

KENDRICK GAZETTE

VOLUME XXXV

KENDRICK, LATAH COUNTY, IDAHO, FRIDAY OCTOBER 30, 1936

NO. 44

HIGHLIGHTS OF THE WEEK'S NEWS DISPATCHES

Terre Haute, Ind.—Expressing disgust at his treatment after being thwarted the second time in three weeks in his effort to deliver a campaign address here, Earl Browder, communist candidate for president, left for New York with the parting verbal shot that he hoped "the constitution may eventually be enforced in Terre Haute." Browder's clothing was wrinkled and there were spots on it where over-ripe tomatoes and ill-smelling eggs had splattered. They were thrown by members of a crowd of several hundred persons which blocked his entrance to radio station WBOW, over which he was scheduled to have delivered a campaign speech.

Washington.—More than a million officials and party watchers probably will be required to man the election machinery in about 122,390 voting precincts when the nation throngs to the polls November 3 to choose a president. With estimates of the vote running from 41,000,000 to 45,000,000, there are about 2,200 more voting districts than two years ago. No exact tabulation of the number of officials needed to see that the votes are cast and counted legally has been made. But experts said the total probably would run beyond a million persons. Many of the 122,390 voting districts include several polling places, each of which requires a full staff of judges, clerks, and watchers. Thousands of other party workers will be busy rounding up the voters and transporting them to the polls. Most states divide into precincts as units for voting purposes, but others designate their units as districts, or vote by counties, by cities or by towns.

East Wenatchee, Wash.—A pyre, fed by 1,000 gallons of oil, consumed 900 sheep carcasses after a veterinary attributed their deaths to anthrax, the most dread stockmen's malady. Sheriff Harry Smith, of Douglas county, hastily recruited a crew for the spectacular burning after he received the anthrax report. Teams had plowed a great pit on a hillside near Orondo for burial of the sheep before the sudden countermanding order came from the sheriff. Anthrax is a highly contagious disease in warm-blooded animals. The dead animals were part of a flock of 1,180 sheep of Maple & Knox, of Yakima, which suddenly began to drop dead Tuesday enroute to winter quarters. Death at first was blamed on poisonous weeds.

Sanford, N. C.—A year after he was born at the bottom of a 40-foot well, blond, blue eyed Franklin Jourdan is a sturdy, 25-pound youngster who has never known a day's illness. The boy was born a month early, October 22, 1935. The 26-year-old mother, Mrs. Alton L. Jourdan, wife of a tobacco planter, had gone to get water from the well. She became faint from the exertion and fell in. The cold water revived her, and she swam back and forth, two strokes each way, calling for help. Thirty minutes later she and the newborn infant were rescued.

Los Angeles.—Police Chief James E. Davis has ordered a blockade around the city of Los Angeles to keep unemployed transients out during the winter. Last year, the chief blockaded the entire state border and extensive controversy arose over the activities of his "foreign legion." Saturday he ordered that police vagrancy squad forces be increased and that men be assigned to guard all entrances to the city and all railroad yards. He recommended that indigent unemployed transients found in the city be sentenced to at least six months at hard labor. He recommended also that Governor Merriam establish a border patrol to keep transients out of the state. The city border patrol will operate 24 hours a day, Chief Davis said. "Seventy-five per cent of these transients have criminal records," he declared. "They are a menace. In order to exist here they must either beg or steal, as they are not eligible for relief. We don't want to appear heartless, but we certainly do not want thousands of these penniless transients in the city."

To Spend Winter Here

Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Robinette and George Robinette were Wednesday night guests at the home of Mrs. Martha Thomas.

They went on to Kooskia Thursday to go on a big game hunt. Mr. and Mrs. Robinette expect to make their home this winter with her mother, Mrs. Martha Thomas.

Hunting Party Lucky

The hunting party made up of Clarence Morey, Ed. Galloway, Claud Jones, Bernard Jones, Dave Gentry and Otto Alber returned last week on Thursday afternoon with six elk, a deer and a big brown bear. It is understood Clarence Morey was the one who laid Mr. Bruin low. It was fine meat, it is said.

There has been enough elk, deer and bear meat brought into Kendrick during the past few weeks to last the entire section for several months. Most of the kills have been stored in locker boxes in the Thomas creamery.

INTERESTING NEWS NOTES FROM OUR PUBLIC SCHOOLS

The Junior play is to be given on November 11, and is progressing rapidly. Everyone is working to get it ready on time.

The chemistry class is studying oxygen. The Business Principles class just finished a chapter on "Intelligent Buying." The chapter contained many things which would be new to the average person, though really very necessary in the handling of money.

The Business Science class is studying the uses of the telephone.

The Freshmen and Sophomores are starting grammar. The World History class is reporting on Alaska. They have obtained some Alaskan newspapers.

The F. F. A. boys received word from Portland in regard to the stock judging contest held there six weeks ago, and Kendrick was placed 16th among the 43 teams entered. The boys have started working in the shop. This week they will begin putting a railing around the library.

The boys' basketball team turned out for the first practice Monday evening. They will practice as often as possible, but until the Junior play is over there will be no regular practices.

The girls' basketball team is getting ready to start practicing, but no sessions have been held as yet.

Those students making the highest honor roll were: Maxine Bigelow, Barbara Long, Arlene Deobald, Ruby Hecht. To make this roll a student must have three-fourth A grade and none less than B.

Those making the honor roll were: Marie Havens, Darlene Cardinal, Vern Wegner, Helen Newman, Eunice Henderson, Evelyn Leeper, Marbelle Matton, Erma Jones, Mary Davidson, John Wallace, Donald Benschoter, Evelyn Gustafson, Margaret Halseth, Jean Fry, Herman Renfrow, Nolan Weeks, Helen Farrington. To make the honor roll a student must have three-fourth A or B grades, none less.

Grade News

The first and second grades are decorating their room for their Halloween party Friday afternoon.

The third and fourth grades gave their teacher, Mrs. Cook, a Halloween party. They played games, after which they served refreshments.

The fifth and sixth grades are going to have a party Friday. In the health contest the "Spirits of St. Louis" are winning, so the "Blue Birds" will be the ones to give the party. They are also making notebook covers for their newspapers.

"Hawkshaw"

Beware of the old super-snooper. He hears all, sees all, tells all.

What's this we hear about Miss Jones and Miss McGrath flirting with the book salesman?

A broken line is a line with straight curves!!! A bright geometry student!

Evening Bridge Party

The ladies of the Afternoon Bridge club entertained their husbands at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Deobald Monday evening, when Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Deobald, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Watts, Dr. and Mrs. D. A. Christensen and Mr. and Mrs. Wade Keene were joint hosts and hostesses.

Table cloths, napkins and food colors were in harmony with the Halloween motif. Following the delicious repast bridge was played at six tables. Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Thompson were awarded high score and Mrs. A. L. Dawald and W. L. McCreary the consolation.

Invited guests were Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Lyle, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Thompson and Rilla Davidson.

INTERESTING NEWS ABOUT ROAD WORK BEING DONE

New Road Completed

The new link of the Arrow-Deary highway up the Potlatch, has been declared officially completed and the same turned over to the state for maintenance.

J. H. Cairns, engineer in charge, said the formal transfer and acceptance was completed a week-ago Saturday evening.

It is said the 1937 program calls for the extension of this road to the county line near Juliaetta, and we hope this information is correct.

Graded Streets

Sunday Evening Edgar Long and Ed. Reglin manned one of the state's big power graders and smoothed up Main street, which certainly was badly in need of such treatment. Potholes as big as dispans and just as deep were plentiful in the new gravel spread last fall. It was impossible to do much but fill the holes, however, as extreme dryness and hardness made permanent work impossible.

It is to be hoped that in another year the city can purchase grading equipment of its own and work the streets when they should be worked. The condition of the street has been a disgrace the last three months.

Road Work Going Forward

Work on the Cedar creek road is progressing as well as could be expected with the limited amount of help available. Some five miles have been "cut out" and much of it is in good shape for travel at this time. Coarse gravel has been spread for some three miles and the crusher is turning out rock at a rapid rate.

When completed, this road will add much to the travel comfort of those coming in from the upper country and they will be able to keep out of the mud, at any rate.

The new section of the Wauncher gulch road has all been graveled and is in good travel condition, giving a good road from Kendrick to the top of the grade.

On the Cedar creek road a little more than a mile and a half remains to be built.

A Toss-Up!

Now that both Ross and Borah have accepted (tentatively, at least) the Townsend plan theory of old-age pensions, it will be a toss-up as to which one to vote for. Anyway, Borah says he will not stump for any other candidate. He is still the lone wolf and playing a lone hand, but still he sails along under a republican banner. Why not brand him for what he is and let him sail under his own banner, which might read, "I'm for Borah; to h— with the rest of 'em!"

Cowboy Ben seems to be riding his East Indian hobby, the "Yogi" form of concentration, and will be going good just as soon as he can get one of the Mahatma's pet goats hitched up with the democratic mule and gets them both fastened to that manure spreader that Ben says he has been riding down on one of his farms.

Birthday Party

Mrs. Stella Plummer and Mrs. Bessie Brown gave a party in honor of Mrs. Jennie Plummer's 80th birthday anniversary.

Invited guests were Mrs. Bechtol, Mrs. M. A. Deobald, Mrs. A. E. Robbins, Mrs. L. Keene, Mrs. Wm. Freitag, Mrs. John Brown, Mrs. Thos. McDowell, Mrs. Letha Kuykendall, and Mrs. James Emmett. Mrs. Plummer received many beautiful gifts.

Lunch was served late in the afternoon, and the guests left, wishing her many more happy birthday anniversaries.

Liquor Dividends Large

The Idaho liquor control commission has declared a $277,092 dividend, bringing to $1,164,844 the distributed profits during the past 15 months.

Of the current distribution, $138,546 will go to the counties. They share equally with incorporated municipalities. The other $138,546 goes to the state general fund, half of it to the public school income fund.

Birthday Anniversary Party

Lewiston Merc. Auditor Killed

Frank S. Durbin, known to many in this section, auditor for the Lewiston Mercantile company, was killed in an auto accident on the Greer grade Saturday night. After the accident he was taken to the Orofino hospital, where he died three hours later.

Frank Thompson, another member of the firm, was the companion of Mr. Durbin. He was unhurt, although he remained in the car during the entire descent down a 100-foot embankment. The accident occurred while Mr. Durbin, who was driving, tried to pass a truck going in the opposite direction, the car swerving to the edge of the road and rolled off.

WHEAT MARKETS LOWER FEED GRAINS STEADY

Domestic grain markets showed no marked changes during the week ended October 24, according to the Weekly Grain Market Review of the United States Bureau of Agricultural Economics. Wheat declined slightly at most points reflecting the principal weakness in foreign markets but a slow inquiry from mills, as a result of a dull flour demand, was an additional weakening influence. Feed grains held about steady. Trading in oats was slow but feed barley moved readily at practically unchanged prices. Premiums on malting barley were lowered slightly at some markets.

The general wheat situation turned somewhat weaker during the period under review, influenced by increased offerings of new Argentine wheat for shipment early in the new year and some improvement in prospects for the Southern Hemisphere crops as a result of recent rains. Demand slackened at Liverpool and prices declined slightly at that market and at Buenos Aires. With larger wheat shipments from India and increased offerings from Argentine, takings of Canadian wheat dropped off and the Winnipeg market declined about 5c per bushel. At the close of the week No. 2 Manitoba Northern was quoted at Winnipeg at $1.10, No. 3 at $1.05 1/2 and No. 2 Canadian western durum at $1.16 per bushel.

Domestic wheat markets reflected the weakness abroad and also the generally favorable conditions of the new winter wheat crop and prices declined 2c to 3c per bushel. Marketings were somewhat larger, with 1,884 cars received at the principal winter wheat markets and 905 cars at Minneapolis. Remaining supplies of wheat at the first of October were apparently about 25,000,000 bushels smaller than a year ago, with stocks outside of merchant mills, totaling 425,193,000 bushels. Of this quantity, 227,098,000 bushels were on farms, 117,195,000 bushels in country mills and elevators, and 80,900,000 bushels in terminal markets. A year ago stocks in these mills totaled 453,428,000 bushels. Merchant mill stocks a year ago were reported at 105,176,000 bushels, but data for the current season is not yet available.

Milling inquiry slackened somewhat during the week as a result of a dull flour demand. At Kansas City, processors were inclined to utilize stocks bought during the previous week, while storage interests purchased only fair quantities. With May futures at a discount of 2c to 3c under the December, storage interests were not active buyers. At Kansas City at the close of the week No. 2 hard winter was quoted at $1.17 to $1.21. At Fort Worth No. 1 hard red winter was quoted at $1.37, delivered Texas common points, while at St. Louis No. 2 red hard winter sold at $1.21 and the same grade at Chicago at $1.18 to $1.22. Offerings were light at St. Louis, but about sufficient for current milling needs. A fair shipping business was reported at Chicago at prevailing values. Soft winter declined with hard winter and No. 2 soft winter was quoted at St. Louis at $1.21, at Chicago at $1.17 and at Kansas City at $1.17 to $1.19 per bushel.

Trading in spring wheat was very slow with prices barely steady. Minneapolis mills were not active buyers except for high protein wheat from Montana and lower grades moved very slowly.

Durum prices also declined slightly but good milling types remained very firm with premiums on domestic offerings as high as 21c over the Duluth December price, which closed at $1.33. Occasional cars from the 1935 crop brought as much as 39c over the Duluth December while Canadian shippers were asking 73c over the Winnipeg October price for choice No. 1 Canadian western amber durum, delivered at Duluth.

Intermountain and Pacific Coast markets mostly followed the decline at eastern points, although prices held fairly steady in California. At Denver, local mills were bidding $1.10 per bushel for No. 2 northern spring and 16 per cent protein, No. 2 hard winter. At Ogden mills were offering 82c for No. 2 soft white, 88c for No. 2 hard white, and 92c for No. 2 northern spring. FOB Utah-Idaho common points.

WHEAT MARKETS LOWER FED GRAINS STEADY

At Portland No. 1 hard white (Big Bend bluestem or baart) was quoted at $1.07½, with 12 per cent protein dark hard winter at $1.14½, soft white and western white at $1.00, hard winter at $1.04 and western red at $1.01 per bushel, all basis No. 1, sacked. Mill demand was somewhat less active but rather heavy export sales were reported to Japan. Flour sales to the Philippines were light with the indemnity payment now only 15c per barrel. No sales were reported to Europe but a steady eastward movement by rail, mostly to Minneapolis, was in evidence. Growers were more inclined to hold remaining supplies and receipts at Puget Sound and Columbia river terminals dropped to 666 cars for the week. Export sales from the Pacific Northwest for the season to date, were estimated by the trade at around 3,500,000 bushels. At Seattle, western white and western red were quoted at the close of the week at 99c, hard winter at $1.02, hard white (baart) at $1.06 and dark northern spring from Montana at $1.55 per bushel.

California wheat markets held steady despite unusually heavy stock with growers not pressing supplies and millers operating mostly on local offerings. Stocks on farms and in commercial warehouses, including merchant mills, were estimated at the first of October at 439,643 tons, compared with only 217,328 tons a year ago and 285,537 tons two years back. Further sales were reported to eastern states for water shipment, but movement was restricted by a scarcity of boat space. At the close of the week, No. 1 hard white was quoted at San Francisco at 97c to 99c and No. 2 soft white at 96c per bushel.

Oats markets displayed an easier tone in sympathy with the dullness in other feed grains. Inquiry in Pacific Northwestern markets was slow and remaining supplies in the Willamette valley are mostly reported too light in test weight for shipment to Atlantic seaboard points. Lack of available boat space was an additional limiting factor. On October 22, No. 2 white oats were quoted at Portland at $1.50 per 100 and No. 2 gray oats at $1.45 per 100 pounds, sacked basis.

Pacific Northwestern barley markets were quiet, reflecting the slow demand from all classes of trade. Light offerings from growers were a sustaining market influence and prices for feeding types advanced around 2c per 100 pounds, with No. 2 bright western, weighing 45 pounds per bushel, quoted at Portland on October 22, at $1.70 per 100 pounds, sacked basis. Trading in malting types was dull but light remaining supplies and a firm holding tendency on the part of growers held prices steady, with barley suitable for malting quoted at country points at around $2.00 to $2.05 per 100 pounds, sacked.

Want to buy or sell anything? Try a small want ad. the price is reasonable and the results large.

"Little Miss Nobody"

Every picture fan knows and loves little Jane Withers, that mischievous youngster, who is always getting into trouble. She's just a homeless harum-scarum without even a name—Ginger Jane scraps her way to happiness in the most heart-warming hit she's ever had, and you'll see her at her best at the Kendrick Theatre this Friday and Saturday nights.

The story of "Little Miss Nobody"—who incidentally turns out to be quite a somebody after all—is concerned with a mischievous orphan whose antics and pranks are the bane, and at the same time the joy of the orphan asylum heads.

Jane is continuously in hot water. As, for instance, when she begiles the grocer's son into thinking he has found a valuable pocketbook and which turns out to be a ruse that douses him with a bucket of water—and when she steals a complete chicken dinner so that the children in the orphanage will not go hungry

Human Hibernator Becoming Drowsy

Arthur (Turkey) Gehrke, the human hibernator, shook off a drowsy spell today, squinted at the calendar through heavy eyelids, and thought he might begin his annual winter nap around November 1.

"Unless there is a decided drop in the temperature and it gives evidence of continuing," the 54-year-old taverkeeper said, "I won't begin hibernating until about November 1 or so, although last year I hit the hay late in September."

For 26 years Turkey has spent each winter in bed, beating a hasty retreat to his second floor bedroom at the first signs of cold weather and remaining there until spring.

"I wonder why more people don't do it," he said. "They think I'm queer but I think people who stay up and face those cold winter blasts are the ones who are queer."

"If more folks went to bed all winter, there wouldn't be so much trouble and confusion in the world and everybody would feel better in the spring."

Because of the sudden death of his wife, Grace, last winter, Turkey broke his sleep earlier than usual.

Hog Cholera Raging

A hog cholera epidemic has killed approximately 3,000 swine in the state of Washington and is costing Washington farmers thousands of dollars, Marvin Hales, director of the division of dairy and livestock, said.

"The epidemic started from the importation of improperly immunized hogs from drought areas," Hales said. "Many areas never before infected now have serious outbreaks."

The regions hardest hit are the Palouse country in eastern Washington and King and Kitsap counties on the West side."

The department is taking quarantine measures, and asks that farmers immunize their stock; restrict herds, areas and breeders, and to watch for cholera symptoms when making drought area purchases.

Some Bear Yarn, What?
 It was a whale—no, a bear—of a story that John McEachern, the "Heracles of Caucomgomac Lake," Maine, sold as he flexed his mighty biceps and hurled challenges at other four-footed animals who make the dense Maine woods their habitat.
 John, who tells the story, is the intrepid trapper who slew a brown bear with his bare hands after riding bare bear, bronco style, for two miles through the silent forest.
 Visiting his traps, said John, he suddenly came across the bear. But let John tell the story:

 "We chase each other around the bushes for half an hour. I trip. The bear trips. We both get up. He trips again, and quick as a flash I leap on his back. He runs away with me. I grab his ears and steer him where the going is too tough.
 "I remember I have a knife. I pull it out. I test it on the bear. His skin's too thick. I throw the knife away. The bear stop suddenly and turns over.

 "We clinch. We rattle. He claws. I claw him back. He bites me. I bite him back. But he gouges me once and I get mad.
 "I ups on my feet and I grab a tree. With all my strength I pull and pull, and just as the nasty bear is coming at me I crack him on the head and he dies."

THE STORY

CHAPTER I—Theodore Gatlin decided to adopt a baby in a final effort to solve his matrimonial troubles. But all his love for their foster daughter could not shelter her childhood from the hatred of his wife, who had never wanted her. Their affairs ended in the divorce court but ten-year-old Penelope was given into the keeping of Mrs. Gatlin, except for two Sunday afternoons a month. On their first day together they set out joyfully to a baseball game. A ball hit into the bleachers, struck Penelope on the nose and the neurotic Mrs. Gatlin removed her from the hospital to which her former husband had hurried her. Mrs. Gatlin spirited the child to Europe. Gatlin retired from business, willed Penelope all his money, and was about to begin a search for his daughter when a motor accident ended his life.

CHAPTER II—Some ten years later, in San Francisco, Stephen Burt, a rising young psychiatrist, was presented by Dan McNamara, chief of police, with a new patient—Nance Belden, a girl whose terrible childhood had left her with a dual personality, for which her "saddle nose" was in part responsible. McNamara did not think she was a responsible criminal and obtained Burt's expert testimony in court. Even Lanny, the doctor's faithful office nurse, was won over to her cause despite Nance's hard-boiled exterior.

CHAPTER III—Nance's criminal record reached Doctor Burt's ears. An explanation of her case and she was sent to San Quentin penitentiary for two years. Lanny visited her and Nance persuaded her to smuggle out a letter, which a confederate stole from her handbag outside the prison walls.

In the good old days mother didn't have to be an expert to read the finger prints on the jam closet door.

On the new dollar bill the pyramid is the symbol of permanence. Wonder what stands for fifty-nine cents?

"You're an important prisoner now Nance. The judge just gave you two years in San Quentin, didn't he?" Nance Belden turned. "Did he, Steve?"

The doctor nodded miserably. "And I'll not see you any more, Steve?"

"Of course you shall Nance. I'll come to see you from time to time. I haven't finished with you—not by a long shot, my dear. Tyrrell, you're still retained on this case."

The lawyer waved his hand hopelessly. "We're licked," he stated, without emotion. "This is one hand no lawyer can beat, and I wouldn't try." And Tyrrell shook hands with Stephen and Nance Belden, put on his hat and strode out.

"If You're a Good Girl, Nance, I'll Not Put the Cuffs on You."

"Come, girlie," the policeman suggested.

"Well," the girl declared, with an effort at nonchalance, "this is a tough break for old lady Belden, isn't it?" She smiled upon him patronizingly. "You're a good scout, Steve. Thanks a lot for all you've done and tried to do. You meant well, but at that I think the old scientific hooey has got you a bit cuckoo, too. I stood for it a while because I thought his nibs might fall for it, but when I saw you weren't going to get to first base with the big boob I called it no contest." She thrust out her little hand. "Well good-by, Steve. I suppose I'm keeping you from other nuts."

She came close to him and looked up at him wistfully; so he stooped and kissed her. At once tears suffused her eyes. "You don't mind what I look like, do you, Doctor Burt? You're kind enough not to feel sorry for me."

Amazingly she had changed—slipped out of one personality into the other as one slips out of a coat. "Will you do something for me, Doctor?" she continued, and he saw that she was all nerves now. "I'm looking for a girl named Penelope. I can't remember her last name, but I do wish you'd try to find her for me, even with so little to go on."

"Where does she live, Nance?"

"Out there, somewhere."

"You've been reading a poem, I think, Nance—a poem that runs:

And you, my sweet Penelope, out there somewhere you wait for me,
With buds of roses in your hair and kisses on your mouth.

She trembled with eagerness. "Why, you know her, Doctor. That's the Penelope I'm looking for."

"Oh, if that's the Penelope, why of course I'll find her for you. Good-by, my poor dear girl, and remember to look for me at the gate the day you're released from San Quentin."

A deputy sheriff took Nance Belden to San Quentin and was decent enough to refrain from handcuffing her en route. The girl was not particularly sad. Indeed she appeared to enjoy the brief trip across the bay in the ferry boat, and the half hour's journey by train to Greenbrae, where the prison bus meets arriving deputy sheriffs and their charges. Even the first glimpse of the penitentiary did not disturb her, for the road that enters the grounds is flanked by the homes of the officials and guards, and well-kept lawns and flower gardens give no hint of the gloom that lies in waiting beyond the main gate.

She was taken first to the warden's office, from here she was passed on to another officer where she was measured by the Bertillon system, thumb-printed and photographed, after which a guard escorted her over to the women's wing of the prison.

The building in which female convicts are housed at San Quentin would readily be mistaken for a hospital were it not for the bars at the windows and the high metal mesh fence that surrounds the grounds. Two young women were hoeing in the flower beds; along the cement walks other women strolled, singly or in pairs, chatting and enjoying the sunshine and fresh salt breeze that blew in from the bay, less than fifty yards distant. About two hundred yards off the beach, some men in skiffs were fishing for striped bass, and with the exception of a guard in a kiosk at the entrance to the grounds, one would have to search in vain for the slightest hint of official surveillance.

"So this is San Quentin," Nance remarked gaily to her escort. "Not so bad, my boy, not so bad."

The guard did not answer. He knew that the realization of restriction rather than high walls constitutes the horror of prison life. He took her into a small lobby, where a pleasant-faced, middle-aged matron greeted the girl cordially.

"Come with me, Nance," she said, and led the girl into her office, where she took charge of Nance's suitcase, opened it and searched it thoroughly.

"You have nice clothes and toilet articles," she commented. "Have you more clothes at home? These will scarcely last two years."

"Yes. May I send for them?" asked Nance eagerly.

"Of course you may. The women inmates of San Quentin are not required to wear a prison uniform, although we furnish one if necessary."

"Hurrah for our side," Nance replied cheerfully.

"You read and write, of course, Nance?"

"Do I look like a dumb-bell?"

"Well,—patiently—"here are the prison rules. Read them, and then obey them strictly. Failure to obey them will lead to disciplinary measures, and repeated infractions may lead to solitary confinement. If you prove to be a good girl, you'll receive credit for good behavior in the shape of a reduction in the length of your sentence. Good conduct will also render you eligible for parole after you have served half of your sentence; if you should get into trouble, tell me about it first. I try to give my girls a square deal, but very few of them try to give me one. If you should think you're not being treated fairly, I'll always be glad to discuss your grievances with you. You will meet some terrible women here and you will also meet some who, had they been spared the unfortunate circumstances which conducted to bring them here, would be ladies. Conviction doesn't mean that a person is devoid of all human attributes. You will keep your person and your cell clean. You will not be locked in your cell unless you misbehave. Your cell—it is really a nice little room—will be sacred to you alone, and you will have the freedom of the building and grounds. I will assign you to a cell and show you up to it. Then you can change your clothes and come down and join the women in the recreation room yonder."

"You'll do," Nance declared, and held out her hand. Her cell proved to be exactly what the matron had said it was—a small, neat white room, with a neat little white bed and wash stand, and a small chest of drawers, not unlike that of a room in a hospital, save for the steel door with an orifice in the center of it, and connected by a locking mechanism with all the doors in that tier of cells so that the throwing of a lever locked them all simultaneously. Nance surveyed it with satisfaction. "This will do me nicely," she said. "Thank you ever so much, Matron."

She unpacked her suitcase, stowed her few belongings in the chest of drawers, removed her hat and sat down on the bed to read the printed list of prison rules. But one of the rules interested her. She discovered she could write letters once a month and receive visitors once a month—if she behaved herself. "I must be mother's little lamb," she decided. "This is some joint to get out of, but where there's a will there's a way." And she set herself resolutely to discovering the way.

Before locking-up time she thought she had discovered it. It was the fishermen in the cove just off San Quentin point who suggested it to her. In her stroll around the grounds she inspected the fence. It was sixteen feet high, of quarter-inch steel mesh, set on steel posts bedded in concrete, and it ran along a concrete base. A barefooted woman, using her toes to cling to the mesh, could climb the fence readily enough, were it not for an eighteen-inch topping of barbed wire, strung in strands four inches apart and set inward at an angle of forty-five degrees. One could not possibly surmount that. Nor could one burrow under the concrete base in daylight, even were the means available. Nor could one do it at night, because then one was locked in the cell. But one could stroll down the main walk to the sentry box just outside the entrance and appraise the situation there. As Nance suspected, the gate was kept locked and the guard had the key; indeed, the gate was never opened except to admit a new prisoner or an official, or to provide an exit for a discharged prisoner or official. However, Nance did not despair, for the gate was narrow—two feet—and there was no toppling on it. She decided she would climb over it some day when the guard's back was turned; ergo, the thing to do was to induce the guard to turn his back!

For a month Nance gave her thoughts over entirely to this problem.

Lanny came into Doctor Burt's office and laid a letter on his desk. It was dated from San Quentin, on the cheap prison stationery and read:

"Dear Miss Lanning:
"I can receive visitors next Sunday. Won't you please come over and visit me? I'm so lonely, and you were so kind to me when I visited Doctor Burt's office. I have never forgotten you and never shall. Sincerely,

"Nance Belden,
"No. 43,231."

"Just think, Stevie," Lanny declared proudly. "She hasn't forgotten me, the poor dear."

"I suppose you'll go over."

"Indeed I shall. It would be terrible if I didn't. You'll send her something, won't you, Stevie? I think that might please her. I think she'd appreciate a portable phonograph and a couple of dozen records. I understand model prisoners are permitted such luxuries."

Stephen smiled. "Well, I'll stand for that expense, too, Lanny. And I shall await with interest the report you will have to make on your return." Lanny nodded.

The following Sunday afternoon, therefore, the matron admitted Lanny to the visitors' room and sent for Nance, who arrived on the run and cast herself joyously into Lanny's arms. Then Nance led the latter into a corner, and speaking swiftly and in a low voice, said:

"We aren't permitted to be alone with our visitors, Lanny. You'll notice the matron remains in the room. She won't listen to what we have to say but she keeps her eyes on us. Will you smuggle a letter out for me? I've got one all written, but the matron reads all our letters before posting them—and I can't have her read this one. It's to a very dear friend and I just couldn't bear to have her read it. Besides, if she read it, she wouldn't mail it."

Lanny's face grew grave. "Do you realize, my dear, what you are asking me to do?"

"Certainly, I wouldn't ask anybody but you to do it, Lanny dear. You're so understanding. If you can smuggle the letter out for me it will mean that within a month I'll be out, too. I'm sorry I cannot give you all my confidence, Lanny, but I just can't. You're the only woman on earth I'd trust, the only woman who has ever been kind to me. And oh, Lanny dear, I do appreciate your friendship so."

Lanny comforted the girl and considered her request. Considered it sympathetically, too, for at heart she was an outlaw herself. She knew Nance Belden did not belong here; that if the girl had had a fair chance, if she had not been the victim of a code of justice born of ignorance and lack of sympathy, she would be in a sanitarium instead.

"You can read the letter when you get home, Lanny," Nance pleaded, "and if you do not approve of it, you need not mail it. That's fair, isn't it?"

Lanny fell into the trap. "Yes, that's fair," she agreed, for she had unbounded confidence in her own judgment of what was right and what was wrong.

"You old sweetheart," Nance breathed, and kissed her—and at that moment a tall, handsome brunette who had repaid her lover's faithlessness by killing him, and who had been standing around in the hall near the entrance to the visitors' room, moved off down the corridor towards the recreation room. At once a shrill scream penetrated the visitor's room; then another and another—a woman cursed—and cried: "Stop them or they'll hurt each other."

The matron immediately left the visitors' room to quell the disturbance. Instantly Nance Belden drew a thick envelope from her bosom, unlocked Lanny's hand-bag and thrust the envelope in. She beamed proudly upon Lanny.

"I staged that ruckus," she confessed. "We have to play the game with each other here, you know—and two lifers obliged me. Good behavior doesn't mean time off for them, you know—and a hair-pulling match isn't taken too seriously here. Oh, by the way, what's your address—I mean your home address and telephone number?"

"It's in the telephone book," Lanny replied, and wondered why Nance had requested the information.

"Kiss me again, you dear thing," Nance commanded. Then she was out of the visitors' room, running for the scene of the excitement in the recreation room. She met the matron hurrying back to the visitors' room, after having quelled the fight by her mere appearance.

"You left me alone," Nance explained, "and that's against the rules. So I followed. I didn't want you to think I'd take advantage of you."

The matron smiled and pinched the girl's cheek. "You funny girl," she said. "You don't belong here and it's a shame you have to be here. You have a fine code of honor, Nance, even if they hang it on you for shoplifting."

She nodded to Lanny as the latter passed out of the building. The guard at the entrance took up her pass, looked her over with a pretense of suspicion, opened the gate and let her through. She climbed into her little car and had just started it when a good-looking but somewhat flashy young woman came to the side of the car and said:

Instantly Her Guest Opened it and Abstracted the Letter.

"Are you driving to Greenbrae, madam?"

Lanny nodded. "I wonder if you'd give me a lift that far. The bus doesn't leave for an hour and I—"

"By all means," the generous Lanny agreed, and opened the door. The girl thanked her smilingly and climbed in. Half way down to Greenbrae, her guest said: "I think one of your rear tires is flat, madam."

"I was beginning to think so, too. It's bumpy, isn't it? Oh dear, I loathe changing a tire."

Lanny pulled up to the side of the road and got out, leaving her handbag beside her on the seat. Instantly her guest opened it, abstracted the letter Nance had given her and tucked it in her own hand-bag; then got out and with Lanny surveyed the flat rear tire.

"I'll help," she promised eagerly. "The least I can do to repay your hospitality."

Between them they shifted the wheels and resumed the journey. At Greenbrae the girl got out and thanked Lanny. No sooner had her little car disappeared behind a curve than the girl waved to a sedan parked in back of the little station and climbed in beside a young man who sat behind the wheel.

"Well!" he queried, apparently without interest.

"It worked," she replied. "Let's go."

Heavy Enrollment at U. of I.
First official tabulation of enrollment by the registrar's office of the University of Idaho reveals 2,568 students on the University of Idaho campus at the end of the first week of college. This figure represents an increase of 274 or approximately 12 per cent over the 2,294 students enrolled at the corresponding time last fall. Late registrations still are being recorded and the majority of the graduate students have yet to register. On this basis, President M. G. Neale of the university figures that a total 1936-37 enrollment of 2,900 is a conservative forecast. This is the third year in succession the university has established a new all-time high in student numbers.
All classes recorded substantial increases, the freshmen taking honors with an increase of 113. At the end of the first week there were 900 first-year students on the campus, compared to 787 at the end of the first week last fall. Seniors numbered 410 against 359 last year, indicating that the 1937 graduating class will set another record. Juniors numbered 543 against 470 last year while sophomores totalled 668 against 652.
Of the 2,568 students on the campus at the end of the first week, 1,848 were men and 720 women. Last year the division of the 2,294 students enrolled at the same time was 1,620 men and 674 women. Thus, of the 274 increase over a year ago, 228 are men and 46 are women.
And to think that Thomas Jefferson was bitterly criticised for having spent $18,000,000 for the Louisiana Purchase.
John Bull and LaBelle France are determined to save Ethiopia if they have to give Mussolini the last acre of Ethiopian territory to do it.

Proof of How New Deal is Destroying Farm Markets

Six Carloads of Canadian Cheese Arriving in Pocatello

The above photograph was taken as six full carloads of Canadian cheese were being delivered to the Kraft Cheese Company's Plant at Pocatello. This happened on October 16, 1936.

This is conclusive evidence that the destructive new deal is taking the American farmer out of the American market and subjecting him to cutthroat foreign competition, right here in Idaho.

Canned Roast Beef and Canned Corned Beef from Paraguay and Uruguay is being sold in Idaho Stores. Butter from Scandinavian countries; wheat from the Argentine; cattle and farm products from Canada are flooding the American market, which rightfully belongs to the American farmer.

LANDON and KNOX
Will Put a Stop to This Destructive Practice

Governor Alf M. Landon is a vigorous opponent of unfair Reciprocal Trade Agreements. He will restore the American Market to the American Farmer. He believes that the FARMER IS ENTITLED TO PROTECTION against the tremendous importation of farm products that is now going on.

You can help put a stop to the destruction of Idaho's Farm Markets by voting for Landon and Knox

EDITORIAL

WELL, FOLKS—Politics are getting hotter and hotter and nastier and nastier as election draws nearer. So just milk the old cows, bring the product to us—we'll do the rest, even to steam sterilizing your cream can.

But this is enough about cream, ice cream, butter and cottage cheese from our plant—let's forget it for the time being and grin.

He: "I'm feeling a little frail tonight."
She: "Will you stop calling me that?"

At a lecture, the speaker orated fervently: "He drove straight to his goal. He looked neither to the right nor to the left, but pressed forward moved by a definite purpose. Neither friend nor foe could delay him, nor turn him from his course. All who crossed his path did so at their own peril. What would you call such a man?"
"A truck driver!" shouted a voice from the audience.

"Young man, what do you mean bringing my daughter in at this hour?"
"Gosh, I gotta be at work by 6:00."

Demos To Have Last Word

With the facilities of three large radio networks and many independent stations engaged for the hour from 11 to 12 p. m., eastern standard time Nov. 2, the democratic party appeared to have clinched the "last word" in the current campaign.

More than 250 stations from coast to coast were scheduled to be involved in a hookup including the National Broadcasting company, the Columbia Broadcasting company, the Mutual Broadcasting company, and other stations to carry President Roosevelt's final campaign speech. The NBC red network has been reserved from 10 to 11 the same night by the republican national committee for Gov. Alf M. Landon's closing address. William Lemke, union party presidential candidate, is scheduled to speak over the NBC blue network from 9:30 to 10 p. m.

Gone After Big Game

Harley Perryman and Otto Ruschke left Saturday night for the tall timber of the Selway country to try their luck for big game. They said it didn't matter so much, just so they got something sizeable. However, they finally admitted they would rather have a fine elk, deer or bear—which takes in about everything loose up there. They are expected home Friday night—with the limit.

Eight-Eight Bridge Club

The Eight-Eight bridge club met with Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Lyle, Jr., last Thursday evening. Dainty refreshments were served by the hostess, after which four tables of bridge were in play. High scores for the evening were awarded to Mr. and Mrs. Lester Crocker and low went to J. H. Cairns and Mrs. E. Roberts. Mrs. J. M. Lyle of Lewiston was an invited guest.

Surveying Crew To Stites

J. H. Cairns and Roy Bacharach left Tuesday morning for Stites, and the rest of the crew would have gone along, only their car got balky, where they expect to be engaged in surveying a route between Stites and Harpster, which will take them in the neighborhood of six weeks. They will keep their office here in Kendrick and do their office work and make their headquarters here.

Fine Fall Weather Continues

While there have perhaps been many beautiful falls in this section in previous years (outside of moisture) there could not have been one more enjoyable, from a weather standpoint, than the present one. It is just frosty enough in the mornings to make one step lively, but not cold enough to make one want to hunt out their "red flannels." Again we challenge California to a comparison.
