Harry A. Thatcher,
Auditor, Has Record For Economy-Service

In requesting the support of Republican voters at the primary on August 14, County Auditor Harry A. Thatcher issued the following statement:
"I am asking your support on my record for economy and service. For example—it cost less to run my office than two adjoining counties paid for deputies alone, and the total expense of the operation of the auditor's office of Latah County is much less than in any other county of the same class in the state of Idaho."
Your vote for Thatcher will mean continuing this same economy policy for four years without sacrificing one bit the complete service his office gives the public. His record of twelve years in the auditor's office is ample proof.

Made Violin of 36,000 Toothpicks
The lowly toothpick, frowned upon in polite society, suggested a violin to Henry Wedman of Spokane.
So he got out his jack knife, a file and glue pot, and 11 months later he had a violin that contained 36,000 pieces, all toothpicks except for a little hand-carved birch for reinforcement. It wasn't as elaborate as his first job, in which he put 47,000 pieces of wood, but he likes it better he said because it has a better tone. In fact, he wouldn't take $2,000 for it.
Until he made the second instrument, Wedman was a violinist. But he cut his finger while working and now cannot reach the strings.

"Why do you always call your wife 'Honey,' Mr. Henpecked?"
"Well, honey has always disagreed with me."

MARKET STRENGTHENS AS DROUGHT INCREASES
tein content has become the principal premium factor.
Durum markets remained independently firm as a result of the extremely short supplies. Duluth September durum advanced 5c and closed August 3 at $1.17. Ordinary to choice No. 2 hard amber sold at $1.32 to $1.42 with choice to fancy lots bringing $1.43 to $1.51 per bushel. Mills were purchasing Canadian durum at about $1.49 for No. 1 Canadian western durum.
Intermountain wheat markets were firm, reflecting strength in the general wheat situation. Prices at Denver advanced around 5c per bushel with local mills bidding 87c for No. 2 hard winter and No. 2 northern spring FOB Wyoming, Colorado or western Nebraska shipping points. Receipts at Ogden increased sharply with arrivals of 237 cars in addition to a large quantity by truck. In contrast with higher prices at other points the Ogden market remained unchanged, with No. 2 soft white quoted at 70c, No. 2 hard winter at 71c and No. 2 dark hard winter and dark northern spring at 74c per bushel, FOB Utah and Idaho common points.
Pacific Coast markets were more active following the settlement of the dock strike. Marketings increased very materially in the Pacific Northwest with receipts at Puget Sound and Columbia river terminals totaling 876 about sufficient for trade needs. Mills were active buyers both at San Francisco and Los Angeles.

Oats markets tended upward with a good inquiry from feeding areas providing the principal outlet for the heavier market receipts. Pacific Northwestern markets were firm with active trading and movement in both old and new crop oats.
Pacific Northwestern barley markets were quiet with trading and movement reflecting the dull local inquiry for feeding grain. Light offerings from growers and strength in other grains were steadying market influences. Inquiry for malting barley was light. At the close of the market August 2, malting barley was quoted at $1.30 per 100 to growers, with No. 2 bright western at $1.00 per 100 at Portland, sacked.

War Shells Still Take Toll

Shells fired in the World War still take a toll of lives on the battlefields of France more than 15 years after the suspension of hostilities.

Workers in the fields where armies once fought, children playing there and persons searching for "duds" have been blown to bits upon accidentally striking the lingering relics of war. Two men recently were killed near Reims.

Machine gun ammunition and buried shells and bombs, exploding with battle-like fury, held off soldiers trying to fight a forest fire in the woods of Hartmans-Willerkopf, near Mulhouse.

Divers Encounter Devilfish

Prowling among the bones of 72 dead men who guarded the sunken treasure ship Islander for 33 years, divers fought furious battles with giant devilfish off the Alaskan coast, the chief diver related the other day, after the goldship was dragged to shore.

"The devilfish were the worst" of the horrors found at a depth of 365 feet around the Islander, Charles W. Huckins, Seattle diver in charge of underwater operations, said, as these monsters, scientifically called octopi, hid in dark places and sent their slimy tentacles groping out whenever divers ascended.

Huckins described two octopus battles on the barnacle-crusted ship, which sank in 1901 after hitting an iceberg. Popular belief is that she carried millions of dollars in gold from Alaska to the bottom, and the salvage operations are an effort to recover it.

The Islander was beached on Admiralty island, and is guarded carefully while workmen cut their way through her in a search for the ship's vaults, believed to contain the fabled gold. The deepest secrecy cloaks the work, so no one outside the salvage company knows today whether the two-year task of dragging the Islander from Davy Jones' locker has brought the hoped-for golden reward.

No man can tell what the future may bring forth, and small opportunities are often the beginning of great enterprises.

Would a tailor, after measuring you, sell you a ready-made suit? And then change it for a used one in thirty days?

Are you wise? Some ready-made lenses cost as much as $2.00 a dozen, and some doctors persist in describing them.

If you try a pair, maybe you can come back in thirty days and try another pair.

Are you wise? It looks like a tremendous profit for the doctor if you keep them.

Huge Sturgeon Caught

A story that originated in Salmon City (Ralph Knepper's town), and published in the Boise Statesman, is as follows (and we might say that this reads almost like one of Marvin Long's fish stories):

"Two boys were chased out of a swimming hole by a large fish near Salmon in the Salmon river one day last week. That was the story they told friends and they stuck to it. Efforts to get help were in vain. Their tale was scoffed at until Saturday when six men investigated. The largest sturgeon ever caught in the river was speared.

The 10-foot fish was seen lying on the bottom in about five feet of water. With spears and gaff hooks the men started battle. Attempts to pierce the armor on his head proved futile. One hunter plunged into the stream to scrap at close quarters and was bowled over by a blow from the sturgeon's tail.

After two hours of combat the fish was killed. It weighed 298 pounds."

Tom Mix In "Terror Trail"

Every picture fan who loves a real western picture, loves Tom Mix—and Tom will be seen this coming Friday and Saturday nights at the Kendrick Theatre in "Terror Trail," where he is the same hard-riding, straight shooting, hard-boiled westerner that he has been in all his other pictures.

With the tact of a diplomat and the guns of a sharp-shooter Tom Mix cleans up Silver City!

See Tom disarm his enemy by roping the gun right out of his hand! See him escape from the gang's guns by using a table top as a shield! See him trapped in jail—see him shoot the lock right off the jail door, hop on good old Tony, Jr., and go tearing after the whole gang.
