Mystery Drama At Theatre

One of the greatest mystery dramas to be shown here in a long time will be at the Kendrick Theatre Friday and Saturday nights, December 29 and 30, when "The Crime of the Century" will be the feature picture. The picture offers a startling innovation. The murder which motivates the action is confessed before it is committed. Hersholt, as a prominent alienist, walks into a police station, tells of murder he has planned, the manner he will carry it through without detection or incriminating himself. Then he begs to be locked up, so that he cannot go through with it.

MUCH NORTHWEST WHEAT SOLD FOR EXPORT

Approximately 9,000,000 bushels of surplus wheat from northern Idaho, Washington and Oregon have been bought to date by the North Pacific Export Association, according to information received by the University of Idaho agricultural extension division from the U. S. Department of Agriculture. Of this amount 8,250,000 bushels have been sold for export, the association has reported to the agricultural adjustment administration. The association was formed under the terms of an agricultural adjustment administration marketing agreement between the secretary of agriculture and north Pacific exporters, millers, and growers. The agreement was framed for the purpose of facilitating the movement of surplus wheat supplies in that region. At the time the agreement was first considered there was a spread of 26 cents a bushel between the western price of wheat and the Chicago December future. At present this spread has narrowed to about 10 cents per bushel, which is considered normal. The wheat is bought from producers in the northwest at the domestic price level, and exported at the world price. The difference, which recently has been about 22 cents a bushel, is refunded to the association by the agricultural adjustment administration from a fund made up of 2 cents a bushel from the 30 cents a bushel processing tax on wheat. Flour exports have represented approximately a sixth of the total export sales. Sales have been made for export to China, Japan, Manchuria, the Philippines, Hawaii, the United Kingdom, Belgium, the Netherlands, Norway, New Zealand, Sumatra, Indo-China, Federated Malay States, Dutch East Indies and a number of central and South American countries.

Road Repair Work Progressing

Crews of men are at work on the highways both east and west from Kendrick where washouts and overflow damage to the amount of many hundreds of dollars was done. It will be some time before the roads are back in condition again. The first through traffic to Lewiston via Arrow went over the washed-out Ross highway on Wednesday, but it was slow, rough going.

A Candidates Pilgrimage

Here and there among the people today there yearn honest hearts anxious to run for office, turn the other rascals out and Save the Nation. Before they get started may we call to their attention a letter just received by the Lebanon News from J. W. Gibson, a candidate for something or other? Here is what Mr. Gibson did—and even then didn't win:

"I ran my car 1100 miles, shook hands with 9000 people, kissed 613 babies and a few wives, wore out two pairs of shoes, put up 1000 posters, drove 20 boxes of carpet tacks, helped shock 50 shocks of corn, ground one acre of cane, shod one horse, dehorned 26 cattle, fixed 18 punctures for tourists, found husbands for three widows, hauled hitch-hikers, told 11,657 lies and helped buy two church organs, three church lamps and one heater."

"Heck! We know why Mr. Gibson wasn't elected—he was too busy keeping score."

PARTIAL LIST OF COSTS OF THE "NEW DEAL"

Everyone has been pulling for the national recovery act and the coordinating efforts of the administration to pull us out of the depression. When anyone has mentioned the terrific expense to the government of the various projects which have been assembled by the so-called "Brain Trust" for restoring Uncle Sam to a prosperous condition, he has usually been met with the reply: "Well, no matter what it costs it will be worth it, if it does the work."

All of which, however, naturally leads to the question of just how much it is going to cost. According to Gould Lincoln, a conservative, fair minded and usually accurate writer, in the Washington Star, the cost of the recovery program under the New Deal is apt to be considerably more than eleven billion dollars. In round figures he places the approximate total sum at $11,574,000,000 although on four billions of this amount, he adds, the government guarantees only the interest. The total, according to Mr. Lincoln, may be subdivided as follows:

"Total capital structure or lending power of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, $4,074,741,000.

"Appropriation for the NRA and Public Works Administration, $3,300,000,000.

Bonds to be used by the Home Owners Loan Corporation, on which the government guarantees interest at four per cent, $2,000,000,000.

"Farm Loan bonds, issued by the federal government, on which the government guarantees interest at four per cent, $2,000,000,000.

"Appropriation made for subscription to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, $150,000,000.

"Bonds of the Tennessee Valley Authorization, $50,000,000.

The writer adds that while the government only guarantees the interest on the bonds of the Home Owners Loan Corporation and the Federal Farm Loan bonds, it is not believed that the government would permit these bonds to become valueless.

The tremendous financing of these various relief acts comes outside of the regular federal budget. The government theoretically expects to get most, if not all, of this money back. But the question is, will the money come back? If the recovery program works and the country gets back on the road to prosperity again, doubtless money expended in this extraordinary way will in part flow back into the treasury. But if it doesn't, then who will pay? No doubt our old and much abused friend, Mr. American Taxpayer, will be asked to step into the breach once more.

Take Good Care of Horses

Farm horses forced to winter on a diet of straw will be in poor shape for spring work, says Prof. J. E. Nordby, assistant animal husbandryman with the University of Idaho agricultural experiment station. This practice, he says, is common in most wheat producing sections. Straw alone is inadequate as a winter feed, regardless of the age of horses. Feed them a little hay too, and if that doesn't enable them to hold their own, add a small allowance of grain, Prof. Nordby advises. Letting them shift for themselves in stubble fields this winter is a particularly poor idea, because work horses in the state are much older on the average than they ever have been. Adequate winter feeding of horses is an investment, not an unnecessary expense, Prof. Nordby points out. Straw-fed horses invariably suffer loss in fles that must be replaced during the spring work season when both time and feed are more costly. Like machinery, horses have an upkeep cost, more than two-thirds of which is for feed. Little saving in this item is possible at present prices, but substantial indirect savings can be made by feeding during idle periods so the work stock will be fully efficient when needed.

Farm horses depreciate 8 to 10 per cent a year. Keeping their feet properly trimmed is a wise precaution, as a horse with poor feet won't contribute much in the way of horse power. Annual examination of their teeth by a veterinarian is another suggestion, as often sharp projections cut the tongue or cheek and make eating almost impossible. Raising colts insures a constant supply of good work animals, providing good brood mares and stallions are used.

New Arrivals

Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Hull, living on lower Potlatch ridge, are the proud parents of an eight-pound son, who came to their home on Sunday, December 24 for a long-time visit.

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Schupfer are entertaining a new little daughter, who tipped the scales at 9½ pounds, she making her arrival on Thursday, December 21.

Both mothers and babes are doing nicely.

Rail Tire Meets Safety Tests

Startling proof of the safety of the Goodyear pneumatic rail tire was demonstrated before railway executives in Chicago last week when one of the tires was purposely blown out at a speed of 70 miles an hour. The demonstration was a part of the first public showing of the Fairbanks-Morse "Railmobile"—a rail car unit developed through cooperation of engineers of the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., the Fairbanks-Morse Co. and the Chrysler Corp. After 30 years of development of the automobile and truck chassis, the railmobile—the automobile or truck on rails—presents excellent opportunity for economies in railroad operations and equipment costs. Previous attempts have met with failure due to chrysalization of axle and wheel parts because of excessive vibration—a problem solved by the use of a rigid axle mounted on pneumatic rail tires.

A standard Chrysler sedan and a Dodge truck chassis with bus body and trailer were on exhibit. One of the tires of the sedan was blown out by a shotgun mounted on the running board while traveling at high speed with no appreciable effect on operation of the unit other than a slight bump as an aluminum safety ring inside the casing took up the load as the tire was deflated. The rail tire, expected to play an important part on railway rolling stock of the future, is constructed in much the same manner as an automobile tire. In addition to the aluminum safety ring bolted to the rim inside the tire, allowing the wheel to drop but five-eighths of an inch in event of deflation, a steel guiding flange to keep the tire on the rail is provided. An especially designed tread allows front tires to squeegee water of the rails in wet weather so that the driving and braking wheels have a dry surface to work on.

Trains Soon Running
