KENDRICK, LATAH COUNTY, IDAHO, FRIDAY NOVEMBER 6, 1936

NO. 45

HIGHLIGHTS OF THE WEEK'S NEWS DISPATCHES

A strike of 37,000 maritime workers, threatening for days to paralyze coast marine commerce, was ordered into effect early Friday. The strike call, announced through Assistant Labor Secretary Edward F. McGrady, was issued by F. M. Kelley, secretary of the joint union negotiating committee, representing all the major marine unions. Kelley said the committee voted unanimously to call the walkout after a meeting at which all angles of the labor situation were discussed.

London.—A stern British warning, voiced by Sir Samuel Hoare, first lord of admiralty, told the Moscow-dominated "comintern" (communist international organization) not to interfere with affairs in London. "It is almost always disastrous to interfere in the affairs of other countries," Sir Samuel declared, addressing a west end meeting. "I recommend that observation to agents of the comintern. They will find that the more they interfere in the domestic affairs of this country, the worse it will react against their activities." Sir Samuel's blunt dictum, carrying with it the ring of official authority, followed the government's firm declaration in the house of commons that non-intervention in Spain must be preserved to prevent chaos in Europe.

London.—There was not a single copy of American newspapers dated October 16, 17 and 18 for sale on the largest international newspaper stands in London. Those dates immediately followed upon the announcement of Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson's divorce suit. It was also disclosed that four pages would be ripped from Time magazine which appeared on stands here Tuesday. Newspaper stand proprietors declined to explain or discuss the lack of American newspapers.

Los Angeles.—This city's embargo against vagrants is scaring them away from Los Angeles, officials reported. Police reception committees assigned to meet indigent transients at the city's boundaries had scarcely anything to do. Only five men were taken off incoming trains Monday.

Dan McCoy, special agent of the Southern Pacific, said the influx of wanderers dropped 80 per cent since Police Chief James E. Davis' plan of work camps for vagrants was announced. "More than 300 a day were going through here and we were helpless to prevent it," he said. "In two days the influx has dropped to almost nothing."

Quarantine Near Cottonwood
Hunters, it was learned, have been turned back from hunting in the Cottonwood area, after game wardens had clamped a strict ban on shooting birds in the locality for fear their removal would mean a spread of hog cholera.

The pheasants are the carrier-bird of the disease, Dr. E. T. Baker, Moscow veterinarian, said. "The virus travels by dust. Birds dusting themselves will infect their wings. So far, the hog disease has been relatively light."

Game wardens, who began to patrol the roads leading to Cottonwood will continue their guard until the ban is lifted. Hunters who shivered through the opening day of the season said birds were very scarce.

Employers' Social Security Blanks
Postmaster C. H. Daugherty has received blanks from the office of the postmaster general regarding the social security act, which affect each and every employer to a certain degree.

Mr. Daugherty will distribute these blanks to those who come under the act and he states that they should be signed and returned to him at once.

If in doubt as to the course to pursue, see Postmaster Daugherty, who will give you the necessary information.

Burrus-Browning
Sylvia Burrus, Kendrick, became the bride of Harold Browning, Kendrick, at a ceremony solemnized at the Christian parsonage, Lewiston, on Monday afternoon by the Rev. Orval Peterson. The witnesses were Joe Browning, Kendrick, and Mrs. Hattie H. Batten, Lewiston.

This was the last wedding solemnized by the Rev. Mr. Peterson before he leaves to accept the pastorate of the Yakima Christian church.

Return From Hunting Trip

A hunting party made up of J. L. Johnson, Philip Bray and John Mathewson returned from a several days' hunting trip in the Selway country last week, bringing out with them three elk and two deer. Mr. Johnson said the woods were full of hunters at the time they were in there, some 1,000 hunters having registered in. According to reports, not all hunters are getting their game.

ROAD PROGRAM MAPPED OUT FOR THE YEAR 1937

Comprehensive plans for the improvement of north Idaho's highways, which includes important projects in the Lewiston district, are being mapped out by the state department, according to E. A. Johnston, district engineer, who has just been transferred to supervision of the Coeur d'Alene district. Mr. Johnston will have supervisory charge of the work in the Lewiston and Coeur d'Alene districts, pending action by the department, according to announcement by A. D. Stanley, state construction and maintenance engineer, said the Lewiston Tribune.

"Included in plans of the department for 1937 will be the $200,000 contract to be let before Nov. 30 for the resurfacing, widening and oiling of the 13.5 mile stretch between Orofino and Lenore on the Lewis-Clark highway," said Engineer Johnston. "Another $150,000 will be expended on the five-mile project grading and draining from Pardee to Kamiah. This contract will be let during the winter. J. H. Stemmer, director of highways, has stated that Idaho has $250,000 ready to be set up as the state's share in the construction of the Lewiston-Clarkston interstate bridge. He has also advised me that, if funds are available, a 24-foot bridge with a walk for pedestrians will be constructed across the Clearwater river at Orofino at an estimated cost of $100,000.

"Among other contemplated improvements in the Lewiston highway district is the five-mile grading and surfacing job on the Arrow-Deary highway, extending from the end of the 1936 construction at Arrow toward Juliaetta. On the Reubens-Melrose road a contract is to be let for 4.5 miles of grading and surfacing in completion of the section between Reubens and Melrose. On the North and South highway, 4.131 miles of surfacing from the Washington state line toward Genesee has been contracted for construction in 1937. The estimated cost of this work is $70,000."

Given Surprise Party

A surprise party in honor of Miss Nina Slead was given at the home of Mrs. Elmer Fraser on the evening of October 27. The honored guest received many lovely presents. Games were played and refreshments of cookies, cake, doughnuts, and colouade were served.

Those present were Jean Bigelow, Maxine Bigelow, Ethel Fraser, Teddy Weyen, Lawrence Kuykendall, John Wallace and James Kuykendall; Nina Slead and the hostess, Mrs. Fraser.

Rebecca Give Surprise Party

Members of the Rebecca lodge surprised Miss Selma Hartung last Friday evening, when they met at her home and presented her with many lovely gifts, and wished her a very happy trip. Miss Hartung plans to leave for California with her parents the latter part of the month.

After Miss Hartung had opened her gifts they all drove up to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Roberts, where they surprised the latter with a bridal shower.

Monday Guests

On Monday, November 2, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Robins, Mrs. Lula Buchanan of Juliaetta, were dinner guests and all-day visitors at the home of Mrs. M. A. Deobald on American ridge.

Election Aftermath

There is just one consolation about the election, and that is that one can now open their newspapers without having column after column of vituperation staring him in the face—and in this matter, one side was just as guilty as the other. They can also turn on their radios and get something else besides politics—what a relief!

"It has been reported that there are only 12 republicans in the United States and that two of them had been captured in Spokane.

It is also said that sunflowers do not do well after the first of November—and that the democratic mule absolutely refuses to browse on them.

Anyway, the democrats have shown that they have all the majority necessary to take care of the presidency, as well as many states and counties, and now that it is all over, we should all get squarely behind the president and help this to continue to be the "Best Country On Earth!"

Herman Wilken Accidentally Killed

The following article, taken from Monday morning's Lewiston Tribune, will be sad news to many in this section:

Herman C. Wilken, member of a pioneer family of Cameron, and formerly attached to the postoffice at Lewiston as railway mail clerk on the Lewiston-Grangeville run, was accidentally shot and killed while hunting near Shoshone, Sunday. He was found dead after nightfall with his dog standing guard.

Mr. Wilken, a World War veteran, was a native of Cameron and formerly was postmaster there. He was 40 years old.

He married Miss Carrie Buckles, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Buckles, 1228 F street, and a sister of Miss Nellie Buckles, county school superintendent.

He leaves a widow, four children, Eileen, Edwardine, Barbara and Evelyn; a father, H. C. Wilken, Cameron, and several sisters and brothers in that and surrounding communities.

More Country News Wanted

The Kendrick Gazette has always enjoyed a splendid representation in its columns of the surrounding country districts, but some of our best correspondents have either become tired of "rubbering" on the phone or calling their neighbors to find out just what is going on.

However, while we still have a very good list of correspondents, we need—and want—more. We would like to have each community represented in our columns and if you will just signify your willingness to help your community be represented in our columns, we would like to hear from you. We will furnish all the necessary material to carry on the work. We want every community represented, so just drop us a line and we will give you all the necessary information.

Commercial Club Meeting

All interested citizens are reminded that next Monday evening, October 9, will be the time for the regular monthly meeting of the Kendrick Commercial club—and you are expected to be there.

Supper will be served at 6:30 o'clock in the Fraternal Temple by Mrs. Paul Lind. Show your willingness to help keep things moving by being present at that time.

MRS. ARCHIE MAY DIES

FRIDAY OF HEART TROUBLE

The entire countryside was shocked Friday morning of last week when word reached Kendrick that Mrs. Archie May had died very suddenly at her home near Leland, the immediate cause of death being heart trouble, although Mrs. May had been in poor health for the past six years.

Mabel Bond May was born July 15, 1895, at Troy, Idaho. On June 15, 1914, she was married to Archie May, at her home on Randall Flat.

Deceased was of a rather retiring nature but had always taken an active interest in whatever might be in need of attention in her home community. She was known by scores and her friends were numbered by her acquaintances. She had made her home at Leland since 1914.

She is survived by her widower, Archie May, her father, W. H. Bond, a grandfather, George Woodruff, one uncle and several cousins.

Funeral services were held in the Kendrick Community church Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, conducted by Rev. George Calvert of Juliaetta, assisted by Rev. T. E. Poindexter, pastor of the Kendrick church. Floral offerings were numerous and very beautiful, attesting the high esteem in which Mrs. May was held. Interment was made in the Moscow cemetery.

Card of Thanks

We wish to extend our sincere thanks to the many neighbors and kind friends who aided us so willingly during our late bereavement in the death of our wife and mother. Especially do we wish to thank Mr. and Mrs. Silvie Cook for courtesies extended and those who gave the beautiful floral offerings as well as the singers and musician.

Returns With Fish Story

It's a peculiar thing how many people, when they return from a vacation, bring a tall fish story with them. However, Mr. and Mrs. N. E. Ware returned last Saturday night from a month's visit with their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. O. E. MacPherson, and family at Salmon, where they actually have large fish, as shown by the picture that Newt had taken holding nine of the speckled beauties that tipped the scales at 21 pounds.

They report Mr. and Mrs. MacPherson and family and Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Knepper and family as being well and getting along nicely. Put who could help enjoying life there where there are so many fine fish?

Family Reunion

Mr. and Mrs. Gus Wegner and daughter Edwardine and son George and Mr. and Mrs. Albert Wegner and three children of Rockland, Idaho, who have been visiting the past week with Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Deobald and other relatives, left on Saturday for Genesee, where a family reunion was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Allen Sather.

Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Gus Wegner and children, Edwardine and George, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Deobald, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Bohn of Troy, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Wegner and three children and Mr. and Mrs. Allen Sather and son. Those from Rockland left for their home on Monday.

Attend Hallowe'en Program

Mr. and Mrs. Frankie Benschoter and family, Mr. and Mrs. George Leeper and family, Mrs. Ella Benschoter and sons, Carol, Helen and Constance Mattoon and Miss Wood attended the Hallowe'en program at the upper American ridge school. After the program the guests played games. Pumpkin pie and coffee were served at the close of the evening.

WHEAT SLIGHTLY LOWER DUE TO FOREIGN DECLINE

Domestic wheat markets declined slightly during the week ended October 30, while feed grains were mostly steady, according to the Weekly Grain Market Review of the United States Bureau of Agricultural Economics. Declines in foreign markets as a result of more favorable prospects for southern hemisphere crops and increased offerings of new Argentine wheat, were the principal weakening influences in the wheat market, although a slight milling inquiry and the promising outlook for the United States winter wheat crop continued to weaken the domestic wheat situation. Oats remained featureless with prices about unchanged, but barley held firm at most points.

Domestic wheat markets reflected in part declines in foreign markets, but were influenced principally by winter wheat prospects. The outlook for winter wheat is unusually promising in the greater portion of the winter wheat belt. Wheat has germinated well and is growing very rapidly in all the important areas east of the Rocky mountains, except in the extreme northwest. Soil moisture is ample in the lower great plains and seedings have been practically completed in the northwest wheat belt. However, from Nebraska northward, drouth conditions continue and in the Pacific Northwest, seeding has been suspended in most areas because of the continued dryness.

Cash wheat markets declined with futures since milling inquiry was rather slow with many mills purchasing only special lots to complete milling mixtures. Marketings of winter wheat fell off somewhat, with receipts at the principal terminals totaling 1,597 cars. Protein content continues high. Test weight and quality factors other than protein were given principal consideration by millers. At the close of the week No. 2 hard winter wheat quoted at Kansas City at $1.16 to $1.21. At Chicago No. 2 hard winter wheat was quoted at $1.18 to $1.22. Demand from mills in the Chicago territory was only moderate and sales were mostly at the lower end of the range. Offerings of soft winter wheat were relatively light and hardly sufficient to determine values. At the close of the week, however, No. 1 soft red winter wheat was quoted at Kansas City at $1.16 to $1.19, at St. Louis at $1.20 to $1.21 and at Chicago at $1.17 to $1.19 per bushel. No. 1 soft red winter wheat was quoted at Fort Worth, delivered Texas common points, at $1.33 per bushel, but Texas mills were reported purchasing soft white wheat in central California at 90c per bushel on the 33c per bushel freight rate to Texas points.

Marketings of spring wheat were also smaller with receipts totaling 640 cars at Minneapolis and 190 cars at Duluth.

Canadian spring wheat markets continued to decline, influenced by slackening foreign trade, with European buyers turning more to southern hemisphere wheat. Supplies of Canadian wheat available for export at the close of October were around 125,000,000 bushels smaller than a year ago, but still amount to about 175,000,000 bushels. At the close of the week, No. 3 Manitoba Northern was quoted at Winnipeg at $1.04, and No. 2 Canadian western durum at $1.18½ per bushel. About 656,000 bushels of Canadian milling wheat were received at American ports during the week.

F. F. A. Banquet

The Future Farmers of America of the Kendrick High school gave their annual banquet and get-together fiesta Wednesday night in the H. S. gymnasium, at which some 120 boys, their parents and invited guests were in attendance. It was a very happy affair and the dinner, which was served at 7:30, was excellent. Willard Schoeffler acted as toastmaster and a right good job he did, too; the boys did themselves proud, as did the girls who waited table.

A few short talks were made by some of the boys, a few appropriate remarks were made by Marvin Long, followed by a discourse on future farming by their instructor, W. O. Orr.

After the program a free dance was given, in which everyone was invited to take part. Music was by Mr. and Mrs. Harold Thomas and Frank Homer Rider.

"A BOOSTER IS A BOOSTER WHO HELPS A BOOSTER BOOST"

BOOST FOR KENDRICK

Are you a BOOSTER?

A majority of the residents of Kendrick and vicinity are genuine boosters for their home community.

We are proud of that fact.

Why not make it unanimous, folks?

A town or community that is good enough to reside in, good enough to earn a livelihood in—is good enough to BOOST!

Say a good word for Kendrick whenever the opportunity presents itself.

Frown on the knocker if you see him at work with his little hammer. Explain to him the error of his ways, that he, too, may become a Booster.

All together — for Kendrick — BOOST!.. BOOST!! BOOST!!!

We are prompted to sponsor this message to the people of Kendrick and vicinity through our interest in community welfare.

DR. SIMMONS COMING

Dr. Charles Simmons, Eye-sight Specialist of Lewiston, will be at the Raby Hotel all day Friday, November 6th, to take care of the optical needs of his patients. The demand for the doctor's services has increased until he finds it necessary to put in a full day here. Those desiring to consult him who conveniently can, are urged to call during the forenoon in order to relieve the congestion that usually occurs during the afternoons he is here. He will be ready to receive patients from 9:00 in the morning until 5:00 in the evening.

"Now I Lay Me—"

This child was hurt when a tornado struck Tupelo, Mississippi, necessitating medical and nursing care for hundreds—care which in many cases could not have been given without Red Cross assistance. It is a fine tribute to the organization that the young beneficiaries of its health and relief services invariably place themselves in the hands of the Red Cross with a completely confident, "Now I lay me—"

RED CROSS AID TO MORE THAN 500,000 DISASTER VICTIMS

Large Urban Areas Devastated As Elements Hit 20 States East of Mississippi

"The number of disaster victims assisted by the Red Cross during the fiscal year ended June 30, was more than four times the number aided in the previous twelve month period," Admiral Cary T. Grayson, chairman, said in commenting on highlights of the annual report just issued. "Over 131,000 families were given food, clothing, shelter and medical care, and thousands of homes were rebuilt or repaired by the Red Cross to enable them to carry on."

Pointing to the many-sided problems created by the wide variety of types of disasters which occurred during the year, Admiral Grayson said, "The Red Cross sent hundreds of trained workers into 39 states to meet the many exigencies of catastrophes which included earthquake, epidemic, explosion, fire, hurricane, ice lock, landslide, refugee relief, shipwreck, tornado and typhoon. The Red Cross took charge at the scenes of 105 domestic disasters of major severity."

The report emphasized the marked value of Government-Red Cross cooperation when disaster strikes, giving as example the flight of Army bombing planes which dropped Red Cross food to marooned refugees at Reno, Pennsylvania, during the Spring floods. More than 10,000 persons were rescued from the second floors of homes in Wilkes-Barre and Kingston through Coast Guard-Red Cross cooperation at the height of these same floods.

"Government agencies and relief groups were of invaluable assistance to Red Cross relief forces at all times," Admiral Grayson stated.

The complete resources of Red Cross leadership, training and disaster experience were brought into play by the Spring floods and tornadoes which took so heavy a toll of life and property in eastern and southern states this year, the annual report reveals. The Red Cross aided 77,000 families in 14 flooded states east of the Mississippi and 6,000 families in 6 tornado hit states south of the Mason-Dixon line in this one operation.

"Never before have as many metropolitan centers borne the brunt of attack by wind and water within a single year, challenging Red Cross preparedness and efficiency by so wide a variety of pressing human problems," Chairman Grayson said.

In its work of relief to disaster sufferers the Red Cross expended in excess of $5,200,000 for the year. The report points out that this figure does not include assistance given in 27 lesser disasters with a total of 2,000 persons aided, and adds that additional millions will be used to "clean up" Spring floods and tornadoes.

"Numerous local disaster situations occurring during the year were met by Red Cross chapter funds and manpower," Admiral Grayson said. "In each major relief operation undertaken the great army of Red Cross volunteers aided trained workers with the task of rehabilitating those without resources who had suffered losses."

"The Red Cross disaster relief service is one of many Red Cross activities supported by the American people through membership at the time of Roll Call, held each year from Armistice Day to Thanksgiving."

Red Cross Nurses Combat Disease on Wide Front

At the close of the fiscal year ended June 30, there were 673 Red Cross nurses bettering health conditions and caring for the sick in 604 communities. These Red Cross public health nurses cared for a total of 233,616 persons during the year and made more than a million visits on their behalf.

The annual report of the American Red Cross states further that these nurses cooperated with doctors in examining 671,057 school and pre-school children, with 342,861 physical defects found and curative treatment arranged in 209,080 cases.

In 979 Red Cross chapters 1,733 graduate nurses taught Red Cross home hygiene and care of the sick, issuing certificates to 53,126 persons completing the courses. In addition, 1,777 Red Cross reserve nurses were called upon during the year for disaster and epidemic control work.

INTERESTING NEWS NOTES FROM OUR PUBLIC SCHOOLS

The band work, directed by Mr. Hoisington, is progressing very satisfactorily, although there is as yet an insufficient supply of trombones and trumpets. Mr. Hoisington believes that the band will be far enough along in about three or four weeks' time to begin making public appearances. As soon as it is possible Mr. Hoisington says we will have a band concert from which we hope to obtain money enough to buy the needed outfits for the appearance of our band.

An election, with all its mud-slinging, big promises, etc., etc., was held in the assembly this week. The history class elected candidates for the different parties. Lawrence Kuykendall was selected as the Republican candidate; Leasel Havens for the Socialist candidate; Willard Schoeffler for the Democratic candidate. The campaign speeches were given in the assembly on Monday and the voting done on Wednesday. Willard Schoeffler won the election.

People of the Business Principles class are preparing debates to be given in the assembly in connection with their study of frauds and their detection.

F. F. A. News
The Future Farmers of America initiated all new members Monday night, making it the largest enrollment it has ever had. The annual F. F. A. banquet will be given Wednesday night. About 150 people are expected to be present.

Basketball News ...
The Tigers will start off the season on November 20, at Bovill. The prospects for the year are promising. John Wallace and Willard Schoeffler have had considerable experience, and Lawrence Kuykendall, Frank Abrams, Tom Keene and Nolan Weeks have had some. Glenn Newman, Jim Kuykendall and Marvin Silflow are good prospects.

HawkShaw!
The editor has appointed a HawkShaw and HawkShaw's assistants. They have been on duty during the past week, and have collected a good deal of material.

What's all this we hear about Jean Fry and Rex Blewett. We hear they have been keeping late hours! A certain Ford has been seen parked on the old Bear Ridge grade around midnight. No one would venture a guess about who was there, or why.

We hear Schoeffler likes peanut butter sandwiches as a midnight snack. It seems strange that Phyllis can't talk over the telephone when her mouth is full of peanut butter sandwiches. Do you suppose that there is a chance of starting all that over again? What has Southwick got that she hasn't?

What's this we hear about Miss McGrath and Uncle Ed tripping the light fantastic at the Garden?

Has Jewell been chasing rabbits lately? Or was it bunnies?

Any HawkShaw tips will be appreciated, just bring them in to the editor.

WHEAT SLIGHTLY LOWER DUE TO FOREIGN DECLINE

Intermountain and Pacific Coast markets held about unchanged. Denver mills lowered bids around 2c per bushel and were offering $1.08 for No. 2 northern spring and No. 2 hard winter, FOB Colorado shipping points. Mills at Ogden lowered quotations 1c per bushel and were offering 81c for No. 2 soft white, 87c for No. 2 hard white and 91c for No. 2 northern spring, FOB Utah-Idaho common points.

Futures markets at Portland held practically unchanged, but no cash quotations were available at the close of the week because of the strike of dock workers and grain handlers. Receipts at Puget Sound and Columbia river terminals were fairly large and totaled 753 cars. Mills were good buyers of the moderate offerings and further export sales to Japan were reported. A steady volume moved by rail to middlewestern markets and trade reports indicate that about 60 per cent of the crop has moved from growers hands.

Pacific Northwestern barley markets held about steady with light offerings meeting a fair demand. Offerings of malting barley were extremely light but inquiry was also slack. Demand for feeding barley was in fairly good request with mixed feed manufacturers providing the principal outlet for the current offerings. At the close of the market October 29, No. 2 bright western barley was quoted unchanged from a week ago at Portland at $1.70 per 100 pounds, sacked basis.

Oats markets were somewhat unsettled, reflecting variable local influences. Pacific Northwestern markets were quiet with limited shipping space restricting the movement to California or to Gulf ports. Local demand was limited and white oats were quoted unchanged at about $1.50 per 100 pounds, with gray oats offered at $1.45 per 100 pounds.

THE STORY

CHAPTER IV

Arrived at the little bungalow she occupied in St. Francis Wood, Lanny put her car in the garage, entered her home, and sat down to read Nance Belden's letter. And when she failed to find it she did some of the logical thinking of which she was so eminently capable in situations where her emotions were not being preyed upon. "Good work," she decided finally. "That girl I picked up on the road to Greenbrae stole it out of my hand-bag when I got out to look at the flat tire. She must have visited Nance before I got there. She was a flashy sort of dame, too, now that I think of it. An underworld hussy, doubtless; doubtless, too, known to the police. So Nance had no opportunity to slip her the letter. The matron watched too closely. Nance feared that would be the case, so she had an alternative plan. What a shrewd judge of human nature that girl is! She knew she could work on me, and oh, what a fool I was to permit it! Why, I'm as lawless as she is, only I'm a responsible member of society and she isn't. Nance knew I wouldn't fail to visit her; so she described me to her confederate, who spotted me when I drove up to the main gate and parked my car.

"When the confederate saw me coming back she drove a nail about an inch into my rear tire—simple as two and two are four. The nail was driven all the way in and the air was out before we'd gone a mile. Oh, dear, dear, dear, what a simpleton I am! I suppose I ought to do something about this, but then if I do, how can I explain my conduct to the prison officials?

"She realized thoroughly now the extent to which she had been an accessory before the act. What act, she wondered. Well, she would have to keep the details of this adventure to herself. Even Stephen Burt could not share her confidence in this, for Lanny was justly proud of her intelligence and integrity and loathed the thought that a suspicion of either might obtain in the mind of her beloved Stevie. She feared, should he learn of her adventure, that he would never quite trust her again. And that would be unbearable.

"That silly minx—telling her she could read the letter before mailing it; that if she did not approve of its contents she was free to destroy it. That was the point upon which the susceptible Lanny had impaled herself.

"Well, it can't be anything so very important," she decided finally. "It couldn't be part of a plan to escape, because escape from that place is impossible. Besides, no woman convict has ever succeeded in escaping from San Quentin. In all probability it was just a private message to one of her old underworld friends. That girl is too intelligent to dream of formulating plans for escape. Why, she couldn't get out of the front gate. She'd have to swim the bay to escape, even if she succeeded in getting through the exit from the woman's quarters and past that suspicious guard in the little house there."

So Lanny made herself a highball and resolved to dismiss all thought of the incident. She also resolved to give Nance Belden a piece of her mind if and when she decided to visit her again. And she was not at all certain she would make Nance another visit.

Two weeks later, while she was sitting before the fire, reading, her telephone rang and a man's voice said:

"Is this Miss Rebecca Lanning?"

"Yes. Who is this?"

"Never mind. You wouldn't know me if I told you who I am. I'm a friend of Nance Belden's."

"Oh, indeed? Ironically. And who might Nance Belden be?"

Lanny was nobody's fool. On the instant every sense was alert, for if this was a trap set by the authorities, who, in some mysterious way, had gotten wind of her escape, she was resolved not to walk into it.

"Are you going to be at home for an hour, Miss Lanning?" the voice pursued. It was a pleasant enough voice, Lanny reflected.

"I am, but what business is that of yours?"

"Oh, well, if you're going to be such a cutup," the voice rejoined, "I'll not bother to argue with you over the phone. I'll come out. Good-by."

He hung up, leaving Lanny in a state of acute mental perturbation, which did not subside until she heard her doorbell ringing some ten minutes later. It subsided then. Her courage always mounted when there was an immediate situation to face. "Nance Belden's friend," she decided instantly. For a moment she considered telephoning Dan McNamara, then decided the worthy fellow might prove an embarrassment. So she got a pistol from her bureau drawer—because she was a practical soul and dwelt alone. She had purchased the pistol as a precaution—and went to the door. She cocked the pistol, took a long breath, threw open the door suddenly and raised her weapon.

"Put 'em up," she commanded harshly.

"Don't be silly, Lanny dear," a soft voice entreated her wearily. "It's only me."

"Nancy Belden—you little devil," Lanny almost shouted. "Come in here this instant!"

Nance Belden reeled in and Lanny closed the door behind her, turned the bolt, switched on the hall light—and screamed.

"Pipe down," Nance commanded, in that queer, faint, weary voice. "I'm not a corpse, but I'll tell the world I came mighty close to being one just before lock-up time this afternoon. Lanny, dear, I crashed the gate."

"Well, you'll crash out of here in a split second, you little hellion," Lanny cried sharply. "Get as a dishrag and your hair like a witch's, and covered with blood. Where are you hurt?"

"Bullet through my left arm, high up near the shoulder. That guard could shoot, and he did! If my boy friend hadn't shot back at him and made him hunt his hole I'd be fshbat this minute."

"You've got to get out of here, Nance," Lanny was terrified. "How many visitors have you had since you've been in San Quentin?"

"Just you, Lanny."

"The authorities will look me up and they'll come here. Understand? They'll come here—there, they're on the telephone now. Oh, my good lord, what have I done to deserve this?"

She dashed into her kitchen and took down the telephone receiver. And again a masculine voice said:

"Miss Rebecca Lanning?"

Lanny controlled herself. "Yes," she said calmly. "Who's speaking?"

"Dan McNamara."

"Oh, hello, Dan. How are you?"

"Fine, Lanny. How's yourself?"

"Well, I might be dead for all the interest you've taken in me since you swallowed that good highball you grafted off me the day you came to Doctor Burt's office with that Nance Belden girl." She added archly—"you egg!"

Dan McNamara laughed. "Can I come out now?"

"The very idea. Of course not. It's almost ten o'clock and I'm just about to retire!"

"This is business, Lanny. I've got to see you at once."

"I didn't know the police were after me."

"The police aren't, but the chief is. Lanny, that Nance Belden escaped from San Quentin late this afternoon. She got to San Francisco all right. We know that because we found the speedboat she crossed the bay in tied up in the yacht harbor at the Marina. There was blood all over the cockpit and bullet holes in the hull."

"All of which proves, Dan, that God's in his heaven and all's well with the world. Are you seriously trying to recover the girl and send her back to the penitentiary?"

"I'm not. I'd give two of my big back teeth to see her make a clean getaway. You know that. But the warden—naturally. It seems you visited Nance two weeks ago and smuggled a letter out for her and mailed it."

"Dan, I give you my word of honor I neither mailed a letter for her nor passed it to somebody else to mail. Nor did the girl discuss with me any plans for escape. If she had I would have told the warden, in order to prevent her escape. It wouldn't have been kind not to do so. The girl is mentally irresponsible and it would have occurred to me that, in any mad attempt to escape, a guard might shoot at her."

"Well a guard did, and he hit her, too. But he didn't stop her. Her outside gang opened on him with a Tommy gun from a speedboat off the point, and made him hunt his hole. Nance swam out to the boat under cover of their protective fire; they hauled her in and beat it forty-five miles an hour across San Pablo bay and headed up toward Carquinez straits, while daylight lasted. After dark they doused their lights and sneaked back. The warden telephoned Central office here and gave the alarm. I wasn't on hand, but of course the captain on duty had the water front covered at once. He had two men at the St. Francis Yacht club and they saw a speedboat sneak in and across the little harbor to a vacant berth on the Marina side. Before the cops could hurry across, the people in the boat jumped out and to a waiting car. The cops followed in a police car as soon as they could, but one of Nance's friends riddled their front tires with machine-gun bullets and the trail was lost."

"How exciting, Dan!"

"Yes, and it will be more exciting for you, Lanny. I got home about two minutes ago and my phone was ringing. It was central office trying to report to me. They're just starting a couple of dicks out in a cruiser to watch and see if Nance tries to make your house. You're a trained nurse. The warden's found out that much—matter of looking you up in the San Francisco directory. So he thinks that she'll head for your house to receive medical attention. She got hit, you know. And you must be a friend of hers—otherwise why did you call upon her?"

"Dan," said Lanny desperately, "she's here now!"

"Into your car with her, Lanny, and beat it out to my house with her." He gave her the address. "That's the last place on earth the devil himself would hunt for an escaped convict."

"I've just heard a thump and a crash in my living room, Dan. I think she's faint. Telephone Doctor Burt to come to your home—that he will have to probe a bullet wound and dress it. Tell him to bring some whiskey and two or three hot-water bags, and be on hand yourself to let me in. I can't leave here until I've mopped up any bloodstains she may have left on the sidewalk and my front steps. Good-by."

Lanny was right. Nance Belden lay on the floor of the living room in a faint. She picked the girl up in her strong arms and carried her down a short flight of stairs that led from her kitchen to the garage below. She heaved her into the car, ran back upstairs, got a wet mop, and by the light of the electric lamp over the front entrance searched for drops of blood. She found a few and followed them to the sidewalk, eradicating them with vigorous sweeps of the mop, then dashed back into the house, jammed on her hat and coat, ran outside again, threw open the garage door and backed her car out. She paused again, to shut it, then swung up the street as the half-red lamps of a police cruiser turned the corner. She swung wide to give it a clear berth, turned the first corner and spat. She followed a zig-zag course until she felt sure she had thrown the police car off her trail—provided they had become suspicious and started to follow her; she turned up a residence street that she felt reasonably certain would not be patrolled by traffic officers at that hour of the night, and speeded up.

Dan McNamara was standing on the sidewalk in front of his house when she drew up. He reached into her car, lifted Nance Belden out and ran with her down an alley alongside the house to the basement entrance, which he kicked open. Lanny followed. Up the stairs to the kitchen the big chief ran, through the kitchen and on to a rear bedroom. Lanny jerked a small rug off the floor and threw it on the bed. "Let her bleed on that for a while," she commanded. "No sense in messing this nice clean bed all up. There must be blood in my car, Dan. Take a wet towel and go out and clean it thoroughly, please, while I'm undressing this poor lamb. Get me one of your wife's clean nightgowns."

"Ain't got no wife, Lanny. Use one of mine."

"Just as good as any. Get it. Who takes care of you here?"

"My mother."

"Can she be trusted?"

"I've sent her to the country for a month," he evaded. "I'm sleeping here and eating downtown."

"God bless our home, Dan. Clear out—and watch for Stevie and let him in."

She ran to the kitchen, turned on the hot water and set an enameled skillet under the faucet; then returned, undressed the girl. In an adjoining bathroom she found clean towels and placed a cold one on her head. When she returned to the kitchen, the enameled skillet was sitting in the midst of a cloud of steam, so she knew it had been thoroughly disinfected; she filled it with warm water, carried it into the room and with a wet towel mopped the two holes in Nance's arm and examined the wound.

"Missed the bone," she decided.

"Bled like a stuck pig, of course, piece of her dress probably carried into the wound."

In the medicine closet, Lanny discovered a small bottle of iodine. So she doused the wound with it, wrapped a cold towel around the girl's shoulder and tucked her into bed.

In the living room she found a brass box with cigarettes in it, so she lit one and sat down beside Nance, with her capable fingers on the girl's pulse. Evidently the count was satisfactory, for Lanny scowled at the girl and growled: "You little devil! And I crashed the gate," says she proudly. Well, if you aren't the little hell-bender! You've got the nerve of a lion-tamer!"

She found a comb and brush in Dan McNamara's bureau and combed and smoothed the dank, straggly black bob, and when that was done she unbent long enough to implant a kiss on the white brow. "Poor lamb!" she murmured. "Nobody's poor lost darling!"

The girl's eyelids flickered.

"Is that you, Lanny?" the girl murmured faintly.

"Yes, dearie. And you're all right. So don't worry. Nobody's going to take you back to San Quentin."

"The cops chased us at the boat landing, Lanny. Are you sure we shook them off?"

"Of course you did—the big boobs! Now, listen, dearie. I'm going to tell you something, but don't let it disturb you. Take my word for it you're safe. Do you remember Dan McNamara, the chief of police?"

"Of course. Old Daniel's my boy friend."

"Well, you're in his bed. The cops were on your trail, dearie. They suspected you might come to my house, so Dan tipped me off they were coming and to beat it with you out to his house."

Terror shone in the girl's dark eyes.

"I'd never trust a cop that far," she wailed. "Oh, Lanny, you've let him make a sucker out of you." She began to weep hysterically.

"If you don't stop that," Lanny promised, "I'll bat you over the head with this skillet," and she picked that homely utensil up and shook it at Nance.

"Dan McNamara's your friend."

"Yes, and chief of police, too. Lanny, I'll die if they take me back. They'll put me in the dungeon—I'm afraid of the dark."

"Shut up. You're not afraid of anything. You've got your little red badge of courage, you scaramouche! You afraid? My foot! Didn't you crash the gate and swim for that speedboat under fire?"

"Machine-gun fire, at that," Dan McNamara supplemented, from the doorway. "They opened on her and she boat from the towers." He came to the side of the bed and grinned down at the terrified girl. "Don't you worry, Nance. You're safe. I'm a cop, but I'm not without some sporting blood—you get away earns three rousing cheers from old Dan McNamara." His big hand strayed over her face.

"You're a good old hunk of cheese," she assured him.

She turned her head toward Lanny. "Am I going to die, Lanny?" she asked.

"Not unless I kill you—which I'm liable to do if you don't buck up and believe what I tell you. You've been shot but it doesn't amount to much. You'll be all right in a week or two."

"Then I'll be good, Lanny." The tired eyes closed and while Lanny stood by, wondering what to say next, Nance sank into a sleep of profound exhaustion.

Terror Shone in the Girl's Dark Eyes.

"Let her alone until Stevie comes," Lanny suggested. "The wound has stopped bleeding. Come out into the living room and if you're as crooked a cop as you ought to be you've got liquor in the house and I've got to have a drink of it." Her middle-aged face was very serious.

"Those cops at your house will stick around, Lanny, and when you return they'll want to know where you've been. What are you going to tell them?"

"Tell them nothing. Let those two cops sit in their car in front of my house all night and watch it. What do I care? At least they'll keep burglars away. And when finally they do round me up and waltz me down to central station to be questioned, you'll do the questioning, will you not?"

"Lanny," said Dan McNamara, "if you were a man and on the force I'd make you a detective sergeant. You're a bear-cat, that's what you are. But you smuggled that letter out of San Quentin for Nance and turned it over to Sapphire Susie!"

"Indeed! Well, let me tell you, Dan McNamara, that I'm a respectable woman and I never associate, if I know it, with ladies known to the police by such names."

"Maybe you didn't know it, but you gave Sapphire Susie a lift in your car from the main gate at San Quentin down to Greenbrae. The guard remembers seeing her hanging around the main gate, as if she was waiting for somebody; later she got into a coupe with a middle-aged lady, who looked so respectable he took another look at the pass she had just surrendered to him and remembers that the name on the pass was yours. The pass entitled you to visit Nance Belden. Guards may not remember such incidents until something happens. Then they're fast on their feet, Lanny."

"And who, if you please, is Sapphire Susie?"

"She's did a stretch at San Quentin for blackmail. She was discharged a week before you visited Nance, and before Susie left the Big House, Nance fixed it with her to lend a helping hand. Apparently Nance didn't want to confide the minute details of her plan of escape to Susie. Susie's a swell looker but a little bit dumb—she levied blackmail through the mail, understand, and signed her name. Instead of hiring a smart slyster lawyer, So Nance decided to send her written instructions out by you, and Susie agreed to pick you up, pinch the letter and deliver it."

"Dan, I assure you I wasn't in any plot to effect a prison delivery. If I'd thought for an instant I was doing anything wrong—why, Nance told me to read her letter and if I disapproved of its contents to destroy it. I didn't see any harm in that."

"You violated the rules of the prison and you could be punished for it by a term in that same prison."

"I'm a respectable woman—"

"That gets you nowhere. I was a respectable chief of police once—and now look at me. If your part in this leaks out you can only be punished—and you can't be convicted unless you talk in your sleep. If my part in this should leak out I'll be punished and disgraced and thrown out of the best job I've ever had. However—" he raised his glass to her—"mud in your eye, Lanny."

"Happy days, Dan, you gorgeous sooty."

The doorbell rang. Dan opened it and Doctor Burt stepped in. He paused in amazement at sight of Lanny, glass in hand; she motioned him with it down the hall. "First door at the end, Stevie. You'll find your patient there."

"That girl with the dissociated personality, Nance Belden, escaped from San Quentin late this afternoon, Chief. Stephen began, and handed the latter a newspaper. "Big story. First woman to escape from San Quentin." He gazed severely upon Lanny. "What are you doing here, Lanny?"

"All right to pay, Stevie dear, and no pitch hot. That Belden girl is here with a bullet hole in her shoulder; she's suffering from shock and submerison and chill and loss of blood and she's cold as a penguin's tail. I've given her a stiff noggin of Dan's terrible booze and a fortieth of a grain of strychnin and an alcohol rub. She's sleeping. Did you bring those hot-water bottles?"

"Yes," he said humbly, indicating a bag he carried. Lanny fell upon the bag, and retired to the kitchen to fill the hot-water bottles and tuck them in alongside her child patient. "Lucky if she doesn't develop pneumonia, Stevie."

Doctor Burt stood looking down at the sleeping Nance. "Out of the warden's arms and straight into yours. You guessed she'd call on Lanny, eh, Dan, you're an old fox."

"No, Doc, I'm not. A fox has brains."

"He's a lamb, Stevie, just a big ram lamb."

While Lanny was assisting Doctor Burt in dressing Nance Belden's wound, Dan McNamara sat in his plain little living room and read the story of her escape from San Quentin. It appeared that throughout all of Sunday afternoon two men, in a motor boat, had been anchored in the cove off San Quentin apparently fishing for striped bass, which abound at this particular point in San Francisco bay. There were other boats anchored there also—eight in all. The guard at the entrance to the women's quarters had observed them, until, about four-thirty p. m., just before locking-up time a guard in one of the lookout towers on the hill had telephoned him that a boat had approached close to the shore.

The guard had thereupon stepped out of his kiosk and around to the rear of it, which faced toward the beach, less than thirty feet distant. He had shouted at the men in the boat and warned them to be off, that they were not permitted to approach that close, that they were within the dead-line. To this the men replied that they couldn't help it; that their motor had gone dead and that the tide had set them in; that they were trying to make repairs and would be off as soon as they could.

While the guard was in the rear of his station, engaged in this conversation, Nance Belden had approached the gate, kicked off her shoes and, digging her toes into the quarter-inch wire mesh of the sixteen-foot gate, had scrambled to the top with incredible rapidity. She was just climbing down the outside of the gate when the guard in the tower on the hill saw her and immediately telephoned to the guard at the main gate; also to the guard arguing with the men in the motor-boat. Upon hearing the telephone bell ringing in his station, that guard had walked back into it; at the same time, keeping the kiosk between her and the approaching guard, Nance Belden had dashed down to the beach and commenced swimming rapidly toward the motor-boat, the motor of which instantly started, and the boat commenced edging in to pick her up.

When the guard in the kiosk, apprised of what was taking place, ran out with a rifle in his hand and shouted to Nance Belden to come back or he would shoot her, a machine-gun in the motor-boat promptly came into action against him. He had not been hit, but a shower of bullets had splattered the ground around and in front of him and another burst had gone over his head and through the sentry box. The guard had fled once at the Belden woman and hit her, but immediately thereafter, fearful of being killed, he had thrown himself flat on the ground.

The guard in the watch-tower on the hill had then brought his machine-gun into action. His first burst had been short, and drew answering fire from the machine gunner in the boat. Although the range was four hundred yards, the first burst from the motor-boat tore through the wooden watch-tower, which rather distracted the aim of the guard there; nevertheless, the latter stuck to his gun and continued to fire, splattering bullets around the swimming girl and into the boat.

The men in the boat did not hesitate, but came on through the hall of bullets; the escaping prisoner hid in the meanwhile either sunk or dived; at any rate a widening tinge of red appeared on the water. She was down about thirty seconds, then her head emerged close to the boat, and she swam with one arm to the side of it; a man reached over and grasped her under both arms and jerked her into the boat, which instantly turned, put on full speed and raced away close past two other boats. Fearful of killing innocent people, the guard in the watch-tower held his fire until the escaping boat was in the clear; then he and the guard in another tower came into action again. But a target moving at a speed of forty-five miles an hour is not easily hit; the fire was either over or short and the boat did not stop. When it was out of range, it turned, and in the rapidly fading light of the winter day, headed up into San Pablo bay, running close to the south shore to avoid the chop of the waves in this shallow expanse of water. They ran without lights.

While the course they had taken would seem to indicate a desire to run up Carquinez straits to the Sacramento or the San Joaquin rivers, land and escape in a waiting automobile into central California, the warden realized that his quarry was not lacking in intelligence; that, fast as they fled, they would realize that the telephone is faster; that the roar of their motor must betray them a mile away. He had, therefore, taken the precaution to notify the chiefs of police of Pittsburg, Martinez, Sausalito, Richmond, Berkeley, Oakland and San Francisco, leaving to these the task of notifying intermediate points. The warden had a suspicion the fugitives would double back to San Francisco—particularly since the girl was wounded and must be hidden in order to receive medical attention.

"And here she is," Dan McNamara muttered. "Cripes, what a woman! Lord, how I love a woman with brains and courage. Just a little simple matter of taking pains and taking risks. She didn't go in to the dining hall for dinner with the other prisoners. Smart! Knew she couldn't make a fast swim on a full stomach. Smart enough to notice the warden's oversight in failing to fill in with barbed wire topping that eighteen-inch space at the top of his gate. Of course they figured they needn't bother with that, because no woman could climb a sixteen-foot wire mesh fence anyhow, and if she did she'd only drop down into the waiting arms of the guard, who is never absent, night or day. But Nance Belden knew she could climb that fence barefoot; she knew she had thirty seconds to do it and a drop on the other side from the top of the gate. Her job was to induce the guard to turn his back—and her friends in the boat did that!"

"She knew she'd been seen from the watch-tower on the hill and the guard at the gates notified by telephone; as he returned from the edge of the beach, around the south side of his kiosk, Nance slipped by him on the north side and was in the water as the guard took up the 'phone. Smart! She knew no guard will stick under machine-gun fire at fifty yards, merely to stop a woman convict escaping from prison. Smart! Sank and swam under water—and then the zigzag course between the boats of the other fishermen, after they picked her up. Fine psychology—she engineered it all—and I know she's a nut! And then straight to Lanny for medical attention—straight to the one human being she knew she could trust—no, I'll not send her back. And I don't particularly want to catch her friends either. I'll say they're friends! Wish I had a couple of friends that'd come on through machine-gun fire for me! I had thought the world was selfish and cruel and thieving and lying—but there's nobility left in it after all."

WOMEN WITHOUT MEN

An Armistice Day Editorial by Dorothy S. Chandler, Junior in Journalism, University of Idaho.

Eighteen years ago the guns in France were suddenly silenced. Today, the guns, well oiled and primed, are ready to roar again.

Eighteen years ago the world was saved for democracy by patriotism and devotion and death. Tomorrow we will be ready to go forth and save it again in the same manner.

Eighteen years ago young Jim Simpson died in a shell hole somewhere in France. His buddy, Joe Daly, gave him a smoke before the end. Jim had marched, and sung, and fought, and cursed, but he died very quietly.

Next Wednesday Joe is to give an address to the Legion. He will mention the hardships which brought cementing of friendships, of patriotism, which was above commercialism, of a spirit undaunted by death.

Wednesday, watching the Armistice parade, Jim's mother will wonder if Jim would have changed as much as Joe if he had come home from France. Joe is a little gray above his temples, and his waist-line looks a little paunchy. Jim was lean and bony. Mrs. Simpson remembers how he scrubbed his knuckles, but they never, somehow, looked quite clean. Eighteen years, she knows, is a long spell.

Wednesday, Miss Spritzer will be home, and glad of a rest from her seven A students. In the afternoon she plans to read a new library book, and in the evening she may go to the movies. When the parade passes, Miss Spritzer will be home swishing her extra pair of stockings in some suds. The sound of the band will recall to her the way Jim said: "Young lady, you'll not teach a day after I get back from winning this man's war." Eighteen years, she will think, is a long, long time.

Wednesday, Mary Jo Brown will dance along energetically after the band, slim brown legs flashing from under a brief pink dress, her blue tam and sweater accenting the yellow of her curls. She will think war must be grand, and doesn't young Jim Daly look glorious in his high school band suit? If Jim should go away to war she'd wait for him to come home. "Why," she will say to herself, "I'd even wait eighteen years, even if that is a long time to wait."

Wednesday, liberty, democracy, and patriotism will be fine words for men to play with in the game of death and destruction.

To Mrs. Simpson, and Miss Spritzer, and Mary Jo Brown, eighteen years without Jim will always be a long, long time.

One of the troubles with the go-ahead-a-ive man is that he is too apt to be sure he's always right.

See the home merchant first.

TEAKEAN NEWS

November 1 brought a cold wave and we have a little snow on the ground.

The Teakean Ladies Aid served meals for the election board at noon and at night.

Elwood Brock is putting a new shingle roof on his house this week.

Avery Miller recently gave his house a new coat of paint.

A hunting party came home from the Weitas country Sunday. Three of them from our community reported an elk each, Mrs. Joe Choate, Mrs. Ed. Choate and Carroll Groseclose. Carroll also got a deer, and he says he got more "kick" out of the trip than all the rest, as one of the pack horses kicked him just below the knee, so he is going around with a limp these days.

Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Brock and children, Dale and Clara, and John Lind were Lewiston visitors last week.

Mrs. M. G. Groseclose was an over-night visitor at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Groseclose one night last week.

Harry Sampson is here rounding up his cattle this week.

The carpenter work at the church is not finished yet. There is quite a lot of inside work to do, but the outside is painted nicely now.

Wm. Groseclose and Orval Choate, two members of the school board, were in Orofino Saturday and made arrangements to have the Caven-dish high school bus come up to Teakean and take the high school children with them to Southwick.

Geo. Pitcher and Elmer Powell, packers from the Weitas ranger station, are coming out this week.

There will be a pie social given by the Grange at the school house on Friday evening, November 13.

LINDEN NOTES

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Hunt returned Sunday from a visit with relatives and old friends and neighbors in Missouri.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Zimmerman returned recently from a week's visit with their daughter, Mrs. Oscar Torgerson and husband at Lapwai. During their absence their children papered the house, which gave them a very happy surprise.

Ruth Hunt spent Saturday evening Wilma Zimmerman.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Jenkins and children were Sunday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Weaver.

Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Hunt and children visited at the H. S. Weaver home Thursday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Hunt and children, Gilbert, Ruth and Louise and Mr. and Mrs. Loren Bartlett and daughter Shirley Ann returned on Thursday from a trip to California.

Archie Garner returned Sunday evening from a hunting trip in the Elk River country with a fine deer.

Melvin Garner went to Lewiston Thursday and traded their coupe for a fine 1932 model Chev. sport coupe.

Herb Fately spent Friday and Saturday with his sisters, Mrs. Nettie Gentry and Mrs. Clara Bowling in Kendrick.

Bill Gibson visited at the James Farrington home Sunday afternoon.

Miss Blanch Harris spent Sunday with friends at Avon.

Miss Hattie Stone, Lewiston, visited Tuesday at the Addison Alexander home.

Quite a crowd from here and Cedar ridge attended the Hallowe'en program, pie social and dance at Park Saturday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Bohn are moving this week to the Barclay place to care for Mr. Barclay, as he is suffering with asthma.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Hodgins and Mrs. Asa Bowling visited Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Fately Thursday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Pressnall and family of Southwick spent Sunday at the F. C. Lyons home.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer McCoy and Mrs. Denzil Hunt and baby of Southwick spent Tuesday evening with Mr. and Mrs. Austin McCoy.

The Israel and Cuddy Logging company have moved out from Breakfast creek for the winter.

Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Fately and daughters, Patsy and Lola Jean of Jullaetta spent Sunday at the Chas. Moore home.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Weyen were Lewiston visitors Tuesday.

Quite a number of voters came out for general election Tuesday in spite of the cold weather. There were 92 votes cast.

New Arrivals

Mr. and Mrs. Math Kazda of Southwick are the proud parents of a fine 7½-pound baby daughter, who arrived at their home early Monday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Holmes, also of Southwick, are entertaining a young 7½-pound gentleman, who came to their home Monday night to make them an indefinite visit.

Mothers and babes in both instances are said to be doing nicely.

Many Present at Groh Rites

Funeral services for John Groh of Bovill, who died in Spokane Saturday afternoon, were held Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock at St. Mary's Catholic church, Moscow. High Requiem Mass was said with Father Kunkel officiating. Rosary was said Monday evening at the Short chapel. The church choir sang Requiem Mass.

Honorary pall bearers included C. G. Nogle, George Manolis, W. J. Mithoug, William Watt, John Donner, H. M. Hall, A. Friel, Clark Lancaster, Kenneth White, M. Hays, Francis O'Keefe, H. McFarland, Charles Eller, Floyd Basser, T. Stone, William Shook, R. McDonald, B. Hobbs. Active pall bearers were Merle Denevan, Joe Hollana, Patrick Smiley, James Gilroy, Leo Guilfooy, M. O'Mera.

The church was more than filled with friends who came to pay their last respects to an honored friend. Interment was in the Moscow Catholic cemetery.

Mr. Groh was an old-time resident of this section and known to all, and it is with sincere regret that they learn of his passing.

heard Bob Burns and his bazooka over the radio. Well, this pair is going to give you a show that you will get a big kick out of. Bing and Bob turn cowboys and the Old West goes "swing" in this latest Crosby picture. The story goes that the crooner buys a bull at the Madison Square rodeo, then starts west with the animal in a box car. On the way there is heard music by Crosby, Burns, the bull, Miss Farmer and Martha Raye, a new screen comedy find—she claims to have a bigger mouth than Joe E. Brown and defies anyone to match her facial contortions. You might try it.

Other regular features will be shown also.

Well Folks—Now that the election is over we can really enjoy our radios again in the evening. And what a relief to be able to listen to good music or a good play.

By the way, are you making the most of your cream possibilities these days? Remember, a cream check is year-around income—and remember—we issue 'em right now—no waiting, no fuss, no bother. Try us.

Our butter will please you, as will our cottage cheese and ice cream. Made only from the very finest selected materials.

Going Some

A hermit recently arrived in one of our large cities to see what changes had taken place during his twenty years absence.

He had no sooner started his tour of investigation when he was astounded to see a sign "Try Ethyl—20 cents." He recovered and started on, only to read at the next corner "Two gals, 35 cents." That was enough. He headed back for the hills where the pace wasn't quite so fast.

Girls Mother: "Young man, we turn the lights out at 10:30."

Boy Friend: "Oh, boy! That'll be keen."
