Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Mielke and son of Orofino spent the week-end here visiting friends and relatives.

On last Tuesday evening a large group of friends gathered at the Cameron hall, where a surprise party was given Rev. T. Meske in honor of his birthday anniversary. An enjoyable time was had by all.

Mr. and Mrs. August F. Wegner and daughter Gladys spent the week-end visiting relatives at Fairfield, Wash.

Commercial Club Meeting

The regular monthly meeting of the Kendrick Commercial club will be held in Fraternal Temple next Monday evening. Dinner will be served at 6:30 by Mrs. Paul Lind.

A special effort will be made at this time to secure the attendance of every business man in town and it is to be hoped that enough will be interested in what is being done by the club to be in attendance at this coming meeting. If you are interested in Kendrick and the surrounding country, you will be present and if not, you will be noted as absent and not interested.

This work cannot be carried on by just a few. We need your moral as well as financial help. Plan to be there next Monday evening, December 7, at 6:30.

Again Confined To Bed

Mrs. Thomas McDowell is again confined to her bed as a result of the fall she suffered some three or four weeks ago, when she fell through a porch undergoing rebuilding, sustaining severe bruises and a shock from which she is slow in recovering.

Students Home

Students at the U. of I. who spent their Thanksgiving vacation at home were Roy Ramey, Jr., Elmer Emery, who was a guest of Tom Keene, Glenn Wallace, Roy Long, Joe Watts, the Misses Jeanne Ramey, Allene Rider, Beatrice and Betty Curtiss.

Mr. and Mrs. Silvie Cook had as their guests on Thanksgiving day Mr. Cook's mother, Mrs. Emma Cook, and Walter Cook and Miss Ellen Erickson.

Mrs. A. Murphy and sons.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Siflow spent Thanksgiving with Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Pearson.

Mr. and Mrs. H. V. Perryman were Thanksgiving day guests in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Galloway.

INTERESTING NEWS NOTES FROM OUR PUBLIC SCHOOLS

A pep rally was given by the students of the High school last Tuesday to arouse interest for the Bovill-Kendrick game. They paraded through the business section of the town and through all the stores. The old yells were given and several new ones as well.

Report cards were handed out on Wednesday. This marks the beginning of the third six week period. Honor rolls and other details will be given in next week's issue of the news.

Foolishness

I am going to Tulley a story of a girl who Lyle (will lie all) the time—that's me. I says says I that once Ben and me thought it was a Keene day so we went for a stroll down where the waters Siflow. Around the corner popped a Newman pulling a Woody Slead, but on second look I saw it was a lady a Wegner tail behind her. I yelled to Ben and I says says I catch her and Benscoter. But then we turned her loose and started on till we came to a farmyard. The farmer Jones took out his gun and went. Boone but he missed us and shot a little rooster. So he took the Bid-dison in the house for the wife to Fry. As for us we took over the Hill so fast I lost LaHatt. But we thanked Haven we were still alive. After that Ben began to feel kind of Weeks in the knees. So we sits down to play cards. Ben he Schoefler them. I wasn't so lucky but there wasn't a Cardinal in the deck that Ben didn't get. So Benjamin back in his pocket and we went on. We were a Long way from home now and Ben he was raising Hecht. So I was good and mad at him. But he said not to let McGrath (my wrath) get the best of me Orr else—so he sent me over to another farm-house to Bowers a lantern. They Lind us one but the wind was a Cummings round the mountain and Blewett out. So they invited us to Wolff and Weyen. About 10:00 they showed us to a Bigelow bed. The next day we learned there was a Farrington, so we decided to go to it. They had a horse but we couldn't Rider. So we started afoot over the Fairfield. We saw everybody's son. There was Johnson, Davidson and Thompson. There was the slim kind and Deobald kind. One lady lost Arnett. Now it was pretty dark so we started to the farmers. On the way I heard a scream that would Frazier hair right off your head. So I Renfrow my very life. When we got to the farm I was so scared I couldn't say Woodward. And I putters and Peters around till the farmer offers to Halseth home.

— Barbara Long.

Grouse Commits Suicide

Monday morning a hen blue grouse came flying down Main street from the west, heading toward the east. It narrowly missed Roy Davis' head just in front of the big plate glass window of the Kendrick Garage, swung under the canopy roof of that place, missed a tree and flew head-on into the side of the Frank Curtiss home across the street from the garage, breaking its neck. So fast was the bird flying that the impact shattered its bill as well as breaking its neck. Ed Deobald picked it up and it was on display at the garage for a time.

This is the second time birds have committed suicide in town here, the first one being this spring when a native pheasant flew through the big plate glass window at the Long store, killing itself and breaking a round hole about six inches across in the glass.

Entertain At Cards

The ladies of the Afternoon Bridge club entertained their husbands at a 6:30 dinner, followed by bridge played at six tables, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Dawald Monday evening.

Following dinner six tables of bridge were in play, with high scores for the evening going to Mrs. George Leith and Edgar Long. J. M. Lyle was an invited guest. Hosts and hostesses were Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Dawald, Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Rider, Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Blewett and Mr. and Mrs. W. L. McCreary.

Had Carbuncle Removed

Mrs. F. S. Curtiss underwent an operation for the removal of a carbuncle from her neck Tuesday morning. She is convalescing at her home.

FORMER SOUTHWICK RESIDENT DIES AT CLARKSTON

Mrs. Emma Pearl Hewett, a former well-known resident of the Southwick section, died at her home in Clarkston, Wash., Friday, Nov. 27, 1936.

Emma Pearl Phillips, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Phillips, was born March 16, 1881, at Shambaugh, Iowa. She came to Southwick with her parents when she was about 18 years of age. On June 3, 1909, she was married to Clarence Hewett. To this union five children were born: Clyde, Lloyd, Merle, Everett and Donald, all of whom, with their father, survive.

After her marriage they resided on a ranch near Southwick until 1929, when they moved to Clarkston, Wash., where they had since resided.

Besides her immediate family, she is survived by a brother, John Phillips of Southwick and three sisters: Mrs. Anna Welker, Clarkston; Mrs. Margaret Way, Myrtle Creek, Oregon; Mrs. Cora McCullum, South Edmonton, Alberta, Canada; also two grandchildren: Gene and Joy Hewett, Clarkston, and a host of nieces and nephews.

Funeral services were held in the Merchant chapel, Clarkston, and interment was made in Vineland cemetery.

Palbearers were Raymond Stal-naker, Chas. Price, Fred Whiting, Lloyd Pryear, Ed. Wetmore and Roy Blankenship.

Birthday Party

Mrs. Lester Crocker entertained a number of little boys in honor of her young son, Danny's fifth birthday anniversary, Tuesday afternoon. With gay caps and noisy balloons the little fellows had a merry time when seated at a table with a gleaming birthday cake with five candles.

Those present were Junior and Eugene Brocke, John Deobald, Douglas Christensen, Delos Miller, Sonny Dawald, Orin Poindexter and Danny Crocker.

New Auto Plates Have Arrived

More than 7,000 new 1937 automobile license plates have been received by County Assessor Walter Q. Taylor and the tags will go on sale January 1. However, your old plates are good until April 1. The new plates have a silver background with black lettering.

In case you want a special number, it will be necessary to make the required license deposit with the assessor and then wait until that numerical number is reached.

Troy-Moscow Highway

The new link of the Troy-Moscow highway, which has been under construction for months past (nobody remembers exactly when work started) is completed with the exception of a short distance some five miles from Troy. This will indeed be good news to those who have been in the habit of traveling this road, but have not done so on account of the deplorable condition it has been in since construction started, several months ago.

Narrow Escape

Miss Ione Reiman, school health nurse, left for Spokane Wednesday evening to spend the Thanksgiving week-end. This side of Spangle, in a thick fog, she did not see a car parked with no visible lights, and crashed into the rear of it, damaging her car so it could not be driven. She was bruised and shaken up considerably. She took the stage on into Spokane from Spangle.

Sales Tax Dead

A notice from Ben Diefendorf, commissioner of finance for the state of Idaho, has sent out notices to the effect that a proclamation issued by Gov. C. Ben Ross on November 25, declared the state sales tax as dead as the fabled "dodo bird." However, the taxes will have to be paid up to and including Nov. 25, and remittances should be in not later than December 15.

Still Dry Territory

This section (and all, so far as we know) of the great Potlatch drainage section is still "dry territory" regardless of the fact that we have plenty to drink, for it hasn't given us a real good, old-fashioned rain since last July.

Some how or other, we just had an idea that after the election there would be plenty of rain following the great "snow under."

THIS AND THAT ABOUT FRIENDS AND NEIGHBORS

Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Robinette went to Kooskia Monday to visit a few days with relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Orr motored to Spokane Thursday, returning on Friday evening.

Refreshments were served by the hostess at the close of play. Mrs. Wade Keene held high score for the afternoon. Invited guests were Mrs. W. E. Deobald, Mrs. L. D. Crocker and Rilla Davidson.

Chosen On Squad

Word has been received in Kendrick to the effect that Roy Ramey, Jr., has been chosen as one of the first five on the Freshman basketball team at the U. of I.

ARGENTINE AND CANADIAN WHEAT KEEP MARKET DOWN

Wheat markets held about unchanged during the week ended November 27, but corn continued to decline with heavy marketings of hogs and feeders turning to cheaper rations, according to the Weekly Grain Market Review of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics. Upward revisions in estimates of southern hemisphere crops and continued liberal offerings of Argentine and Canadian wheat tended to offset the strengthening influence of unfavorable crop prospects in the United States and prices, both in domestic and foreign markets were not very materially changed from a week ago. Rye remained firm with an active inquiry. Oats remained firm despite the drop in corn, with a more active inquiry for the small offerings. Feed barley declined with corn but malting types held about steady.

Continued dryness in western sections of the winter wheat belt and in spring wheat areas where moisture supplies are the lowest in years with little or no fall plowing done, were strengthening influences in the domestic wheat situation. These were largely offset by fairly heavy market receipts and only moderate milling inquiry and more favorable prospects in the southern hemisphere, with continued liberal offerings of Canadian and Argentine wheat. A slight upward revision in southern hemisphere wheat acreage and continued favorable progress of the crop suggests outturns somewhat above earlier expectations. The Argentine acreage is now placed at 17,503,000 acres as against 14,208,000 last season.

Marketings of new Australian wheat are proceeding rapidly with harvest about two weeks ahead of normal. The Australian wheat acreage is now placed at 12,579,000 acres compared with 11,809,000 acres reported in 1936. The quality of the crop is reported irregular with test weights under those of recent years.

Domestic cash wheat markets were barely steady with slight declines reported for some classes. Marketings of winter wheat were fairly heavy with 1,408 cars received at the principal terminals. As in recent weeks, a large percentage of the arrivals went direct to mills or elevators on previous sales and a relatively small proportion was offered in the open market. Demand was not urgent and premiums for high protein types of hard winter were relatively small. Heavy test weight wheat was in more active request and fairly large shipments of low protein hard and soft wheat were made from Kansas City elevators to Texas and Oklahoma mills which were in need of low protein grain to complete milling mixtures. At the close of the week No. 2 hard winter was quoted at Kansas City at $1.20 to $1.24. At Fort Worth No. 1 hard winter was quoted at $1.39 delivered Texas common points. Premiums on hard winter wheats were increased 1c to 2c per bushel at Chicago, where No. 2 hard was quoted at $1.23 to $1.27.

Offerings of soft winter wheat were generally adequate for current trade needs and prices held about unchanged with No. 2 soft red winter quoted at St. Louis at $1.23, at Chicago at $1.21 to $1.23, and at Kansas City at $1.20 to $1.22 per bushel.

Marketings of spring wheat were about the same as in recent weeks with 483 cars received at Minneapolis and 125 cars at Duluth. Of the Minneapolis inspections, 72 cars were winter wheat and 23 cars durum. The test weight of the spring wheat arrivals averaged around 55 pounds per bushel. Milling demand was rather slow, reflecting the dull pre-holiday flour market.

Durum markets were relatively weaker than those for bread wheats and reflected some slackening in demand from mills and lower quotations on Canadian offerings. At the close of the week No. 2 amber durum was quoted at Minneapolis at $1.26 to $1.43 with choice milling lots bringing $1.45 to $1.48. Canadian shippers were asking $1.67 per bushel for No. 2 Canadian western durum delivered Duluth, duty paid.

Intermountain and Pacific Coast markets strengthened slightly but trading on the coast continued to be restricted by labor difficulties. Denver mills increased bids 1c per bushel and at the close of the week were offering $1.11 for No. 2 north-

O'Malley Of The Mounted

Western film fans will again have the opportunity of seeing one of their favorite stars at the Kendrick Theatre this Friday and Saturday nights in "O'Malley of the Mounted," starring George O'Brien, one of the mounties who "always get their man."

The story is adapted from the original by Wm. S. Hart, whom every picture fan of the silent days knew and loved. O'Brien's adventures include a daring jail break, in which he frees one member of the bandit gang he is sent to help capture. O'Brien is trapped, but Irene Ware, who has fallen in love with him, carries the messages that enable the mounties to "get their man."

Another feature will be a rollicking comedy entitled "The Jones Family, in Educating Father." You will appreciate this splendid comedy as much as you did the headliner.

Road Work Progressing

According to N. E. Walker, superintendent in charge of the building of the Cedar creek road, there is still about a mile and a half to grade out and the whole is yet to be surfaced. Of course heavy rock has been put in some dusty places, but no top rock has yet been applied. It's not a bad road at that.

ern spring. Quotations at Ogden were also up about 1c per bushel with mills bidding 84c for No. 2 soft white, 88c for No. 2 hard white and 94c per bushel for No. 2 northern spring, FOB Utah-Idaho common points.

Quotations at Portland were largely nominal but trade reports indicated that No. 1 soft and western white wheat would bring around $1.00 to $1.01 per bushel, sacked, delivered Portland. Wheat receipts at Puget Sound and Columbia river terminals totaled only 117 cars and represented principally deliveries to mills on earlier sales. A moderate business was reported in grain for rail shipment to Minneapolis and Kansas City areas on the basis of around $1.00 per bushel, sacked, at coast terminals for white wheats. At the close of the week, at Seattle, western white was quoted at $1.02, western red and hard winter at $1.03 and hard white at $1.07 per bushel, sacked.

California markets advanced about 1c per bushel with increased local inquiry for milling grades as a result of more active inquiry from mills following the interruption of water shipments from the Pacific Northwest by labor difficulties.

Foreign markets were slightly firmer. Prices at Winnipeg advanced 1/2c, influenced by a steady export demand and No. 1 Manitoba northern was quoted at that market at the close of the week at $1.09 per bushel.

Pacific Northwest barley markets developed a firmer tone with light current offerings and moderate remaining supplies the principal strengthening feature. Relatively heavy utilization of barley for feed at country points was an additional sustaining influence. Shipments to terminals were restricted by labor difficulties and arrivals at Portland totaled only seven cars. No. 2 bright western barley was nominally quoted at Portland November 25 at $1.82 1/2 to $1.85 per 100 pounds, sacked basis. Eastern Washington barley was quoted at Seattle at $1.82 1/2 per 100, sacked.

Pacific Northwestern oats markets were relatively steady although trading was restricted by labor difficulties. Utilization of oats for feed at country points was reported unusually heavy. Prices were quoted about unchanged with No. 2 white oats at Portland at $1.50 and No. 2 gray oats at $1.45 per 100 pounds, sacked basis. Eastern Washington white oats were quoted at Seattle Nov. 25 at $1.58 per 100, sacked.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—Theodore Gatlin decided to adopt a baby in a final effort to solve his matrimonial troubles. But all his love for his foster daughter could not shelter her childhood from the hatred of her stepmother, who never wanted her. Their affairs ended in the divorce court but ten-year-old Penelope was given into the keeping of Mrs. Gatlin, except for two Sunday afternoons a month. On their first day together they set out joyfully to a baseball game, and into the bleachers, struck Penelope on the nose and the neurotic Mrs. Gatlin removed her from the hospital to which her former husband had hurried her. Mrs. Gatlin spirited the child to Europe. Gatlin retired from business, willed Penelope all his money, and was about to begin a search for his daughter when a motor accident ended his life.

CHAPTER II.—Some ten years later, in San Francisco, Stephen Burt, a rising young psychiatrist, was presented by Dan McNamara, chief of police, a girl whose terrible childhood had left her with a dual personality, for which her "saddle nose" was the part responsible. McNamara did not think she was a responsible criminal and obtained her release from the penitentiary. Even Penelope, the doctor's faithful office nurse, was won over to her cause despite Nance's hard-boiled exterior.

CHAPTER III.—Nance's criminal record outweighed Doctor Burt's clear explanation of her case and she was sent to San Quentin. Penelope, two years later, visited her and Nance persuaded her to smuggle out a letter, which a confederate stole from her handbag outside the prison walls.

CHAPTER IV.—Nance escaped, although shot, by swimming out to a speed-boat manned by friends and went to San Francisco. Penelope, who told Chief McNamara who ordered her to bring Nance to his apartment and phoned for Doctor Burt.

CHAPTER V.—One of the men in the boat on which Nance escaped—two of them ex-convicts, the other a bootlegger—had been in the office, and they went to Burt's office, where McNamara found them. The bootlegger he let go and he took the others to his home, ordering the undertaker to care for Nance and his pal. From them he learned that Nance's real name was Penelope. Locking over the Sergeant's Flynn and Angellotti, seeking the reward offered for Nance's apprehension, went to Lang's apartment in search of Nance. Locking over her San Quentin cell, McNamara found a blank check on a San Jose bank.

CHAPTER VI.—From the San Jose banker McNamara learned that the girl he knew as Nance Belden was Penelope Gatlin's heiress to a large fortune. The banker did not know Penelope's whereabouts. Mrs. Gatlin was now the wife of a man named Morton. McNamara ordered Detective Sergeant Flynn and Angellotti to "lay off" Lanny, whom they suspected of harboring Nance. The detectives trailed Doctor Burt, when he went to McNamara's house to treat her gunshot wound but Nance and the two men who helped her escape saw them first and fled.

CHAPTER VII.—When Lanny got home one evening she found Nance sound asleep, curled up on her guest-room bed. Several days later she had boiled exterior of Nance Belden suddenly vanished and the girl became the refined Penelope Gatlin. Her partially restored memory led her to tell Lanny of her wealthy father, Theodore Gatlin, and of her childhood in France. Fearing his detectives would locate Penelope, McNamara furnished her with tear and stink bombs and told her how to use them to escape if they did. She uses the bombs, and gets away. Flynn and Angellotti continued hot on Nance's trail—and McNamara's.

"All women are hysterical," McNamara said with conviction.

"You're a dear booby, Dan. Eight women out of ten can throw a fit of hysterics as easily as you'd break an egg, particularly if there is a man to be impressed. They never simulate hysterics to impress a woman, however, because they know better. However, there are women who have hysterics that are real, but it has been the experience of this office that most of these are just a trifle balmy—neurotics."

"Well, you get your girl a trousseau and warn her to keep away from the window and not to answer the doorbell, or do any telephoning, or leave the house until she has my permission. I don't expect she'll obey, so tonight when you go home have some hysterics to impress her."

"Dan, dear, I couldn't. I'm hard as a picnic egg. Did you stage your little comedy after leaving us last night?"

"I did—and it worked out exactly."

"Good gracious. Well, I'm busy. Good-by."

Nance Belden's personalities were a source of keen professional interest to Lanny, who regretted that for the present Doctor Burt was unable to share her observations with her. She had, as yet, had no opportunity for ascertaining anything regarding the girl's past history, but she had a suspicion that Nance had had advantages superior to most girls.

Her hands were the very first thing (with the exception of her poor wrecked nose) that Lanny had noticed. They were soft, shapely, small and well kept, decidedly not the hands of a factory girl. While her vocabulary was a trifle "salty," running at times to the idiom of the ill bred and ignorant, her voice was soft, with well bred intonations. Her clothing, on the occasion of her visit to Stephen Burt's office, had been, in Lanny's judgment, in splendid taste; rich but not flashy, up to the mode but not beyond it. Then, too, Nance had a slow, leisurely walk, she knew how to enter a room, she was sure of herself at all times without display assurance. To Lanny, the girl, in his abandoned moments, appeared to be amateurish, a bit of a showoff, unreal.

Thus far she had observed the girl only in this showoff phase of her personality. She was amazed, therefore, on coming home from the office after her conversation with McNamara, to find her a complete changeling. As she entered the house she caught the odor of cooking, and going into the kitchen, she discovered Nance, with one of Lanny's kitchen aprons on her, preparing dinner.

"Good evening, Lanny dear," she saluted her hostess. "It occurred to me it must be a very great trial to you, coming home tonight after night from the office, tired, and having to prepare dinner for yourself. I'm sure you're too tired most of the time to prepare more than a very sketchy meal, and that isn't good for you." She smiled.

"So I thought I'd have a nice dinner for you."

"Now, I call that real sweet, Nance." "My name isn't Nance, Lanny. It's Penelope."

"Penelope what?"

"Penelope Gatlin. Silly old Lanny, how could you forget?"

"You've placed your finger on my dread secret, Penelope. When I'm tired my memory fails me."

Lanny knew that during the day a psychological door had opened and Nance Belden, otherwise personality B, the abnormal, had walked through it and emerged Penelope Gatlin, or personality A, the normal. Also, she knew now that Penelope Gatlin probably had more or less amnesia for her former personality as Nance Belden. Lanny had heard Doctor Burt discuss such rare cases and she glowed with pride in the knowledge that at least he had secured a perfect specimen.

"I decided we wouldn't have broiled lamb chops, Lanny," the girl went on brightly, "so I've made a ragout."

"You mean, in good old Americanese, you've concocted an Irish stew."

"You're so amusing, Lanny. A stew, of course. The difference between a stew and a ragout is entirely geographic. A ragout in France, an Irish stew in the United States."

"Have you lived in France?"

"Eight years, Lanny. Went to school in Switzerland and learned French there."

"Are your people French?"

"I think I was there alone." The girl appeared puzzled. "I don't remember my mother, but I had a father. He was such a dear, but he's dead."

"Were you happy there?"

"No, I was perfectly miserable."

"Why?"

"Because my father wasn't with me. We'd been such pals."

"But you must have lived with somebody."

"There was Laurette, the cook, and Babette, the maid."

"Did you graduate?"

"No, I left school when father died. He was killed in a motor accident en route to Europe. I've always had a feeling he was coming over to see his Penelope. He loved me very much, Lanny. He was adorable. He used to tell me that I was all that made his life bearable. Somebody—I forgot who—told me he wasn't my real father, that I was a foundling he adopted. I wouldn't believe that at first, but when I read his will I knew it was so."

"What sort of woman was his wife—or did he have one?"

"I haven't the slightest idea, but I remember the will stated very positively that he had settled with her, that she had accepted the settlement in full satisfaction of her dower rights, and he made my income from the trust just sufficient to support me decently until I should come of age. He said in his will that he did this not because of any lack of affection for me, but because if he made me an excessive allowance, his divorced wife would have control of it during my minority. He must have despised her."

"Well, if she could have control of your income during your minority, she must have been your adopted mother."

"And you must have lived with her following the divorce. That's why you didn't see your father in Europe. You must have been there with your foster mother, Laurette, the cook, and Babette, the maid, argue an establishment. Do you remember everything that has happened to you since that day Dan McNamara brought you to Doctor Burt's office?"

"Perfectly."

"Ever have funny thoughts about it?"

"The girl stared at her shrewdly. "How strange that you should ask that question, Lanny. I do have funny thoughts. Sometimes I'm horrified at the memory and could die of shame; at other times it seems perfectly all right, but those are the times when I've been nervous and sleepless; sometimes I think there's something wrong with me, because people often refer to me as Nance Belden and to things I've done and which I know very well I haven't done. And yet it seems to me sometimes as if I had—just a wealth of memory, like an old dream. But still I'm strong and healthy."

"But a little given to spells of nervousness?"

"I'm moody." The girl seemed interested in herself to an unusual degree. "Some days I like to do things that are perfectly intolerable to me on other days. Some days I'm so democratic I could go out to dinner with a garbage man—other times I can't bear to be with anybody but nice people." She sighed and turned to inspect her savory ragout. "I wish I knew what I wanted in life and I wish I knew somebody that wanted me. Of course I can pay my way through life, but it's terrible to be lonely, Lanny."

She faced Lanny again. "Now, when I decided to cast myself on your hospitality, Lanny, it seemed to me the most natural thing in the world to do. But today I'm covered with confusion. I've deliberately imposed myself upon your peace and privacy."

"Listen here, Penny, my dear. You aren't the only lonely woman in this world. Believe it or not, the first spring buttercup isn't a bit more welcome in old lady Lanning's house than you are."

The lost one beamed upon her. "I believe that Lanny. Oh, Lanny, when I'm happy I'm so happy and when I'm wretched I'm so wretched."

"You think too much about that nose of yours, my poor child."

"The girl's hand flew to that organ (automatically, Lanny thought) as if she would hide it. "Isn't it terrible?" she quavered. "I'm so ugly nobody can ever love me."

"Quit that," Lanny commanded in her most ferocious manner. "If I hadn't found you lovable I wouldn't have you in my house this minute. I'd turn you over to Flynn and Angellotti. By the way," she continued, "how did you get that sock on the beazer?"

"Father took me to a baseball game and a long drive flew into the bleachers and struck me on the nose. Lanny, you mustn't use slang. It isn't polite."

"I wrap myself around a highball when I'm tired or want to be sociable, and I smoke cigarettes," Lanny protested. "I suppose a perfect lady wouldn't do those things, either?"

"A perfect lady may without marring her perfection, old fuss-budget. That's a matter of personal liberty, and only becomes distressing when carried to excess. But there's no excuse for a highly intelligent and cultured woman to employ the language of the streets."

"I have my human moments," Lanny excused herself meekly.

"I'll set the table in the dining room. Won't you order some flowers? And Lanny—I'll do something for you some day."

"For instance?"

"Well, have you ever been to Europe?"

"Certainly not."

"Then I'll take you."

"I accept the nomination. In return I'll do something else for you. I'll have that nose of yours spilt open, the shattered bone of the bridge scraped out and a cute little piece of pliable cartilage whittled off one of your spare ribs, and grafted into your funny nose to form a new bridge. Then the doctor will sew your nose together again over it."

"What's the difference between having a nose like a Pekinese and a makeshift with a big scar on it, I'd like to know?"

"Oh, there won't be any scar, dearie. The surgeon will cut a strip of epidermis off your forehead and without detaching it from your forehead, bring the flap down, drape it over your new scarred nose and graft it there. It will grow and cover the scar, and when everything's lovely, that skin connection with your forehead will be severed and the ragged edges trimmed and presently nature will do the rest. Six months after the operation I'll defy anybody but an expert to discover you've got a custom-made nose."

"The girl's eyes shone. "Is it true, Lanny, is it true? It's so hard to believe in miracles."

"Science pulls 'em off daily, my dear."

Nance changed the subject. "Here, here, we're gabbling like a pair of geese. The linen, woman, where's the linen? Or with your hat and coat."

While you're getting it I'll run upstairs and get your mules."

"After dinner I must do some more pumping," thought Lanny. "The information will be invaluable to Stephen. Strange case! Total amnesia sometimes, only partial amnesia at others. Dreadful mixture."

When Dan McNamara came home about midnight from the regular weekly meeting of the police commission, he found his ex-convict guest up and waiting for him. "I had two burglars here tonight, about ten o'clock, Chief," he announced.

The chief sat down and loaded his pipe. "I was expecting them, my boy. Did they ask you any questions?"

"No. They just searched the house. I don't think they touched anything except the lipstick on the bureau over there," he said.

"Did they take the lipstick?" Dan asked.

"They didn't take it, they looked at it." McNamara sighed. The case was getting a little thick for him when it became complicated with lipsticks. He went to the telephone and got Stephen Burt out of bed.

"Did a certain party, while a guest at my house, ask you to bring out a lipstick when you called in the course of your professional duties, Doctor?"

"Oh, yes."

"Thanks. Goodnight." McNamara hung up and went to the room lately occupied by Nance Belden. On the bureau he found a lipstick. "Vanity is always the undoing of a crook," he sighed and went to bed, greatly troubled in his mind at what was, to him, indubitable knowledge that Flynn and Angellotti, even though they had failed to find their quarry, must be convinced, beyond the shadow of a doubt, that he had harbored an escaped convict in his home.

He passed a sleepless night, but he did some solid thinking, so there was no lost time. He had hoped, by providing this sick convict as an excuse for Doctor Burt's nightly visits, to throw Flynn and Angellotti off the scent—and now the scent was hotter than ever.

"Now, what will they do? They're morally certain she went to Lanny's house the night she escaped and that Lanny got her out of there in the nick of time and took her here. Now that she's escaped them here they may suspect she'd doubled back to Lanny's house. Murderation! However, those two dicks will never bother her without fortifying themselves with a search warrant. They'd be too afraid of me. But with a search warrant and the girl to show for their pains they'll have me foul. I couldn't open my mouth—if they bring the girl into headquarters I'll have to give them a cheer and congratulate them."

He decided Flynn and Angellotti would sleep on their evidence and the suspicions it had aroused, compare notes in the morning and decide upon a course of action. They would have to adduce some nominal evidence to support their suspicion before the district attorney would consent to issue the search warrant, for a search warrant is not issued lightly. In the morning they would induce some stool-pigeon to tell the district attorney that he had seen Nance Belden's face at the window of Lanny's home. Possibly they might induce the patrolman on that beat to stretch the truth a little.

"I can't get Nance out of Lanny's house tonight and I can't get her out in daylight tomorrow, but I must get her out tomorrow night," he decided. "But how?"

He was at his office at eight next morning. At eight-thirty he looked into the detectives' room and saw Flynn and Angellotti in profound conference. Half an hour later he stepped out of a taxi two blocks from Lanny's house, and when the cab had disappeared, he made his way to the house and was admitted by Lanny.

"Nance has got to make a clean getaway," he assured her earnestly, "because tonight Flynn and his pal may come with a search warrant. The district attorney will probably call me up before he issues it and I'll have to tell him to go ahead and issue it, in order to allay suspicion. Now, here are half a dozen harmless hand grenades that burst on impact. Three of them are tear gas bombs and three are stink bombs."

"Now, I'll tell you exactly how they'll make the pinch. They'll not come during the day, because they'll know you aren't at home and that Nance wouldn't answer that bell anyhow. But tonight, one of them will ring the front doorbell and shove the search warrant under your nose and step inside. The other will, in the meantime, have gone around to your back door to prevent the girl's escape in that direction. There's a cement floor around your kitchen door, is there not?"

"Yes. Well, when the doorbell rings, you answer it. That will be Nance's tip to peek out the second story window and lob three bombs down on the cement beside whoever she sees standing there. They explode with a sound like a gunshot and diffuse their gas almost instantly over a considerable area. Now, whichever one goes to the back door will never be expecting a citizen to shower this sort of bomb down on him, because they are not accessible to citizens; so he will think they're electric light bulbs tossed down to scare him away. By the way, have Nance toss one electric light bulb down first and then follow with two tear bombs—here, I'll make a mark with my pencil on the tear bombs. Before he realizes what has happened he'll be weeping like Niobe and unable to see anything in the darkness."

"But bear this in mind, Lanny. He'll not desert his post. He'll hug the back door and be ready to grab her when she comes. He'll stick it out. That's the time Nance must drop a stink bomb beside him."

"Meanwhile the man in front will hear the explosions. If the one in back cries out, the one in front will figure he has been shot and will run to the back door to help him. As he opens the back door his pal will grab him. You must follow at his heels and shut and bolt the door instantly, or you'll get yours, too. There will be a momentary struggle between Flynn and Angellotti in the dark because the front door man will think he has the scoundrel that buried the bombs; and by the time they discover each other's identity, the front door man will be as sightless and ill as the back door man."

"Nance, a word to you now."

"My name is Penelope Gatlin, Dan."

"My error, Penelope, the instant you drop those first two bombs, shut down the window. And, remember, all the lights in the rear of the house and particularly in the kitchen must be turned off. When the front door man is struggling with his pal and Lanny has closed the door, her scream will be your cue to open the window again, just long enough to pay the rest of your eggs on the scrimmage. You must be dressed for the street and have some money in your pocket. Got any?"

"No."

"Here's two hundred."

"I'll send you my check. Thanks." And she took the money.

"Immediately after tossing the last of the bombs, close the window and beat it downstairs and out the front door. I'll leave a coupe, with the motor running, parked at the curb across the street. Can you drive?"

"I can drive, Dan."

"Very well, then. Climb into the car and beat it."

"Beat it where?"

"Los Angeles, San Diego, anywhere. Keep on going, and when you get there, send me a wire to the central station merely giving your address. Then lay low until somebody comes after you. Keep off the street. Lanny, you must disguise her nose. Clamp a wadding of cotton and a neat dressing over it to hide the dish in it. Any lady is liable to have an injury to her nose and wear a dressing on it. Now, is everything understood?"

Nance nodded, and Lanny's silence gave consent. "You'll probably get a whiff of what's good for Flynn and Angellotti," McNamara advised Lanny, "but you'll get over it. When you lob over the last of your rotten eggs, Penelope, do not breathe, and close your eyes tightly until you have closed the window again. Then—out of the house like a shot. This plan of mine is fool-proof if followed absolutely, but it's your for San Quentin again if it isn't, my brave lassie, and all the chiefs of police in town cannot help you then."

CHAPTER VIII

"Thank you, sir," said Nance politely, and with quiet dignity. "You are most kind to take this trouble for a stranger, and I shall never forget it." And she held out her hand.

McNamara looked in puzzlement at Lanny. "What's happened to her?" he demanded.

"I'll explain to you some time. You're a brilliant chief of police and you've figured everything out to a gnat's eyelash for Penelope, but what's going to happen to me?"

"The concoction of the plan I've just outlined has given me brain fog, Lanny. It's cost me a night's sleep. I don't know what's going to happen to you and I don't care much. You're a smart woman, and if you can't figure a way out of your end of the mess don't call on me for help."

"I wish I could relish that compliment," Lanny retorted dryly. "However, if you think I'm not going to laugh myself sick over this you're a poor judge of women. Good-by, you old crook, and God bless you. Kiss him, Penelope."

A becoming modesty caused the girl to hesitate just a little, then she came to the chief and implanted a most ladylike kiss on his blue jowl. "You're very kind, Mr. McNamara," she assured him again.

"Criles," he muttered and went off.

Dan McNamara's estimate of the ability of Detective Sergeants Flynn and Angellotti did them no injustice; indeed, they proved even smarter than their chief credited them with being. Angellotti's adventure with Dan McNamara they passed over as an unavoidable accident; Angellotti was certain McNamara had not recognized him. He felt certain McNamara had no suspicion that his house was under surveillance, although Flynn had mental reservations on that point, for the Irish are a psychic race.

After watching Doctor Burt enter and leave the chief's house on Thursday night, when they knew the chief would not be home until midnight, they decided to investigate. The unlocked cellar door gave them pause; Flynn whispered that he was always suspicious of things that came too easy. They crept upstairs and found Dan McNamara's ex-convict guest reading in bed. Both detectives recognized him, so while Angellotti guarded him Flynn made a hurried but thorough search of the premises. They were not in the house more than five minutes.

"We've been like two pups, chasing our tails," Angellotti complained when they met at their car. "The chief's up to his old tricks, babying a convict with the con, and that's the bird Doctor Burt is calling to treat."

"The girl's been there. Just the same, Amadeo, my boy. There was a lipstick on the bureau and that's something old lady McNamara don't use. And I found a roll of adhesive, the heel of a roll of bandage and a soiled sheet with some bloodstains on it in the dirty clothes basket in the bathroom."

Angellotti was convinced. "Where did she go?"

"She might have doubled back to that old nurse's house again, but I doubt that, because she knows that's risky."

"Well, let's give Miss Lanning's house a prowl, anyhow."

Flynn was one of those hearty fellows who will try anything twice, so they went immediately to Lanny's house. The lights in front were out when they arrived, so Flynn pussy-footed to the rear of the cottage to see if any lights were lighted there. Finding none, he listened for possible voices. Hearing none, he cautiously lifted the lid off Lanny's garbage can and bent his flashlight on it. He was rewarded for his courage by finding a stained bandage with clipped adhesive tape clinging to it. This tell-tale evidence he carried around to Angellotti; they entered their car, drove a block and inspected the clue in the light of the dash lamp. Then they silently shook hands.

"Nothing is ever lost if you know where it is," Flynn rejoiced. "I'm going to get my missus a winter coat with my half of the reward. We'll bone the district attorney for a search warrant tomorrow, and tomorrow night when the old lady gets home, we'll make the pinch."

"Shall we pinch her as an accessory?"

"Amadeo, my boy, unless you're looking hard for something, it's a mistake to see too much or know too much. This Lanning woman is a friend of the chief's. As far as the public ever need know we picked the girl up on the street."

Angellotti nodded his acquiescence; they got the search warrant on the strength of that soiled bandage, and at nine o'clock that night arrived in their car. Flynn went to the back door and posted himself there; and Angellotti rang the front doorbell. A light was switched on in the hall presently, and Lanny, dressed for the street, opened the door six inches. Angellotti had his foot in it in a flash.

"Detective Sergeant Angellotti of the central station, Miss Lanning. I have here a search warrant, giving me legal right to search your house and secure the person of Nance Belden, an escaped convict from San Quentin penitentiary. Read it an' weep!"

"You take your big fat foot out of my door and stay outside until I've read this purported search warrant or I'll shoot your foot off," Lanny informed him coldly. Angellotti withdrew his foot promptly, Lanny closed the door, and he could see her faintly through the curtained glass, reading.

NOTICE OF THE HEARING ON PETITION TO DETERMINE HEIRSHIP

In The Probate Court Of Latah County, State Of Idaho
In The Matter Of The Estates Of Daniel Cauder and Mary Cauder, Both Deceased.
NOTICE is hereby given that Wm. Kauder, the only child of the above named decedents, Daniel Cauder and Mary Cauder, has filed his petition in the above entitled court alleging that said Daniel Cauder died on the 10th day of June, 1900, in Latah County, State of Idaho, and that said Mary Cauder died on the 15th day of August, 1915, in said Latah County, State of Idaho, and that they died seized of the following described community real property, to-wit:

The Southwest quarter of the Northwest quarter (SW $\frac{1}{4}$ NW $\frac{1}{4}$) Section Fourteen (14) Township Thirty-eight (38) North, of Range One (1), West Boise Meridian, in Latah county, state of Idaho.
That said petitioner, as sole surviving child of the said decedents, has an interest in the said described land as an heir of the above named decedents; and said petitioner prays that the court by its decree determine the time of the death of each decedent, the heir, or heirs at law, the degree of kinship to the decedents and the right of descent of the real property above described; And all persons interested in said estates, or in either of said estates, both creditors and heirs, are hereby notified that the court has fixed Friday, the 18th day of December, 1936, at 10 o'clock a. m., of said day, at the courtroom of said court, at the courthouse at Moscow, Latah county, state of Idaho, as the time and place for hearing said petition, when and where any person interested may show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of said petition should not be granted.
Dated this 16th day of November, 1936.

L. G. PETERSON,
Probate Judge.

WE NEED MORE CONTENTED COWS
HAROLD THOMAS, Editor

EDITORIAL

Well, Folks—Only a few more days left until Christmas—or so it seems anyway—for time does fly—and money too. We all need money for Christmas shopping—so why not cash in on the money your cows are capable of producing via our cream check route. Try it for yourself. It's so easy—Does our butter appear on your table? If not we invite you to try it. It's delicious flavor and sweet fresh odor will convince you that it's the butter you should use. Try it.

Christmas Bazaar

In the thriving town of Southwick, Nestled in among the hills, The ladies have been busy, Making furbelows and frills.

For a great event that is coming On the 4th day of December, This little note is sent to you To help you to remember.

It will be in the gymnasium And a program will be given, Be sure you all come early, As its going to start at seven.

There will be fancy work a-plenty For the dresser, table, bed, And no doubt you can find something That will do for Cousin Ned.

And the aprons made so dainty, Some are useful, some are not,

And a few little quilted lifters To handle kettles when they're hot.

One nice comfort has been made, Just the thing you need the most, On these chilly winter evenings, It will keep you warm as toast.

And the children are not slighted, There will be some Christmas toys, Something for the little babies, Something for the girls and boys.

And when all the gifts are auctioned We will then start selling pies. For we know you will enjoy them, Before saying your, "Good-Byes."

So the ladies ask you kindly, At their bazaar to have a look, Bring your wife and all your family, Don't forget your pocket book. —Southwick Ladies Aid
