standard with physicians everywhere.

3 RULES big help to BOWELS

What a joy to have the bowels move like clockwork, every day! It's easy, if you mind these simple rules of a famous old doctor:
1. Drink a big tumblerful of water before breakfast, and several times a day.
2. Get plenty of outdoor exercise without unduly fatiguing yourself.
3. Try for a bowel movement at exactly the same hour every day.
Everyone's bowels need help at times, but the thing to use is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. You'll get a thorough cleaning-out, and it won't leave your insides weak and watery. This family doctor's prescription is just fresh laxative herbs, pure pepsin, and other helpful ingredients that couldn't hurt a child. But how it wakes up those lazy bowels! How good you feel with your system rid of all that poisonous waste matter.

Forest Regulations Be Enforced
The most drastic enforcement of federal forest regulations in northern Idaho since 1925 was announced Saturday night by Major Evan Kelly, regional forester, in a telephone message to the Lewiston Tribune from Missoula, as a sequel to the fact that 75 per cent of 103 forest fires in the district during the past 10 days have been man-caused by carelessness.

He issued special instructions to all members of the forest service to enforce to the limit regulations applying to those entering the forests; to see that every person entering registers and receives permission to enter; that the rule of all persons carrying an axe, shovel, and water bucket be rigidly enforced, and to warn visitors that in case fire is attributable to their presence in the woods that prosecution will follow.

 "Bud" Calvin, 22, was attacked by his father's dehorned Jersey bull near Greer Friday. He was knocked down and was unable to get up as the bull butted him along over the ground.
 Charles Johnson, 72, his grandfather, used a club to try to drive off the bull, which then attacked Johnson, butting him over the ground.
 In the meantime young Calvin obtained a shotgun and shot the bull five times at close range, rescuing his grandfather, who was taken to the Orofino hospital, the flesh torn from his lower jaw and suffering serious bruises. Young Calvin showed only minor bruises. Johnson went to the Moscow country in 1880, moving to Greer 12 years ago.

 Wife—Oh, George, I dropped my diamond ring off my finger and I can't find it anywhere!

Says Some Idaho Farmers Prosper

"By turning their grains into hogs southern Idaho farmers seem to be weathering the economic unrest with comparative ease," H. G. Gossling, San Francisco, said Saturday. Mr. Gossling represents a shelf hardware company and travels throughout Idaho, Washington, Oregon, and California," says the Lewiston Tribune.
 "Those farmers in the southern and eastern sections of Idaho have contracts for more pork than they will be able to deliver, he explained. He said that business was rather spotted throughout his territory, but that many interior towns appeared better off than seaboard sections. Conditions are somewhat on the upgrade in his opinion.
 "Wheat crops north of Portland are better than any I have seen in the last three years," he declared. "The grain is especially hard hit in the Big Bend area and the wheat is short and immature looking on spring sowings in many Palouse districts. Your crops around here seem to be turning out well considering the weather conditions."

A True (?) Fish Story

Down at Sulphur, Oklahoma, J. I. Young, a local nimrod, swears that he caught a water moccasin on his trot-line, left it there over night, and found the next morning a 40-pound catfish which had caught on the hook while trying to swallow the snake.
 Marvin Long says he doesn't have to use bait that large—just ordinary angle-worms get him all the fish he wants.

 Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Ramey and children returned home Thursday evening of last week from a two-weeks vacation trip that took them first to points in the Big Bend section of Washington, in Montana, and to Salmon, Idaho, where they spent several days visiting Mr. and Mrs. O. E. MacPherson and family. Roy brought home four fine trout, the largest of which measured 19 inches and was, indeed, a beauty. They were accompanied home by Miss Jean Dunkle of Kellogg, who is visiting at the Ramey home.

Digs Well For Irrigation

Marvin Long isn't going to allow the fact that the water may be trifle low in the reservoir to interfere with the irrigation of his land and garden. Last week he dug a well five feet deep at the rear of his house and found plenty of water—in fact, he says he is unable to pump it dry with an electric pump. Water is easily found in the flat and it may become necessary to dig more wells if the drought continues.
 Marshall Ed. Long says the reservoir is about holding its own, but that it will be necessary to conserve water until it rains. The springs feeding the system are all running in good shape. While the plow may be somewhat less than normal, yet there will be plenty of water for domestic purposes and for fire protection, providing residents are careful not to waste it, in which case it may become necessary to curtail irrigation entirely.
 Let's all be careful not to waste it!

Trout Doing Nicely

The 50,000 fingerling trout placed in the Kendrick rearing pond last week by the state game department are doing fine and are growing by leaps and bounds. The local pond is an ideal place for rearing trout. It is some 60 to 75 feet long and about 12 feet wide and is fed by two springs, keeping the water pure all times.
 The pond is in charge of C. G. Compton, he having been given necessary authority by the state game department to look after and protect the fish. He requests that youngsters do not molest the fish in any way, else it may become necessary to not allow visitors to the pond. Parents are asked to please instruct their children to this effect.
