COMMERCIAL CLUB HOLDS INTERESTING MEETING

The Kendrick Commercial club held its regular monthly meeting Monday night in Fraternal Temple—and a right interesting meeting it was too, for there were several things taken up and discussed at length that were of vital interest to this community and it is well and fitting that 25 people were present to take part in the deliberations.

The first thing on the program was a splendid chicken dinner served by Mrs. Paul Lind and Mrs. Edgar Long, after which the regular business of the club was taken up. The reading and approval of the minutes of the previous meeting was had, after which N. E. Walker was asked for a report on the progress of the Cedar creek road work. He stated that the work is progressing as rapidly as possible under the circumstances. The project called for 100 men per day, when the most they have had at any one time was 49. However, the grading and back-filling is all taken care of with the exception of about a mile and a half. This will be accomplished as soon as possible and then the work of graveling will be commenced.

Mr. Walker also stated that the government had asked for an outline of projects covering a six-year period and that the Latah County Planning board had gone into the matter, approved the projects and had sent their report to the proper authorities. The planning board included several projects that directly affect the Kendrick community and all will be for the betterment of roads, schools, and those who need work.

The question of asking the village council to get in touch with the Vollmer estate in regard to the preservation of the hill to the south of town was taken up and discussed at length. The hillside belongs to the Vollmer estate and, so far as the estate or any one else is concerned, there is little value to it, but to Kendrick it is worth more than to anyone else, for if the fine evergreens should be removed or burned over, it would spoil one of the scenic beauties of our little town. N. E. Walker was appointed a committee of one to take the matter up with the village council and, with them, try and secure possession of the strip of land for the village, in order that it may be protected as a beauty spot, and even looking toward the day when it might be made into a beautiful little park.

Supt. James M. Lyle, Jr., chairman of the Educational committee, reported that our schools had been going along very nicely, but that an epidemic of measles might cause a curtailment in attendance at any time, as several children were already out of school from that cause.

Marvin Long, chairman of the Fish and Game committee, stated that a meeting was to be held in Moscow Tuesday night for the purpose of organizing a county game protective association, taking the place of the present Izaak Walton League, a chapter of which has been functioning in Moscow for the past several years. However, it is believed that more can be accomplished toward the preservation of fish and game in Idaho by having a state organization made up of units in the different counties of the state. The Commercial club gave Mr. Long their hearty endorsement.

Several other topics of more or less interest were discussed by the club, after which Mr. Kanikkeberg, an employee of the Farmers Bank and Mr. Stangeby of Cheney, Wn., were introduced and made a few appropriate remarks, expressing their pleasure at being present.

The question of the club again sponsoring a community Christmas tree was discussed at length and the final vote showed that the usual tree would be placed at a street intersection on Main street and that Old Santa Claus would make his regular visit and bring the youngsters a treat, such as has been done during the past six years.

The tree will be put in place just as soon as possible and the usual colored lights to guide Santa to the proper place will be strung. It is a splendid custom and the business and professional men of the town take a real pride in doing this for the kiddies—many of whom, undoubtedly, would not get a real treat were it not for good old Saint Nick's visit here each year.

First Snow Arrives

The first real snow of the winter season arrived in the Potlatch canyon last Friday night and more was placed on the ground Saturday night, amounting to perhaps three inches. A little rain followed and weather conditions have been "unsettled" ever since, and, as "XYZ", Lewiston prognosticator says: "We'll probably" have some more later on. The mercury has been standing between 30 and 40 degrees above for the past few days and here's hoping that more rain and no freeze arrives soon.

FORMER KENDRICK MAN CANADIAN WHEAT KING

Herman Trelle, operating a ranch in the Peace river country of northern Alberta near Wembley, who has regained the crown as world wheat king at the international hay and grain show at Chicago, is a former farmer of the Kendrick district. Trelle was born and raised near Kendrick, his father being among the first to file homesteads in this region.

The award gives him twin honors. He was awarded the title of "oats king" only a few days before the wheat award was announced. This is the fifth occasion that Trelle, who was well known in Idaho before removing to Alberta, has won the world wheat title. He won it after his return to competition following three years enforced idleness caused by three consecutive wins, in 1930, 1931 and 1932. He first took the title in 1926.

Trelle's sample was called reward, a hard red spring wheat originated by the cereal division of the Canadian government's experiment farm. It weighed 66.3 pounds to the bushel.

Trelle, who is 42 years old, farms a 700-acre plot 700 miles north of the international boundary in a region he calls "the land of no drought."

Beaming and confident when his victory variety of oats took the title at Chicago, he said, "My entry is the one they'll have to beat to win." It was his 16th grand championship in 11 years of competition, and the second time he has scored a "double" in the grain show, the only man ever to do it. His first was in 1926. Each time, he said, he exhibited only one sample of each.

He has won grand championships also in peas, flax, timothy and rye.

The World Does Move

Most people were wondering what the large city dailies would use to fill their space after the general election—but that's been an easy job. "Wallie" and the King of England have given not only the gossips of Europe a dainty morsel, but those "would be" 400 and less of the good old U. S. A. are just aching to get in on it. Anyway Mrs. Simpson has offered to "abdicate" the king's love, for the good of old England and, whatever else she may be or may have done, you will have to admit that she's a good sport, in the American term. But the king says no, and the dispute is still on, with Premier Baldwin holding most of the aces.

And, too, right here in our own America, Aimee has made the front page for the past several days, meaning that she can create a disturbance of her own right in her own Temple, with suits and counter suits, for slander and other things. Anyway, Aimee has done something that the King or "Wallie" never did. She made that famous dive in the ocean and came up several miles out in the desert. Come on, "Wallie," do your stuff.

Entertained Basketball Boys

Henry Emery, genial custodian of the Kendrick school building and grounds, entertained members of the basketball squad Monday evening at a waffle supper at the home of Mrs. Rose Farrington, a promise he made them if they won the game against Bovill at Bovill. We don't say that "Hank" was chief cook, by any means, but he was on the job to see that all present had all they could eat.

Those present were Frank Abrams, Willard Schoeffler, Nolan Weeks, Laurence Kuykendall, John Wallace, Tommy Keene and John Brewster Thompson. Misses Laura McGrath and Selma Hartung were also guests.

Conflict!

Life's hardest ups and downs are keeping up appearances and keeping down expenses.

INTERESTING NEWS NOTES FROM OUR PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Chemistry class is working on gas expansion problems.

The Business Principles class is studying "What To Do With Your Surplus Funds," sound investments, mortgages, stocks and bonds.

All the English classes have now changed from studying literature to grammar.

The attendance, due to a great deal of illness, has not been up to normal lately.

Grades, as a whole, for the second six week period, were greatly improved over those the first six weeks.

Those making the honor roll this six weeks' period were: Nina Slead, Willard Schoeffler, Helen Farrington, Leasel Havens, Jean Bigelow, Leo Peters, Emil Silflow Charles Bowers, Viola Schultz, Margaret Halseth, Elizabeth Nelson, Evelyn Gustafson, Phyllis Thomas, Nolan Weeks, Jean Fry, Beatrice LaHatt, Mary Belle Mattoon, Ethel Fraser, Leon Lind, Rex Blewett, Darlene Cardinal, Herman Renfrow, Erma Jones, Marie Havens and Deryl Ingle.

Those making the High honor roll were: Ruby Hecht, Lorraine Woody, Evelyn Leeper, Mary Davidson, Ariene Deobald, John Wallace, Helen Newman, Maxine Bigelow, Vern Wegner and Barbara Long.

Ray and Donald Jones, their fathers and Mr. Orr went to Moscow Saturday to see about sheep and hogs for vocational agricultural projects. They found that the hogs were under strict quarantine for intestinal flu, which seems to be very prevalent in this county.

The recreation hour last Friday was started off by playing games, and then dancing. This hour is for the purpose of taking the place of some of the high school parties and teaching the students to dance. They will probably be given about every two weeks on Friday afternoon.

HawkShaw!

HawkShaw was not printed last week due to some other last minute items. HawkShaw has been doing a little individual (not using the mails, though) bribing the last week or so. He is still waiting for that hamburger sandwich and milkshake. Just in case you think I have forgotten _____ and _____ seemed to get their excuses mixed on the eve of Dec. —. P. S.: This is just a friendly tip that unless I get the hush goods the rest will be printed with the names of all concerned.

We hear that Miss McGrath has been getting some very mushy letters. Next time don't tell so much, Teach.

That is all the HawkShaw we have room for this week—but if the dirt you have been expecting isn't here—watch for it next week. It'll be there.

Will Pare Relief Rolls

The WPA, in cooperation with the Idaho cooperative relief agency will make a survey of men and women certified for employment under the federal works program, J. R. O'Rourke, district WPA director of Coeur d'Alene, said Saturday. The survey began December 1, special investigators working out of Coeur d'Alene, Sandpoint, Moscow and Grangeville.

Only those persons actually in need will be recertified, O'Rourke said.

Returns From East

Ira Havens returned Saturday from Manchester, Iowa, where he had gone some two weeks ago with the body of his mother for burial in the family plot.

Mr. Havens stated that things are none too good back there; that corn, etc., is a good price, but that the farmers have none to sell.

We still maintain that it is a privilege, as well as a pleasure, to reside in the Potlatch section of Idaho.

Change of Delivery

Starting Monday morning of next week the town store delivery service will be at the hour of 10:30 a. m., instead of the usual 4 p. m. service.

The change was made to permit better delivery service, as this offers an opportunity for noon meal requirements and also evening shopping purchases.

Ship Car Fat Cattle

Dave Gentry and Dick Blewett shipped a car of fine fat cattle to the Spokane market Saturday evening. They drove up Sunday and returned home Monday evening.

THE SOLAR SYSTEM A VERY INTERESTING STUDY

When you look at the sun can you think of it as being a million times as large as the earth? Perhaps not. But in fact the sun is more than thirteen hundred thousand times as large as the earth. There are sometimes holes in the sun big enough to hold many worlds the size of the earth. We call these holes sun spots. During recent months many sun spots have been in evidence—more numerous, perhaps, than ever known before. They are arranged in a row more than a million miles in length.

Do you know just what is meant by the solar system? It is the sun and all the moons of its family; such as the planets and their moons, as well as the tiny little world away out between Mars and Jupiter. The planets are often called the children of the sun, and the moons the grandchildren. Nine planets have been discovered; and there are perhaps more that can not be seen with the present telescopes. Jupiter is by far the largest of the planets—being fourteen hundred times as big as the earth. It is the big bright star that shone so brilliantly in the southwest during the summer and early autumn months of this year. In a few weeks it will appear as a morning star in the east. Its brilliance is next to that of Venus. Jupiter has many moons. Some of them can be seen easily with a small telescope. A few observers, with keen eyesight, can see one or two of these moons with the unaided eye. Think how beautiful the nights must be on Jupiter, with from two to six moons shining all the time. Think how many eclipses occur there.

The brightest and most beautiful of all the planets is Venus—the bright star that lights up the sky so very prettily in the southwest this month. It is so nearly the same size as the earth that it is called the earth's twin sister. This beautiful world will continue to get brighter for several months, climbing higher and higher in the sky each evening. But it will never reach the meridian, because its path around the sun is much smaller than the earth's orbit. But after a few months it will seem to start down toward the western horizon and will soon sink down between the earth and the sun and be lost to our view for a short time. It will then soon appear as a morning star far down near the eastern horizon just before sunup.

Mars is one of the most interesting of the planets. The conditions there seem to be very much like those of the earth. The days and nights there are almost the same in length as they are on the earth; and the seasons are similar. Mars seems to be much older than the earth; and it may be that the people there are much further advanced in education than we are here. They may have larger and better telescopes than those we know. Possibly, astronomers there can see our cities, fields and rivers. Maybe they try to communicate with us, and wonder why we do not answer.

—Wickliffe R. Smith.

Election Of Officers

Canyon Chapter No. 67, O. E. S., held its annual election of officers Tuesday evening, December 8. Following is the list of officers elected:

Mrs. Isabel Higley, worthy matron; Geo. T. Davidson, worthy patron; Mrs. Eva Keene, associate matron; John L. Woody, associate patron; Mrs. Emma Davidson, conductress; Mrs. Ella Bencoter, associate conductress; Mrs. Anne Deobald, secretary; Mrs. Ruby McKeever, treasurer.

Installation of officers will be on January 12th.

Many Cases Of Measles

Dr. D. A. Christensen, local health officer, reports that 42 children were out of school Wednesday, but states that practically all school children have been exposed, so there can be no immediate use of closing the school. While some of the children are "plenty sick," no dangerous cases have been reported.

However, he states that it might be a good idea if parents kept their children at home as much as possible.

Ill At Hospital

Little Phillip Howell, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Ward Howell, is in a Lewiston hospital, ill with pneumonia. At last reports he was barely holding his own.

Many Cases Of Measles

We'd hate to guess just how many cases of measles there are in town and the surrounding country, but on Tuesday there were 42 children out of school, supposedly with the measles.

Deary closed their public school Monday for three weeks, only about a third of the students being able to attend.

No really severe cases have been reported here as yet, but it might be advisable to watch your children closely.

NO SUNDAY BEER IN LATAH COUNTY AFTER JANUARY 1

The Latah county commissioners are following in the footsteps of hundreds of other towns and counties throughout the country and have passed an order that from and after January 1, 1937, no beer will be allowed to be sold in Latah county on Sunday. The order reads:

"Sec. 5 of the Latah County beer ordinance shall be amended to read:

"Sec. 5—In all retail beer establishments of Latah County there shall be no sale nor consumption of beer from the hour of midnight until 6 a. m. of the following day and there shall be no sale nor consumption of beer from the hour of midnight on Saturday until the hour of 6 a. m. of the following Monday, nor shall beer be in sight, on the tables or bar of any parlor between the said hours."

The county auditor's office explained that the new order will affect the 1937 beer licenses, since the establishments are now operating under 1936 licenses which are good until January 1 and permit the Sunday sale of beer.

The office must collect three 1937 licenses already issued, it said, and re-issue new ones revised according to the new ruling by the commissioners.

Resentment on the part of beer dispensers of the county was already making itself evident when a number of beer parlor operators complained to county officials regarding it. No appeal to the courts has been made.

One Moscow paper states that the order does not apply to "incorporated districts."

New Troy Beer Ordinance

An entirely new beer setup for Troy was decided on when the Board of Trustees at their regular meeting held last Tuesday evening passed resolution authorizing the drafting of a new ordinance to replace the one now in force.

The new ordinance will become effective midnight, March 31, next. Under this new setup any establishment licensed to sell beer will be allowed to sell no other merchandise of any kind except tobacco products and will not be allowed to dispense any drinks other than beer, nor can any lunches be served. Pool tables and card tables may be operated. Minors will at no time be allowed in establishments operating as licensed beer halls under this ordinance.

The members of the Board feel that sufficient reasons exist to justify this drastic departure from present methods of supervising the selling of beer and earnestly hope that the change will meet with approval by the people of Troy.—Latah County Press (Troy).

Trapper Visits Kendrick

John Sumar of Myrtle was in Kendrick Wednesday on business and made his annual visit to the Gazette office.

Mr. Sumar is quite a trapper and ranges the Clearwater and its tributaries in search of fur-bearing animals. He stated that the business has been good thus far this year, he having made some splendid takes. He reports the taking of 27 coyotes in the Big Potlatch ridge section.

Death Of James Long

James E. Long, a resident of the Cedar creek section, died Monday evening, aged 70 years. Pneumonia was the immediate cause of death.

Funeral services were held at Southwick. Further particulars were unobtainable at the time of going to press.

Is Still Very Ill

Mrs. Frank Curtiss, who last week had a large carbuncle removed from the back of her neck, is still very ill at her home, requiring the services of a trained nurse.

MARKETS SHARPLY HIGHER—FEED GRAINS GOOD DEMAND

Grain markets made sharp gains during the week ended December 4, with the firm wheat situation the principal strengthening factor, according to the Weekly Grain Market Review of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics. Light domestic offerings and improved milling inquiry and active European buying of foreign wheat, advanced wheat futures to a new high for the season, while cash premiums were well maintained at most markets. Feed grains strengthened with wheat but demand was less urgent than for bread grains. Marketings were only moderate and moved readily into consuming channels.

A material strengthening in the wheat situation occurred during the first week in December. The domestic wheat crop failed to maintain its earlier favorable condition in the western portions of the belt, though light snows and rains were helpful in some sections. East of the Mississippi river, moisture is mostly sufficient for present needs and the condition remained generally good to excellent, although some complaints of dryness were received from the western Ohio valley. The crop made little growth in Missouri and practically all wheat sections were in need of moisture west of the Mississippi river in the plains and western Rocky Mountain states. Southern hemisphere crops continued to make generally favorable progress and offerings of new Argentine and Australian wheat increased.

Efforts of European countries to replenish stocks brought about an active inquiry for foreign wheat and prices at Liverpool advanced 10c to 12c per bushel. Italy continued an active purchaser of Australian, Canadian and Danubian wheat and all English traders were also reported taking large quantities. The Argentine government suspended regulations for minimum prices on 1937 crops of wheat and flax seed but maintained the minimum price for corn, equivalent to 42½¢ per bushel at current rate of exchange. Italy has recently made further reductions in the wheat tariff to the equivalent of 46¢ per bushel, as against 67¢ established following the revaluation of the currency and the previous rate of $1.07 per bushel. In addition to lowering the tariff, the scale of prices of foreign wheats was adjusted to a basis more nearly comparable with prices of domestic wheat in various provinces. With the domestic price fixed at the equivalent of $1.69, prices of foreign wheat in the main geographical groups would range from $1.75 to $1.85 per bushel.

North American shipments for the previous week totaled nearly 6,000,000 bushels with demand active both from continental and English buyers. Prices advanced sharply at Liverpool, with No. 2 Manitoba from Atlantic ports quoted at $1.37, Australian wheat for December shipment at $1.30 and Argentine Rosafe for January-February shipment at $1.15 per bushel. The strength in foreign markets was reflected in gains of 5c to 6c per bushel at Winnipeg, where No. 1 Manitoba northern was quoted at $1.13½ and Canadian western durum at $1.29½ per bushel.

Domestic cash wheat markets strengthened with futures, but were influenced also by lighter offerings and an active milling demand. Receipts at the principal winter wheat terminals totaled 1,243 cars, a decrease of about 165 cars from a week ago. Mills, shippers and storage interests were active buyers at Kansas City with heavy test weight types in best demand.

At the close of the week, No. 2 hard winter was quoted at $1.25 to $1.29. At Fort Worth No. 1 hard winter was quoted at $1.44 delivered Texas common points. Cash prices at Chicago did not follow the full advance in futures despite a good shipping business and only moderate offerings. No. 2 hard winter was quoted in that market at $1.27 to $1.30½ per bushel. Soft winter wheat gained with other types, with No. 2 red winter quoted at Chicago at $1.26 to $1.30, at St. Louis at $1.29 and at Kansas City at $1.25 to $1.27½ per bushel.

Marketings of spring wheat remained light with only 431 cars received at Minneapolis and 43 cars at Duluth. Cash prices gained about 2c per bushel more than the De-

MARKETS SHARPLY HIGHER—FEED GRAINS GOOD DEMAND

December futures, which closed December 4 at $1.34½ per bushel. Mills were active buyers, reflecting an improved flour demand. The durum market was also very sharply higher with the Duluth Deember up 8c per bushel, closing December 4 at $1.35 per bushel, while No. 2 Canadian western durum would figure about $1.83 per bushel, delivered Duluth.

Intermountain and Pacific Coast markets strengthened with the advance at eastern points, but gains were not so great, with trading on the Pacific Coast still restricted by labor difficulties. Denver mills advanced bids to $1.14 for No. 2 northern spring, FOB Colorado shipping points. Prices at Ogden advanced around 5c per bushel, with local mills bidding 89c FOB Utah-Idaho common points for No. 2 soft white, 91c for No. 2 hard white and 99c for No. 2 northern spring and No. 2 hard winter.

Quotations were largely nominal at Portland, but No. 1 soft and western white wheats were quoted at around $1.06 to $1.07 per bushel, sacked. Trading was principally in feed wheat with moderate sales reported at eastern Washington and Oregon shipping points for rail shipment to midwestern markets. Shortage of millfeeds resulted in the heavier grinding of wheat and other grains in the Pacific Northwest. At Seattle, western white was quoted at $1.04, western red at $1.05, hard winter at $1.06 and hard white (baart) at $1.10 per bushel, sacked.

California markets advanced moderately but labor difficulties restricted demand at terminals. Flour business broadened and local Bay region mills turned more to California wheat because of their inability to obtain water shipments from the northwest.

Pacific Northwestern barley markets displayed a firmer tone, reflecting the good inquiry for nearby offerings. Light supplies and relatively high prevailing prices for millfeeds and other grains were strengthening influences in the situation. Supplies of malting barley in the Pacific Northwest area were reported practically exhausted and offerings of feeding types were very light. No. 2 bright western barley was quoted at Portland December 3 at around $1.85 per 100 pounds, sacked basis.

Oats markets tended upward, reflecting a good inquiry for light offerings. Pacific Northwestern markets strengthened with heavy feedings reported at country points where locally grown oats and other feed grains were being substituted for millfeeds. Trade advices indicated a fairly good volume of oats moving from eastern Washington to middle-western drouth areas. On December 3, No. 2 white oats were quoted at Portland at $1.60 per 100, sacked basis, with only six cars arriving at Portland, most of which moved to mixed feed manufacturers.

W. W. P. CO. HAS INHALATOR AT LEWISTON OFFICE

Life saving work in the Lewiston territory will be aided by an inhalator which has been installed in the Lewiston office of the Washington Water Power company. The device was delivered this week by John B. Fiske, safety engineer, accompanied by Emil V. Olson, secretary, and Dr. F. J. Whitaker, chief of the medical staff of the Washington Water Power company employees' Aid Association.

Mr. Fiske, with Mr. Olson and Dr. Whitaker, brought the inhalator to Lewiston this week for a local demonstration of its use. Similar inhalators have been installed by the fire departments at Pullman and Moscow, and at the sheriff's office at Colfax.

"The inhalator is not a resuscitation device," states Mr. Fiske, "It is for furnishing a supply of carbon (93% oxygen and 7% carbon dioxide) in conjunction with the prone pressure method of resuscitation in cases of suspended respiration."

"It is of value in all cases of suspended respiration and of particular value in cases of asphyxiation due to carbon monoxide or other gases. Physiologists have determined that pure oxygen tends to retard breathing, but that oxygen containing a small amount of carbon dioxide will stimulate breathing."

"The inhalators purchased by the company are the H. H. inhalators developed by Doctors Henderson and Haggard of Yale in conjunction with the Mine Safety Appliances company of Pittsburgh."

"The fundamental principle of the H. H. inhalator is that its operation is governed entirely by the respiratory action of the patient. When the patient commences to breathe the carbon dioxide is effective and stimulates the respiratory action so that the number and depth of respirations increases and the patient continues to require more volume of the mixture. The limit of this increase is determined by the operator by setting the feed valve to regulate the volume which, in his judgment the patient should receive. If for any reason the volume of the mixture is insufficient, as indicated by the breathing bag, a valve automatically opens and draws in outside air which gives the patient the required volume he demands but lowers the carbon dioxide content.

"The device is an extremely simple one and can be operated by any person after a few minutes instruction. The inhalators are furnished by the company primarily for rendering aid to its employes but they are also available, at any time, for service to the public. A call to the company's office for aid will be answered promptly."

Inhalators of the same type have been installed in the company's offices at Okanogan and Ritzville, where they will be available to the public in cases of emergency.

Mail Christmas Packages Early

Postmaster C. H. Daugherty has received instructions from Washington, D. C. to instruct all to mail their packages early and to wrap them well, using strong paper and heavy twine. Also be sure and write their name and address in the upper left-hand corner of the package so, in case of non-delivery, you will be notified of such fact. Also be sure and print, the name of the person to receive the package plainly. It is a good idea to write a double address—one on the box, or inside wrapper, and another on the outside, in case the other wrapper is accidentally torn off. If the package contains anything fragile or perishable, it should be so marked, to insure careful handling by mail clerks.

You should always insure all packages of value, which guarantees you a receipt in case of loss. The post-office department is responsible to a certain sum. It also insure better delivery than does just straight postage. There is also a special delivery service on parcel post packages, information regarding which will be cheerfully given at the local post-office.

There is also air-mail service for parcels as well as first-class letters and will insure your package getting there on time. Information regarding this may also be secured at the post-office.

But, above all, wrap your packages well and address them plainly and put your own address on the upper left-hand corner.

COMMERCIAL CLUB HOLDS INTERESTING MEETING

It is just such meetings as these, with old-fashioned round-table discussion that make for a better feeling among the business and professional men of the town, and it is the proper place to bring your ideas that they may be taken up and discussed by those who have the real interests of the town and surrounding territory at heart. It is not a place to vent personal spleen against some one for a real of fancied wrong, but if you have a suggestion that you think would be of benefit to the community or the surrounding territory, bring it to the Commercial club and it will be given every consideration.

Another "Double-Header"

From the number of "double-header" picture shows that are being put on at the Kendrick Theatre one would imagine they are in a much larger place. This Friday-Saturday nights picture fans will have the opportunity of seeing "Too Many Parents" and another good old Western—"Comin' Round the Mountain," with Gene Autrey, the singing cowboy.

The first picture is built around five youngsters who are attending military school because, principally, they have no real homes to stay in. Their parents are separated for one cause or another and the youngsters are put there where the parents won't have to be bothered with them. There is a world of pathos in this picture that will give many parents much to think about—as well as some youngsters, yet there is a vein running through it that will give everyone something to laugh at as well as cry.

Of the latter, "Comin' Round the Mountain," all lovers of the great wide-open spaces and good western drama will have something worth looking at.

You'll enjoy both of them, as well as the other features to be shown.

Statistician Kept Busy

The wife of a statistician persuaded her husband to stay at home one Saturday afternoon and spend the time with his three small and energetic children. He was quite willing to do this as he said he wanted a chance to do some reading. When his wife returned home she was handed a paper on which her husband had set down these facts:

- Dried tears—9 times.
- Tied shoes—13 times.
- Served water—18 times.
- Toy balloons purchased—3 per child.
- Average life of balloon—12 seconds.
- Cautioned children not to cross street—21 times.
- Children insisted on crossing street—21 times.
- Number of Saturdays father will do this again—0.

THE STORY

CHAPTER VIII.—Susan Engelbright, known as "Sapphire Susie," who had served a term for blackmail, appeared and asked McNamara's protection from Flynn. She admitted that Nance had gotten her three 12-carat sapphire rings out of hock after she had helped in her plans for escape. McNamara learned definitely that Nance (or probably Penelope) had sailed for France. He also discovered he was in love with Lanny, and learned that "Nance" was living in Paris as Penelope Gatlin. Doctor Burt had been treating Mrs. Rudolph Merton, and McNamara discovered that this woman was Penelope's foster-mother, remarried.

"Come in," she invited—and at that moment the electric light bulb tossed out the upper window by Nance exploded with a loud report. "What's that?" Angellotti cried, instantly alert. A still louder explosion reverberated in the back yard; then the voice of Flynn crying: "Hey, stop, or I'll shoot."

"Tried slipping her out the back door, eh?" Angellotti exclaimed, and dashed through the house, with Lanny at his heels. As he went out the kitchen door, Lanny slammed and bolted it behind him, and then, even as Dan McNamara had predicted, nature took her course. Nance dropped the remainder of the bombs and came dashing down the stairs. "Good-by, Lanny, darling," she cried happily. "We'll meet again." Lanny switched off the hall light, and Nance was through the front door and gone. Across the street two coupes stood at the curb, the motors of both turning over slowly.

Alternately the girl's finger was pointed at each car. "My—mother—told me—to—take—this—one," she murmured, and when, through the aid of this childhood formula, she had made her decision, she leaped into the coupe of Messrs. Flynn and Angellotti and went rapidly away. Lanny, watching her from the darkened doorway, saw that she had taken the wrong car, but was afraid to cry out and warn her. So she did the next best thing. She locked her front door behind her, climbed into the other car and drove down town to a late motion picture show. She carried the search warrant with her and while enjoying the show tore it into little bits.

Of the weeping, the groaning, the burning sensations in the eyelids, the bewilderment, the groping, vomiting, cursing and despair of Messrs. Flynn and Angellotti nothing need be said. Suffice that Angellotti felt his way out of the gassed area and about two minutes after Lanny's departure, stationed himself on her front steps, while the valiant Flynn, dying a thousand deaths, stuck manfully at his post, leaning up against the kitchen door, enduring for duty's sake. Convinced they had Nance Belden cornered, they waited for the night wind to dissipate the gas. Angellotti ceased to weep about half an hour after escaping from the gassed area, but continued to gag for an hour. About ten-thirty he was able to see, so he rang Lanny's bell repeatedly, but received no answer. Then he noticed that their car was missing, so he summoned the martyred Flynn around front and told him the worst.

"Don't speak to me," Flynn commanded passionately. "I'm dead! Hunt up an all-night drug store an' phone for a taxi."

"This," Angellotti hissed, "is Dan McNamara's work. Where would they get

"Yes," a Garden Plain girl was saying, "it was a case of love at first sight."

"Then why didn't you marry him?"

"I saw him several times afterward," she explained.

the bombs if he didn't swipe 'em out of the police arsenal?"

Flynn commenced to sob as he considered the barren fruits of his enormous sacrifice.

"Amadeo, swear to me, by our common faith, that, come what will, blow high, blow low, come sickness or sorrow, happiness or health, you'll never lay off this job until we've landed that—that huzzy."

"Right! I swear," Angellotti's voice trembled with the sincerity of his purpose.

The respective wives of the worthy pair telephoned down to the chief of the detectives next morning and informed him that their husbands were confined to bed with influenza. It might not be amiss, also, to state that Lanny came home in a taxi about twelve-thirty, and finding the front door free of Angellotti, and the neighborhood ozone quite restored to normalcy, retired to her bed and passed almost at once into dreamless and untroubled sleep.

It was not a police car in which Nance had escaped, but the private vehicle of Detective Sergeant Flynn, and its loss troubled him until the car was found, abandoned, out in the Mission, about twenty-four hours later. A glance at the speedometer comforted Flynn. The car had been driven six miles. In company with Angellotti (both now happily recovered from their terrible experience) he drove in the same car from Lanny's house, via the most direct route, to the point where a patrolman had picked up the car; thence via the route followed by the patrolman when he came off duty and drove the car to the central station and reported it. The mileage was six and two-tenths miles!

"She's holed up within a block or two of where she left the car," Flynn declared.

"Not such a cold trail, after all," Angellotti exclaimed. "We'll just have to patrol the neighborhood in our off moments. I'm sure the girl doesn't know she swiped your car, and that she gave us a clue to follow her."

"If crooks didn't make mistakes and give us the breaks, my boy, you and I wouldn't be where we are," Flynn reminded him. "I think it might be a good idea to interview the druggist in the neighborhood and see if she's been in to buy a new lipstick."

A round of the neighboring drug stores, however, proved barren of a new lead, and as they had other matters claiming their attention, they were forced to abandon the search that day.

Dan McNamara was much too intelligent to make inquiries of the assistant district attorney who had issued the search warrant, but when informed that Flynn and Angellotti were down with flu he called up Lanny at Stephen's office, and received a meticulous report. "You say the girl fled in the car my dicks arrived in?" he queried. "That's terrible. A description of the car must have been broadcast to all outlying police and the surrounding country stations immediately by Flynn and Angellotti, and Nance will be picked up somewhere down state."

"We've done our damndest," Lanny replied cheerfully. "Angels can do no more. I borrowed the car you left out front. It's in a garage. I'll send you the claim check."

For a week, the chief waited for news of Nance Belden, but no news came through beyond some gossip around the central station that the car had been driven but three miles and then abandoned—for which evidence that the Almighty was still on his side the worthy fellow was grateful.

So Nance was still in the city! McNamara's mind worked so automatically he did not even have to tell himself that, undoubtedly, she had taken sanctuary within a short distance of the spot where she had abandoned Flynn's car, nor did he have to remind himself that Flynn and Angellotti would come to the same conclusion. He had no difficulty in ascertaining the spot where the car had been recovered.

"Folsom street and Sixteenth, eh?" he reflected. "Residential-flat buildings and cheap apartment houses, cheap rooming houses and working-men's hotels. No, she wouldn't go to one of those. Not what she is—she has class—and she has two hundred dollars in her possession. She's holed up with a friend. What friend? Why, Ella Cates, of course."

He had already secured Ella Cates' address from the banker in San Jose. However, he realized it would not be wise to call upon her and run the risk of having Flynn or Angellotti run across him in the neighborhood or see him entering Ella Cates' house. The obvious thing, therefore, was to cast about for a job in another part of the city and see that both detectives were assigned to it. If he sent them out of the city for a day or two they might suspect his purpose and have some other dick friend of theirs shadow him during their absence.

While he was considering where he could dispose of them, the president of the Security Trust company in San Jose rang up.

"Miss Penelope Gatlin has just been in the bank, Chief," he told McNamara. "She has purchased a letter of credit for ten thousand dollars and has withdrawn in cash the remainder of the funds on deposit to the credit of her checking account, amounting to eleven hundred dollars."

"Is she in the bank now?"

"Yes."

"Have one of your clerks follow her. Give him some expense money—I'll be responsible for its repayment. And when you get his report please telephone me."

At three-thirty the banker telephoned again. "She purchased a ticket to San Francisco on one of the buses leaving here at three-fifteen. She spent two hours shopping."

The buses, McNamara knew, entered the city via Mission street, the bus depot was at Fifth and Mission streets. Ella Cates lived on Howard street, between Fifteenth and Sixteenth. Howard street runs between Mission and Folsom—and Flynn's car had been found abandoned at Sixteenth and Folsom. Nance was smart. She had left the car a block from Ella Cates' home and walked there. McNamara reasoned the incoming bus would drop the girl off at Sixteenth and Mission streets—a regular stop—and she would then make her way to the Cates woman's house.

He glanced at his watch. He had an hour and a half to intercept her; for that hour and a half he must have Flynn and Angellotti in another section of the city. To his annoyance he discovered they were out on a detail, so he decided he would have to risk it, called a taxi and drove to Ella Cates' address. He discovered it to be a cheap wooden apartment house, but the directory in the vestibule gave him no information as to which apartment Ella Cates lived in, so he rang the landlady's bell and the door opened to admit him. To his inquiry regarding Mrs. Cates, he was informed that she had moved to parts unknown a week before, nor could his informant give him any clue to aid him in discovering her.

As he came out of the apartment house he glanced warily around and was amused to observe Detective Angellotti leaning against a cigar stand across the street. He was certain the detective had recognized him, for Angellotti immediately turned his back. The chief walked up to Mission street, boarded a street car and was at the bus terminus two minutes before the bus on which Nance had left San Jose rolled in. But Nance was not among the passengers that alighted.

McNamara chuckled. Flynn and Angellotti would waste a great deal of time watching that apartment house in vain. Nance, discovering Ella Cates had moved, had sought quarters elsewhere. What puzzled McNamara, however, was the girl's failure to communicate with him or Lanny; and he knew now that she did not intend to. The fact that she had purchased a letter of credit was proof that she intended leaving the country, and the more the excellent fellow contemplated this impending move the more inclined was he to regard it as a not unmixed blessing.

The more he thought the matter over, the more inclined did he become to take a practical and policeman-like view of the situation. While Nance remained in San Francisco she would be a constant menace to himself and Lanny; if captured she might, during one of her uncontrolled moments, consider it a great joke to tell the world how she had been enabled to escape capture so long.

"I can't baby the world," he decided. "I'll let her go. She'll probably live abroad, and when her letter of credit is gone she may remember who she is long enough to draw more checks. I can always get a line on her through the bank, and if Steve and Lanny still insist on salvaging this nut I'll tell them where to find her. Me, I'm through. If I keep this pace up I'll be as big a nut as she is."

There is more than a modicum of truth in the ancient adage, "Out of sight, out of mind." Dan McNamara lived a very full life; and when Nance Belden had definitely passed beyond his ken and he knew himself safe at last from the prying of Messrs. Flynn and Angellotti into his private affairs, he forgot the girl, for pressing matters of great importance claimed his attention and he required more first-class assistance than he was receiving. He resolved, therefore, to give Flynn and Angellotti a week in which to make up their minds they had lost the trail; then to call them in.

On the sixth day, however, he received information that the doughty pair were still as busy as two pups with a feather duster. A beautiful lady called on him at his office and told him so.

"And who might you be?" he demanded.

"I'm Susan Engelbright."

"I am not aware that I have the pleasure of your acquaintance, Miss Engelbright."

"You haven't. I was sent up from Oakland."

"Oh! Allas Sapphire Susie! I've heard of you lately."

"Perhaps. I hooked three twelve-carat sapphire rings to raise money, and the papers called me Sapphire Susie after that."

"I see you got them out of hock again, Susie."

The girl nodded. "Nance Belden got them out for me."

"Part of the bargain for smuggling that letter out of San Quentin for her, I suppose."

"Never mind what it was for," Sapphire Susie smiled archly and unafraid. "I earned it and she kept her word."

"Check or cash?" McNamara was frightened. If Sapphire Susie had been given a check, then she knew Nance Belden's real name and the name of her bank. And that would be fatal.

"I don't know. I gave her the pawn tickets and she got back the rings. I don't know just how."

"When?" He was relieved.

"A week ago tomorrow."

"And you say Detective Sergeant Flynn has been giving you a bad half hour?"

"Yes, he has."

"Well, that's his business. Nance Belden escaped from San Quentin and naturally he's interested in apprehending her. You were recognized by the guard at the main gate two weeks before Nance escaped. Miss Lanning, a friend of the Belden girl, had visited the prisoner that day, and since Miss Lanning was the only visitor Nance Belden had in San Quentin, naturally she was suspected of carrying a letter for delivery to the men who helped Nance escape. You rode down to Greenbrae with Miss Lanning, and she slipped the letter to you, of course. Flynn knows that. But why come to me with your tale of woe?"

"I've run straight since getting out of the pen. I served my time and I want to be let alone—that's why! Flynn told me that if I didn't come through and tell him where he could find Nance Belden he'd see to it that something nasty happened to me. I don't know where Nance Belden is. And I want protection from Patrick Flynn."

"You seem pretty sure of me, don't you?"

"Well, Nance told me that you were one human being. And I called on Miss Lanning last night to tell her to warn Nance that the dicks were after her, and Miss Lanning told me to see you about it. She said you'd see I got a square deal."

"She did so, now? How did Miss Lanning treat you otherwise?"

"She kissed me and gave me a hundred dollars and told me to be as good as I could. The old girl is sure a darling."

"Did you ask her for the hundred?"

"Of course not."

The chief eyed her owlishly, for he distrusted Sapphire Susie and wondered if she might not be working in the interests of Flynn and Angellotti.

"This is interesting," he admitted heavily. "Of course I only keep in touch with the upper office through the captain of detectives. If he set Flynn on this job he should have interviewed you a couple of weeks ago. Seems to me he has overlooked a good bet. If he'd had you under surveillance a week ago he'd have picked up Nance Belden when she came to you to deliver the rings. Flynn's a crackerjack detective," he added sadly, "but this looks as if he's slipping."

"That bird don't slip very far, take it from me, Chief. He met me on the street the day before yesterday and noticed I was wearing my big ring and my earrings. 'Hello, kid,' he says, 'I see you got your sapphires on again.' I says to him, 'Fall dead, you bum,' and walked on. And the next night he came up to my room. 'Nance Belden got them sapphires out of hock for you, Susie, my dear,' he says kindly. 'I want that trail. Where is she?'"

"And you wouldn't tell him, even if you could?"

"That's a fact. I wouldn't snitch on her."

"You wouldn't expect me to interfere in the work of a detective sergeant when he appears to be doing a good job, would you, Susie? But I give you my word, Susie, that if you run straight in this city I'll see to it that you're not harassed. Of course you helped Nance Belden to escape from San Quentin, and I know it, but I can't prove it; if I could I'd put you in the birdcage this minute. And I'll not put Flynn off the case, although if he gets too rough I'll stop him."

"He's got me scared to death," Sapphire Susie declared, and commenced to weep a little; whereat McNamara realized she had been really frightened. She shook his hand warmly, thanked him and departed.

For several minutes McNamara sat thinking, a smile, faintly tender, illuminating his rugged countenance. So Lanny had kissed Sapphire Susie and given her a hundred dollars and begged her to be a good girl in the future. What a rare good sport Lanny was! And how good God had been to all concerned! In their pursuit of Nance, Flynn and Angellotti had followed such a hot trail they had forgotten Sapphire Susie was a pal of Nance's, but afterwards, when the trail grew cold, they had suddenly remembered her.

That Flynn was a marvel, and McNamara sighed to think the fellow could not be promoted instantly. In all probability he had not at first connected Nance Belden with the glory of Susie's sapphires. Undoubtedly he had jumped to the conclusion that the girl had been up to her old trick of blackmailing some wealthy and socially prominent masculine jackass. So he had looked up her record in the police files. Here he had discovered something that must have convinced him of Susie's total innocence of sapphires during her trial; certainly she had not carried them to San Quentin with her, and the obvious conclusion was that she had pawned them to raise money to pay her attorney. In the hope of discovering the identity of Susie's latest victim (who, he assumed, had redeemed them for her) Flynn had thereupon made a round of the pawnshops and located the one from which the jewels had lately been redeemed; from the pawnbroker he had secured a description of the one who had redeemed them. No pawnbroker would be likely to forget Nance Belden's nose!

McNamara shuddered. If Nance should visit Sapphire Susie now, she would undoubtedly walk straight into the arms of the waiting Flynn or Angellotti.

Well, Nance Belden had stolen a dozen pairs of silk hose, but apparently Penelope Gatlin paid her debts. The chief wondered if he had loaned Nance Belden or Penelope Gatlin two hundred dollars, for of course they were two separate and distinct personalities inhabiting the same body. If Nance Belden had accepted the loan, then McNamara could kiss the money good-by. If, on the other hand, Penelope Gatlin had accepted it, then, some day, when Nance had changed places with Penelope, he would get it back. Well, he could trace her progress through the world by the drafts she would give him that information.

He took down the telephone and called the bank. Yes, a draft had just come in. Drawn for four hundred and thirty-five dollars in favor of the French line, dated three days previously at New York. It had come across the continent by air mail. McNamara thanked the president of the bank and called up the French line's San Francisco office. After some difficulty he discovered that four hundred and thirty-five dollars was payment of one first cabin passage to Havre and that the Ile de France had sailed from New York during the past three days.

Instantly Dan McNamara shot a straight telegram to police headquarters in New York, requesting that the passenger list of the Ile de France be checked to see whether Nance Belden or Penelope Gatlin had taken passage on her. Four hours later he received a reply to the effect that Nance Belden was not aboard but that Penelope Gatlin was.

"Nothing is lost if you know where it is," McNamara decided happily, and sent a cable to the prefect of police at Havre, requesting him to pick up Penelope Gatlin on her arrival at that port, shadow her and report by cable, collect the girl's destination, the names and addresses of those who should meet her and any other information that would aid in keeping track of the girl.

The following day McNamara sent for Detective-Sergeants Flynn and Angellotti. As they ranged themselves, more or less at attention, in front of his desk, the chief leaned back in his chair and bent upon the pair a long, severe and penetrating look. They grew a little fidgety before he spoke.

"Well, boys, how are your private affairs prospering?"

Both shrugged, unwilling to be definite.

"They are unprosperous," the chief challenged, "so I have called you in to express the hope that you are now quite willing to abandon your private practice and return to work for the city and county of San Francisco. You draw salary from the taxpayers, you know. I may have been mistaken, Angellotti, but I thought I saw you out in Mission recently when you were supposed to be working on that racketeer killing over in North Beach. However, I'll overlook that on the assumption that you permitted yourself to be led astray by Flynn. Flynn, you lay off Sapphire Susie until that enterprising young woman does something you can pin on her. Then bring her in."

"She's done something and I'll pin it on her yet," Flynn growled, "and you know what it is." Flynn, being Irish, was unwilling that his chief should regard him as deficient in intelligence and enterprise.

"We understand each other thoroughly, Flynn. You've been after that Belden girl and you've made a mess of it." He opened his desk drawer and drew out two envelopes. One was addressed to Flynn and the other to Angellotti and both envelopes bore the return address of a prominent New York hotel, but were neither stamped nor postmarked. "These two envelopes came in a large envelope addressed to me," McNamara explained. "They're sealed." He handed each detective his letter and watched as they opened them and drew forth typewritten letters and two hundred and fifty dollars in bills. Flynn's letter was, undoubtedly, a carbon copy of Angellotti's.

Flynn perused his letter and handed it to the chief, who read:

"Dear Mr. Flynn:

"You poor dear, you have worked so hard and so intelligently and in such dreadfully hard luck that my heart goes out to you. You were working for the reward, of course—no doubt because you needed the money. You and Mr. Angellotti would have had to divide two hundred and fifty dollars had you recaptured me, but just to prove I'm a sport and not holding any mean little grudge, I'm sending you each two hundred and fifty dollars. Please be good and try to forget all the unpleasant incidents. You will never get me now, so do give up your attempts, like good boys."

The letter was unsigned.

"How much did you get, Angellotti?" McNamara queried softly.

"Two fifty, Chief."

"Santa Claus has been good to you two, hasn't he? Well, are you both willing to go back to your regular jobs now?"

Flynn threw the money on the chief's desk. "We swore an oath—" he began, but McNamara cut him short.

"So have I!" he reminded Flynn fiercely.

"We know every move you've made in this case," Flynn shouted.

"And I knew every move you were going to make before you made it." Angellotti tucked his present in his pocket. "Come on, Flynn," he urged.

"I can't be called off for money," Flynn persisted stubbornly.

Dan McNamara swept the money on his desk into the drawer. "The widows and orphans of the Policemen's Benevolent and Protective association will be glad to get this. On your way—out and your oath."

Flynn sighed deeply and went out. Fifteen minutes later he came back and said humbly: "Chief, I've changed my mind."

"Alas! McNamara was Irish, too. He glanced at the clock. "You're fifteen minutes late, so I'll fine you two hundred and fifty dollars for tardiness and impudence and disloyalty and house-breaking."

"I'll get you for this, McNamara!"

"I don't think so. My advice to you, Pat, Flynn, would be to quit monkeying with TNT. I've known detective-sergeants to be taken for a ride."

"Threatening me, eh?"

"Not at all. I wouldn't harm a hair of your red head—and by the way, red hair in the Irish is a sign that they breed back to the Danes and Swedes. A pure-bred Irishman would know enough to lay off a girl with powerful and implacable friends. All you were after was a hundred and twenty-five dollars—half the state reward for recapturing that girl—and when she sends you double that you're not sport enough to meet her half-way."

"I took an oath," Flynn mumbled.

"You should have taken a physic."

"Well, I did take an emetic. Chief, I'll never forgive you those tear and stink bombs."

"Well, you shadowed my house and entered it unlawfully."

"Well, I found a lipstick—"

"Belonged to the nurse I had looking after a sick friend of mine," the chief lied glibly.

But Flynn only grinned ferociously.

"I found stained bandages, too."

"Well, the pot can't get nowhere by calling the kettle black," McNamara decided. "Clear out!"

"Give me the money and I'll lay off."

But Dan McNamara shook his head. "I know your kind, Pat. There's no sense wasting good money on you because you won't stay bought. Clear out, I tell you."

So Flynn cleared out, carrying with him infinitely more respect for his chief than he had heretofore entertained. Well, some day he'd collect heavy interest on that two hundred and fifty dollars.

The last patient had left Stephen Burt's office for the day and the ever watchful Lanny had locked the office door.

"Tired, Stevie?" she queried anxiously, as he loaded his pipe.

"No, of course not," he replied abruptly. "What have I done to be tired?"

"Well, you had another session with that terrible Mrs. Merton."

"She doesn't weary me any more. She merely excites my sympathy. Still, sleepless, of course, and still bothered about her poor devil of a husband. She's had detectives on his trail for a month. They've cost her ten dollars a day each and they haven't discovered anything to Merton's discredit."

"It's about time for Mrs. Merton to commence hearing voices of sorts," Lanny commented dryly. "Highball, Stevie?"

"Yes, thank you, Lanny," he said, and deluged Lanny with his sunny smile. "Yes, Mrs. Merton is hearing voices. Her first husband who is dead keeps whispering through space to her. He's trying to tell her how sorry he is. I understand he made a dirty will."

"He would—if he had any common sense. What a poor, beaten devil Merton is! He hasn't the courage of a mouse."

"What can he do, Lanny? His wife is unbalanced, but if he swears out a warrant charging her with insanity, she'll snap out of her lunacy. Mrs. Merton isn't sufficiently insane to be incarcerated. And she's a beautiful woman, well-to-do, respectable. Merton couldn't get to first base on an insanity warrant."

"Then why doesn't he divorce her on grounds of mental cruelty?"

"The man's chivalrous and profoundly sympathetic. Besides, he hasn't any witness to prove a charge of mental cruelty. And he can't run away from her, because he has a thriving business he may not abandon. I told her again today not to come to my office any more; that I could do nothing for her; that she was a nuisance—and to try some other doctor. She went out in a rage."

An Untangled (?) Mess

Well, things seem to be getting somewhat straightened out both in the United States and England, since the king has as good as told some of his old bald-headed advisors what they can do about he and "Wallis."

And, also there seems to be a straightening out of things on this side of the big pond. Jimmy Roosevelt, son of Franklin D. and Eleanor, is going to marry a DuPont, of powder fame, and the President's son-in-law is going to publish the re-opened Seattle P.-I., with his wife as one of the contributors. And, it is supposed, Eleanor will also have her "Day" in the P.-I., which ought to about settle the feud between the DuPonts and the Hearst factions, both bitter enemies of the president during the last campaign.

Oscar, the host of the Waldorf Astoria in New York City, warns the married woman about risking the affection of her husband by serving his delicatessen dinners. But sometimes even the oiled sardine is less deadly than the bride's biscuits.

PARK SCHOOL NOTES
A grammar Alphabet made by the Eighth grade in the Boulder Creek school:
"A" is for "ain't"—refuse to use it. Isn't is right—be quick to choose it.
"B" is for "better speech"—when wrong words are spoken Change to the right and the habit is broken.
"C" is for can't—why do you use it? Can is the right word—please do not lose it.
"D" is for "diagraming"—a hard thing to do
It's not easy for me nor easy for you.
"E" is for "English" we study each day
When we aren't prepared, we forget what to say.
"F" is for "forget"—we do it sometimes
We wish we'd remember, when it is classtime.
"O" is for "object"—of which you are speaking
Such as "boys seeking toys"—"toys" the object of "seeking".
"P" is for "pronoun"—word used for a noun
For a dog we use "it" instead of a hound.
"Q" is for "queer" and that's what I call this Tho' it rhymes it's far from good poetry bliss.
"R" is for "right" that means well done
Sometimes it's hard work and not any fun.
"S" is for "subject" of which you are speaking.
Such as "boys seeking toys"—"boys" the subject of "seeking".
"T" is for "taught"—used instead of learn
If you've been caught in class you've felt your cheeks burn.
"U" is for "union" of all of these things
When we read them in class it embarrasses brings.
"G" is for gender—it stands for kind Feminine, neuter, or masculine.
"H" is for "interjection"—a word exclaimed
And more than one pure statement its named.
"J" is for "juggling"—a game that's a pet
We're juggling the letters of the alphabet.
"K" is for "kind"—the kind of nouns I've confused them now till they're just mere sounds.
"L" is for "letters" we write in school
Whether business or freindly we keep the rule.
"M" is for "may" instead of can
All should use it—woman or man.
"N" is for "noun" which is anything named
Common, proper, or someone famed.
"V" is for "Van Dyke" who caught the grasshopper
We've classified him both common and proper.
"W" is for "work" before you recite
Don't do it at all if you can't do it right.
"X" "Y" and "Z" I don't know how to rhyme
So I'll sign off now and finish next time.

EDITORIAL

Well, Folks—Here it is the season when Santa Claus is almost due to put in his appearance—and at this time also comes our tax statement. Isn't somebody always taking the joy out of life? We've often wondered what would happen if we should fail to elect a tax collector or assessor. It'd be a joyous season for a time anyway.

How about cashing in on the possibilities of Christmas with cream checks? They're mighty handy to have and we're always glad to swap them for cream. Bring the next can to us.

A FABLE THAT IS WORTH THE TIME SPENT READING IT ---

ONCE UPON A TIME THERE WAS A HUSBAND WHO, ALTHOUGH HALE AND HEARTY, BEGAN TO PECK AT HIS MEALS, JUST A BITE OR TWO OF THIS AND THAT — AND THEN BACK TO THE OFFICE.

AS TIME PASSED HE BEGAN TO EAT LUNCH DOWN TOWN — THEN IT BECAME DINNER IN THE EVENING DOWN TOWN — AND SOMETIMES BREAKFAST — DOWN TOWN.

THE GOOD WIFE WAS PUZZLED AND BADLY HURT — FOR WHEN INVITED OUT FOR DINNER HE WAS ALWAYS ABLE TO ATTEND — AND ATE VERY HUNGRILY.

IN CONVERSATION WITH A FRIEND HIS WIFE TOLD HER STORY. THE FRIEND LISTENED AND THEN ASKED THE KIND OF CANNED GOODS USED. ON BEING TOLD SHE SAID:

"SWITCH TO LIBBY'S AND HEINZ PRODUCTS — YOU CAN GET THEM AT BLEWETT'S—
