VOLUME XXXV

KENDRICK, LATAH COUNTY, IDAHO, FRIDAY, JULY 10, 1936

NO. 28

HIGHLIGHTS OF THE WEEK'S NEWS DISPATCHES

The nation's celebration of its 160th birthday ended the worst July 4th tragedy in five years. Deaths were counted at 252—more than one and a half for every year of United States independence. Banging firecrackers played a comparatively innocent role in the slaughter, taking but five lives in three states, but motoring accidents and drownings rolled up a terrific toll. Not since 1931, when 483 celebrators died, was the death list so long. Twenty-six persons were killed in the Pacific northwest over the week-end holiday period. Washington state led the list with six automobile collisions and one drowning. Idaho reported two traffic deaths and one death by drowning. All but seven of the 48 states—Colorado, Delaware, Mississippi, Nevada, New Mexico, Vermont and Wyoming—reported fatalities.

Chicago.—Weatherman says "two or three" more days of 100 to 110 degree heat for the midwest. Bismark, N. D.—Thousands of farmers prepare to leave drouth ridden fields for WPA jobs. Washington—Federal relief officials prepare drouth relief plan for President Roosevelt. Lincoln, Neb.—Catholics of state pray for rain. Ganado: Ariz.—Navajo "rain makers" try it too. McCrea, Ga.—Rains ease drouth in southwest, but Governor Talmadge tells Georgians to "take all they can get from the new deal. Victoria, Tex.—Texas flood waters fall, after 26 die. Nome, Alaska—Hot weather belt includes Alaskan wastes.

Boise, Idaho—Compulsory automobile insurance—at no additional expense to Idaho's 120,000 motor vehicle owners—was proposed today by Attorney General Bert H. Miller to make highways safer. "None of the state's present laws afford any relief to persons who are injured, or provide compensation to those who suffer property losses in automobile accidents," Miller said. "Compensation to injured persons for losses sustained by reason of highway uses is exactly as much a concern of the state in exercise of police power as prevention of damage. Therefore, I propose establishment of a state fund for insurance of every automobile registered in Idaho against damages and injuries that may be inflicted by it.

Geneva.—Little Emperor Haile Selassie, defeated on the battlefield and the diplomatic front began a retreat from Geneva Sunday night empty-handed. The cheer "long live the emperor!" went up from the little group of 20 persons at the railway station as the Negus' train pulled out for Paris. Ras Kassa and Ras Nasibu, two of his generals in his unsuccessful fight against the conquering fascist armies, waved a sad farewell.

New York.—The federal bureau of that recovery of an additional $200,000 that recovery of an additional $200,000 in bonds and the arrest of five men had rewarded a swift succession of independence day holiday raids that went far to solve two Manhattan bond thefts in which $2,046,000 was taken. Two treasury notes of $100,000 each were found in a traveling case checked in busy Grand Central terminal, the bureau office here said. The check was found in the possession of Morris Rosiner, described by agents as a St. Paul, Minn., hoodlum, when he was seized in a roundup that followed. Rosiner was at liberty in $1,000 bond as a material witness in the William Hamm, Jr., kidnaping.

Boise.—Sen. William E. Borah pledged his allegiance Monday to the republican ticket and platform. "I have no intention of bolting the ticket," said the veteran republican, adding, "I am supporting the platform and I have been supporting the platform from the beginning. I had very considerable to do with making it." Thus, in a long-awaited clarification, Borah removed the expressed doubts of many leaders from Boise to Washington regarding his stand in the campaign. At Topeka, Kas., republican presidential nominee, Alf M. Landon, smiled. "I am happy," he said, "to have the cooperation of Senator Borah in this campaign." Borah still withheld definite announcement of his intentions regarding seeking a sixth term—but he did not deny a friend's flat statement that he will run again.

FORESTS' IMPORTANCE TO WILDLIFE TO BE KNOWN

The full extent of the importance of the National Forests as havens for wildlife, and the enormity of the winter game range problem in the United States, will be known late this summer as a result of correlation of information from all sections of the nation. The information is required by Congressional Wildlife Committees. Reports of the number of big game animals, the proportion using the National Forests, other public lands or private premises at various seasons, the range resources available for game and the value of the game to the states, are some of the things to be told.

This survey is in a large way similar to that carried on in Region One of the National Forests during the past several years. The work is not finished, however, because of the magnitude of the task of obtaining biological data upon which to base sound game management plans.

Last winter about 200 game studies men were in the National Forests of Region One, fighting their ways over difficult travel routes on snowshoes, camping at night in wikipups, cabins or under sheltering trees. All were intent upon systematic assembly of natural history facts pertaining to big game.

It is definitely known that, so far as Region One is concerned, the future of big game hinges upon the availability of winter range. During the spring, summer and fall, the wild creatures graze at will in the higher reaches of the National Forests, leisurely and with ample feed. In winter, the story is different.

When deep snows cover the mountainous country, the game is forced to the lower levels, where they must subsist on meager winter range that is in public ownership or they must go into private land and rustle for feed in competition with use by domestic stock. Their numbers too great for the available winter feed, they weaken, are beset by predators, disease and parasites to an excessive degree.

The situation is further aggravated in many totally protected areas such as game preserves. Elk will starve, or nearly starve, on insufficient food rather than penetrate the open hunting territory. Consequently, herds have grown to the point of destruction of forage on the preserves.

The game studies are expected to establish the carrying capacities of usable winter range, and to determine the basic scientific facts that will enable determination of the proper kill to maintain game herds on the greatest sustained yield basis. Recovery of damaged winter range must be permitted if this important natural resource is to thrive.

Wheat Indemnity Continued

Continuation of the Pacific Northwest wheat exports program until July 1, 1937, has been authorized by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, according to information received by Dean E. J. Iddings, director of the University of Idaho agricultural extension division, from the agricultural adjustment administration. Under this new program, a continuation of the one inaugurated in February 1936, indemnity payments will be limited to a total of 575,300 barrels.

The Washington telegraphic announcement says: "Announcement by Secretary Wallace continues plan announced February 29, 1936, which has expired by limitation June 30, 1936, indemnifying exporters for losses incurred in connection with the export of Pacific Northwest wheat flour from Washington, Oregon and Idaho to the Philippines. Under the new program indemnity payments will be limited to a total of 575,300 barrels and the program will run from July 1, 1936 to June 30, 1937. The plan is to be financed from funds available from customs receipts. Under the original program from March 5 when it was inaugurated to June 25 export sales amounted to 190,206 barrels.

Cannery Preparations

Preparations looking forward toward the installation of the new Thomas Cannery are going forward at a good pace, the big boiler for the unit having been hauled in by Everett Crocker last week. The big steam retorts to go with it, purchased by Mr. Thomas on his recent coast trip, will arrive soon, and then the work of installation will go forward in earnest.

Tomatoes are looking fine in this section, and with all the known goodness of Juliatta tomatoes, the pack should be a good one.

FARM WASTE MADE INTO NEW TYPE FUEL

Research at the University of Idaho department of agricultural engineering has demonstrated how certain agricultural wastes can be converted into fuel briquettes with heating values comparing very favorably with briquettes made from wood wastes. The Idaho experiment undertook this study to help agriculture escape the designation of being the "world's most wasteful business." Jefferson B. Rodgers, graduate assistant in agricultural engineering, conducted the research search work under the direction of Hobart Beresford, head of the department of engineering, conducting the rement of agricultural engineering.

"The percentage of the gross agricultural production actually used for food purposes is low," says Rodgers in reporting on the project. "The remainder is largely waste material which is put to little or no use, and is more often than not a burden to farmers. Fibrous materials, such as straw, carnstalks, and hulls, make up the bulk of waste materials, which are disposed of generally by wasteful burning.

"The development of a machine to utilize successfully the dry waste products of the lumber manufacturing industry, particularly planer shavings, sawdust and chips, by forming them into fuel briquettes, brought to the attention of those interested in agricultural waste utilization, the possibility of using the same or a similar machine to produce fuel briquettes from straw and other agricultural waste products."

The fuel briquettes manufactured from lumber wastes are cylinders about 4 by 12 inches, weighing about 8 pounds apiece, more than three times as heavy as wood and so dense they will not float in water. The machine exerts a pressure of 165,000 pounds in compressing the wood wastes into the useful briquettes.

After making 25 heat valve determinations, using all of the principal agricultural waste products when compressed in the form of briquettes make a very satisfactory fuel with heating values comparable to wood. The machine used for wood wastes affords a means of making these briquettes from agricultural wastes. Such machines could be located in centers where large amounts of waste material are available.

The experiment also gave some attention to compressing hay as a means of conserving storage space. Briquettes were made from alfalfa hay and pea hulls with no thought of using them for fuel. Rodgers explains that alfalfa hay compressed into briquettes could be used by poultrymen to supply their flocks with green feed during the winter months. Placed in a pan of water a briquette made from green alfalfa hay quickly disintegrates to the point where chickens can eat it. Compressing stock feed into briquettes would call for a minimum of storage space. A ton of briquettes, Rodgers reports, can be stored in a space of 30 cubic feet, as compared with 80 cubic feet for baled hay, 135 cubic feet for chopped hay, and 500 cubic feet for loose hay.

Improvements At Warehouses

The Farmers National Warehouse here, recently purchased by the Lewiston Grain Growers, is undergoing a thorough renovation and overhauling. New underpinning is being put beneath the building throughout. It is likewise being straightened and leveled, and a new floor installed wherever needed. Wade Keene, manager, says that preparations are being made to care for one of the largest crops ever raised in this section, and that the present market indications are that the farmers will realize a handsome sum for their products.

The Kendrick Rochdale has completed installation of a new large scales at their warehouse, and W. A. Watts, manager, says that they are now prepared to weigh the longest of grain trucks. That in itself will help a lot, as many of the new trucks were too long for the old-type scales.

Rain Tuesday Evening

Following a brief but violent dust storm, rain started falling in Kendrick about 8:30 p. m. and lasted until about 10:00.

It was mighty welcome, for it washed the dust from trees and shrubs, made unnecessary the watering of lawns that evening and laid the dust on country roads. It also moistened the bean and melon and tomato crops.

Kendrick Loses Instructor

Word has been received here that M. C. Grover, for the past two years agriculture and music instructor in our high school, is not to be with us again this year.

He has been offered and has accepted, a better paying position in the Rexburg High school at Rexburg, Idaho. It is with much regret that we see him leave, for Mr. Grover has worked diligently in the schools and he and his wife have many friends here.

Just who will be chosen to take his place has not yet been announced by the board.

PUT ORGANIC MATTER IN SOIL TO RETAIN WATER

The soil binding material content of the wheat soils of Idaho has been depleted considerably through the practices of summer-fallowing and straw burning, declares Dr. H. W. Larson, soils specialist with the U. of I. agricultural division.

The practice of summer fallowing has increased the rate of decomposition by improving the aeration and moisture conditions in the soil, Dr. Larson says. When straw burning is practiced, there is no replenishment of the supply of partially decomposed organic matter in the soil.

The soil ceases to be spongy-like and is unable to absorb the precipitation falling during a storm when the supply of partially decomposed organic matter becomes low. The fertile top soil is then easily removed through wind and water erosion. It requires centuries for an inch of fertile top soil to form while inches of soil are frequently washed away during a season.

The incorporation of organic matter into the soil increases the water-holding capacity by making the soil more sponge-like. It also binds the soil particles together. Large quantities of organic matter are also needed as a source of energy by the bacteria which make the soil minerals available for plant use. For every ton of straw burned, 10 pounds of nitrogen needed for protein formation are lost into the air. Where the precipitation is sufficient, the nitrogen supply can be increased by the growing and turning under of a green crop of sweet clover.

The attachment of a straw spreader on the combine makes possible the return of large amounts of organic matter to the soil without decreasing the yield of the following crop. By means of a straw spreader, the straw can be distributed over the field in such a manner that it can be incorporated into the soil when plowing or disking.

Most combine manufacturers make one for their own product. Two types of spreaders are being made—single and double-beater types. The single-beater type does its best work on level ground and while the two-beater type spreads the straw very well on both level and steep land. On land free of gullies, the spreader can be mounted so as to spread both straw and chaff. For use on badly cut up land, the spreader should be mounted much higher. Only the straw will then be distributed while the chaff will be deposited in small piles. The chaff is later distributed by livestock, a fork or a harrow. Even though no distribution of the chaff is practiced, it can be worked into the soil by the usual cultural methods in most instances without affecting adversely the yields of the succeeding crops.

"Bullet Proof" Airlines

Testifying before a committee of the House of Representatives a short time ago, Colonel Gorrell of the Air Transport Association of America, recommended that the government spend the sum of $14,000,000 on airway aids, such as radio facilities, field lights, etc. This amount of money, properly disbursed, he added, would make the airlines "bullet proof" from an airway standpoint.

The airlines themselves are spending 115,000,000 over a two-year period in the interest of safety, even though some of them are operating at a loss.

In the light of the vast spending of recent years, $14,000,000 is an insignificant sum. Used to make the airways safer, it would give the country tremendous value for every dollar spent. "The government," he said, "could carry on no more worthwhile activity than to encourage air transport efficiency as a national defense measure and peacetime necessity."

UNITED STATES PIG CROP REPORT OF JUNE 1, 1936

An increase of about 29 percent in the spring pig crop of 1936 over the very small spring crop of 1935; a prospective increase of about 14 percent in the number of sows to farrow in the fall season of 1936 over number farrowed in the fall of 1935; an indicated increase of about 24 percent in total farrowings in 1935 over the total of 1935; and a moderate increase in the number of hogs over 6 months of age on June 1, 1936, over the number a year earlier are shown by the June 1 Pig Cop Report of the United States Department of Agriculture. Although the number of litters farrowed in 1936 promises to be substantially larger than the abnormally small numbers in both 1934 and 1935 it will be nearly 20 percent below the average of 1932 and 1933 and probably below any other year in the last 20 years at least. This report is based upon information secured in cooperation with the Post Office Department through the rural mail carriers.

The number of pigs saved in the spring season of 1936 (December 1, 1935 to June 1, 1936) for the United States is estimated at 41,884,000 head, an increase of 9,504,000 or about 29 percent over the number saved in the spring season of 1935 but a decrease of 10,359,000 head or about 20 percent from the average of 1932-33. In the North central states (corn belt) the estimated number of pigs saved in the spring of 1936 was 31,041,000 head an increase of 7,622,000 head or 32.5 percent over the spring of 1935 but a decrease of 9,781,000 head or 24 percent from the average of 1932-33. It should be noted that the estimated number of sows farrowed and pigs saved for 1935 and previous years shown in this report are revisions of formerly published figures. These revisions are based on the 1935 census figures taken of sows bred to farrow in the spring season of 1935.

The increase in the number of sows farrowed in the spring season of 1935 over 1935 was 30.5 percent for the United States and 35.0 percent for the corn belt. These increases are somewhat larger than was forecast in December 1935 pig report which showed increases of 23.9 and 26.1 percent respectively. The average number of pigs saved per litter in the spring of 1936 for the United States was 5.96 head compared with 6.01 head in the spring of 1935. In some states where a substantial percentage of the sows farrowed in February the average per litter this year was considerably reduced; but in most states where most of the farrowings are after February the average was as large or larger than in 1935.

The increase in the number of pigs saved in the spring of 1936 over 1935 was general over the whole country and in all states. There was considerable variation among states and regions in the amount of increase, however, the increases being largest in the states and regions where the 1934 drought caused the largest reductions in 1935.

The number of sows to farrow in the fall season of 1936 (June 1 to December 1) is estimated at 4,310,000 head, an increase of 544,000 head or 14 percent over the number farrowed in the fall of 1935, but a decrease of 17 percent from the average of 1932 and 1933. The smallest estimated increase is in the west north central States, where it is only about 6 percent, compared with 21 percent in the East north central states, 17 in the north Atlantic, 16 in the South Atlantic, 20 in the south central and 15 in the western. These estimates are based upon interpretations of breeding intentions reported about June 1 and assume that the relationship between breeding intentions and subsequent farrowings will be fairly similar to the relationship in years prior to 1934.

If the number of sows that farrow in the fall season of this year should be about as now indicated the total number of litters for the United States in 1936, spring and fall, will be about 11,338,000. This would be an increase of 2,187,000 litters or 24 percent over the total of 1935 decrease of 2,824,000 litters or 20 percent from the average of 1932-33. For the Corn Belt states the increase over 1935 would be about 26 percent and the decrease from the 1932-33 average about 26 percent.

The number over 6 months of age on farms June 1, 1936 as indicated by the survey reports was somewhat larger this year than a year earlier, but much below the corresponding date in any other year. The indicated increases over last year were about 7

SOMETHING TO REALLY CAUSE THOUGHT TODAY

A new suit to test the validity of the Tennessee Valley Authority has been started in the Federal Court at Birmingham, Alabama. The suit is being brought by nineteen private utilities operating in the TVA region. Counsel for the utilities includes such distinguished lawyers and authorities as Newton D. Baker.

The brief for the utilities points out that private investment in the light and power properties in TVA territory amounts to more than $900,000,000—millions invested by stockholders living in all parts of the country. It says that if TVA is finally held equal this vast private investment will be destroyed.

The brief likewise shows why private utilities are unable to compete with the TVA. These utilities pay over $14,000,000 a year in taxes—TVA pays next to nothing. The private utilities must raise all their money without benefit of subsidies—the TVA has the Federal Treasury and the whole power of the Federal credit behind it. The private utilities must pay every cent of cost of operation out of their own pockets—TVA receives preferential freight and passenger rates, franks all its letters and other mail, pays no workmen's compensation costs, enjoys tax exemption on its gasoline and motor vehicles, etc. And, most important, private utilities are strictly regulated by the state, and must make an adequate allowance for depreciation. Last year TVA accounting took no notice of depreciation whatever, and its operating expense ledger allowed nothing for return on investment.

Entirely aside from the legal issues involved, which can be decided only after long litigation in the courts, the facts here presented should cause every citizen and taxpayer to do some serious thinking. If government can step into the electric industry and use its great powers to destroy private investment, it can do the same thing to the grocery business, automobile manufacturing, banking, insurance, farming or any other industry. TVA is socialism pure and simple. It is incompatible with the principles on which the United States government was founded as is communism or fascism.

Our nation can no more exist half socialistic and half private enterprise than it could exist half slave and half free.

It is said that they are going to cover the decks down at Washington with rubber so that the feet of the emergency workers will bounce right off onto the floor when the gong rings for quitting time at 4:30.

Curtains

Jim Jones lives out in the country, twenty miles from his office, and drives to work daily. The drive takes place largely on a modern highway, with the last few miles confined to busy streets.

The drive can be made safely in about thirty-five minutes. But Jim would feel ashamed of his record if he ever took that long. So, by "stepping on her" hard, he manages to make it in twenty-five minutes, and sometimes less. The other day, in fact, he did it in twenty-two minutes—a saving of thirteen minutes over the time taken by more conservative drivers.

That saving of time is a great boon to Jim. It permits him to spend ten or fifteen minutes talking golf to the boys at the cigar stand, or reading the funny paper. And the day he made his record he spent the saved time, plus quite a few minutes more, boasting about it.

Of course Jim has to weave in and out of traffic occasionally, cursing the slow-pokes who move along at a sedate forty-five. And sometimes he has to steal a right-of-way. Now and then he misses a crash by an inch, and after the first flush of nervousness passes, he chuckles to himself about what a good driver he is. Once he did have a minor accident, but the insurance company paid for that.

There are a good many Jim Joneses driving cars in this country. They go on for years with nothing happening to them—and then the inevitable occurs. —Curtains!

We don't know what emblem those European international fixers wear in their lapel buttons, but judging from how straight they are the emblem ought to be a corkscrew.

UNITED STATES PIG CROP REPORT OF JUNE 1, 1936

percent for the United States and 11 percent for the corn belt. In head these increases amount to about 1,500,000 and 1,200,000 respectively. Since the number of sows kept for fall farrow (which number is included in the total of hogs over six months of age) is about one-half million head larger this year than last, the increase in hogs available for marketing and other disposition during the last 4 months of the 1935-36 marketing year would be somewhat less than the indicated increase in the total.

"Milky Way" At Theatre

This week's offering at the Kendrick Theatre will be Harold Lloyd in the "Milky Way," said to be one of his most hilarious pictures. Lloyd has for years been noted as one of the screen's best comedians, his pictures being of the clean-cut type enjoyed by all. He depends on comical situations and actions, rather than shadly jokes and pie throwing.

This picture deals with Harold as a milk delivery man, who, by way of a series of unusual circumstances, becomes a prize fighter, winning the championship (through no fault of his own). To tell the story would spoil the fun of seeing the picture, so don't miss it. Fun for old and young.

In addition there will be the usual short films.

Returns From East

Fred Reil returned Wednesday from a six-weeks' trip into Iowa and North and South Dakota.

Mr. Reil says the temperature ranged from 110 to 115 the last two weeks, and that crops are an almost, if not total loss. He also says that Idaho looks mighty good to him.

Dr. Simmons Coming

Dr. Charles Simmons, Eye-sight Specialist of Lewiston, will be at Heacock Confectionery from 9:00 until 12:00 and at the Raby Hotel from 1:00 until 5:00, Thursday, July 9th. Julietta people should call the confectionery for appointments and Kendrick people the hotel.

EDITORIAL

Well, Folks — Now that the glorious 4th is over and the headache is gone, we can get down to business again. Wheat prices are looking up—beans are likewise going to be in demand—and a good crop seems assured in these parts—but in the meantime—don't neglect that sure income—cream. It's a nuisance this kind of weather to church—so why not let us do it for you. We're sure you'll like it.

Why turn an ice cream freezer these hot days? Our cream is made in all standard flavors, packed and handled right. Try it.
