THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—Theodore Gatlin decided to adopt a baby in a final effort to solve his matrimonial troubles. But all his love for their foster daughter could not shelter her childhood from the hatred of his wife, who had never wanted her. Their affairs ended in the divorce court but ten-year-old Penelope was given into the keeping of Mrs. Gatlin, except for two Sunday afternoons a month. On their first day together they set out joyfully to a baseball game. A ball, hit into the bleachers, struck Penelope on the nose and the neurotic Mrs. Gatlin removed her from the hospital to which her former husband had hurried her. Mrs. Gatlin spirited the child to Europe. Gatlin retired from business, willed Penelope all his money, and was about to begin a search for his daughter when a motor accident ended his life. CHAPTER II.—Some ten years la-when a motor accident ended his life. CHAPTER II.—Some ten years later, in San Francisco, Stephen Burt, a rising young psychiatrist, was presented by Dan McNamara, chief of police, with a new patient—Nance Belden, a girl whose terrible childhood had left her with a dual personality, for which her "saddle nose" was in part responsible. McNamara did not think she was a responsible criminal and obtained Burt's expert testimony in court. Even Lanny, the doctor's faithful office nurse, was won over to her cause despite Nance's hard-boiled fin court. Even Lanny, faithful office nurse, was won over to her cause despite Nance's hard-boiled

CHAPTER III.—Nance's criminal record outweighed Doctor Burt's clear explanation of her case and she was sent to San Quentin penitentiary for two years. Lanny visited her and Nance persuaded her to smuggle out a letter, which a confederate stole from her handbag outside the prison walls.

CHAPTER IV .-- Nance escaped, al-CHAPTER IV.—Nance escaped, although shot, by swimming out to a speed-boat manned by friends and went to Lanny's apartment. Lanny told Chief McNamara, who ordered her to bring Nance to his apartment and phoned for Doctor Burt.

CHAPTER V.—One of the men in the boat on which Nance escaped—two of them ex-convicts, the other a bootlegger—had been wounded and they went to Burt's office, where McNamara found them. The bootlegger he let go and he took the others to his home, ordering the uninjured one to care for Nance and his pal. From them he learned that Nance's real name was Penelope Gatlin. Detective Sergeants Flynn and Angelloti, seeking the reward offered for Nance's apprehension, went to Lang's apartment in search of Nance. Looking over her San Quentin cell, McNamara found a blank check on a San Jose bank.

CHAPTER VI.—From the San Jose banker McNamara learned that the girl he knew as Nance Belden was Penelope Gatlin, heiress to $750,000. The banker did not know Penelope's whereabouts. Mrs. Gatlin was now the iereabouts. Mrs. Gatlin was now wife of a man named Merton. Mc-Namara ordered Detective Sergeants Flynn and Angelloti to "lay off" Lan-ny, whom they suspected of harboring Nance. The detectives trailed Doctor Burt when he went to McNamara's house to treat her support house to treat her gunshot wound but Nance and the two men who helped her escape saw them first and fied.

CHAPTER VII.—When Lanny got home one evening she found Nance sound asleep, curled up on her guestroom bed, Several days later the hard-boiled exterior of Nance Belden suddenly vanished and the girl became the refined Penelope Gatlin. Her partially restored memory led her to tell Lanny of her wealthy father, Theodore Gatlin, and of her girlhood in France. Fearing his detectives would locate Penelope, McNamara furnished her with tear and stink bombs and told her how to use them to escape if they did. She uses the bombs, and gets away. Flynn and Angelotti continued hot on Nance's trail—and McNamara's. CHAPTER VII.-When Lanny got CHAPTER VIII.—Susan Engelbright, known as "Sapphire Susie," who had served a term for blackmail, appeared and asked McNamara's protection from Flynn. She admitted that Nance had gotten her three 12-carat sapphire rings out of hock after she had helped in her plans for escape, McNamara learned definitely that Nance (or probably Penelope) had sailed for France. Me also discovered he was in love with Lanny, and learned that "Nance" was living in Paris as Penelope Gatlin. Doctor Burt had been treating Mrs. Rudolph Merton, and McNamara discovered that this woman was Penelope's foster-mother, remarried. foster-mother, remarried.

CHAPTER IX.—Stephen warned Penelope by cable to leave Paris, signing his message "Mac." When Flynn went to Doctor Burt to ask him to identify a passport photograph of Penelope Gatlin as Nance Belden, the doctor hypnotized him and impressed on his subconscious mind that he must never again mention the two names Nance Belden and Penelope Gatlin.

Lanny jumped up. "Now who do you suppose that is knocking? Your office hours are plainly printed on the door." "Oh, Lanny, don't be so hard-boiled. Let the patient in."

"Who's there?" Lanny shouted angrily. "Oh! So it's you, is it? I knew you were there," the voice of Dan McNamara boomed.

Lanny unlocked the door, "Lucky for you you're not a nut, Dan. Stevle and I are just pinning one on." "I'll join you, if that's the case."

McNamara proffered his huge hand, that resembled nothing so much in life as a bunch of bananas. "Howdy, Medico." He planted himself in the visitors' chair.

"You have news of Nance Belden," Stephen challenged. "Gobs of it, Doctor."

Lanny entered with a highball. "I had a letter from Nance yesterday, Dan. She's in Paris. Can you beat

"I can," McNamara replied coolly. "She's got an apartment at twentyseven Rue St. Honore, with a cook and a maid, and a chauffeur who drives her around in a Citroen car. And she's having her picture painted."

"She's written you, too, then?" "Divil a line. I have my information from the prefect of police of Paris." "Dan, you're marvelous!"

"What's more, Lanny, she's living with her normal personality."

"How do you know?" "She registered as required by law, under her real name of Penelope Gatlin. I've known her name since the day after her escape from San Quen-

McNamara proceeded to relate the tale he had previously related to Stephen, who had neglected to retail it to Lanny. "Well, if this isn't a h-l of a tale, Dan!" she said.

"Does it beat your news, Lanny?" "Beats it by a mile, although while she was at my house she told me as much about herself as she could remember."

"This morning," McNamara continued, "the president of the Security Trust company telephoned me that the girl's mother had called him up to ask if Penelope had been cashing any checks lately. The banker gathered that the mother has a notion her daughter's dead. She doesn't like the idea of having to wait seven years to have the girl declared officially dead before she can lay claim to Penelope's estate."

"Did you find out the name of her mother?" Stephen asked. "Oh, yes. She's married again, you understand. Naturally she didn't get any information out of the banker. He's on to her, and it was none of her business whether Penelope has been cashing checks or not."

"Get the girl's case record, Lanny," Stephen commanded. "What is her mother's name, Chief?"

"Mrs. Rudolph Merton." "She's a patient of Stevie's!" Lanny yelled. "She's such a nut the squirrels chase her."

Stephen finished writing and laid down his pen. "I told you, Lanny, that Mrs. Merton wasn't insane enough to be confined."

"Guess I've got Lanny's news beaten, after all, Stephen. This Mrs. Rudolph Merton is the girl's foster-mother."

"Hooray! Hooray!" cried Lanny. "How do you know? Did the banker tell you?"

"No. I dug the information up my-

"Why? How?"

"Why? I wanted to investigate the girl's fortune. So yesterday I had a copy of the will and a copy of the appraisal of the estate made at the courthouse in San Jose and sent up to me. Gatlin stated in the will that he left all of his estate to his beloved adopted daughter, Penelope Gatlin. At the time of his death his estate was worth practically half a million dollars and has since doubled in value. Nance Belden is a lost heiress."

"Not wholly lost," Stephen reminded him. "There are times when she remembers who she is and that she has money."

"She doesn't know anything about her mother," Lanny declared. "I asked her, but she could tell me nothing. And she was Penelope Gatlin when I asked

"There is a reason for that." Doctor Burt's scientific mind was already racing along this new trail. "Penelope has had a wretched childhood; she knew nothing but unhappiness up to the time she received the shock that threw her mental gears out of mesh. She hated her mother with a terrible hatred. Feared her, probably. Then she made up her mind to forget her mother. And the will to forget was so strong that she succeeded.

"Not only did she forget her mother but her entire past life as well. Well, she ran away, and she'll never find her way back until she acquires sufficient courage to face the old issues again, surmount them and defeat them.'

"But is that possible?" McNamara asked.

"Quite. She will have to have assistance and the sort of treatment I think I can give her, and she must have assurance that never again will she be subjected to the old unhappiness. By the way, I wonder if Penelope was a love child. Have you looked up her parentage, Dan?"

"I haven't. Can't you ask Mrs. Merton about the girl?" "I suppose I could. But if lunacy ran in the family of her father or mother, I'm not going to bother with Penelope." "If you decide to take her on, we'll have to get her back into this city," McNamara mourned, "and Flynn will pick her up." "We'll fix her nose first," Lanny said.

McNamara beamed upon her. "Her criminal photographs and Bertillon measurements are gone to glory, Lanny. What did Penelope say in her let-

"Not a great deal. She said, among other things, that after leaving my house she found two hundred dollars. So she returned it." "Give me that two hundred, Lanny.

Stephen, our little thief is honest." "As one personality she would remember you gave her two hundred dollars, but as the other she couldn't remember who gave it to her," said

"Get over to Paris as quick as you can," McNamara commanded, "or she'll be stealing the Eiffel tower." "Stephen can't spare me," said

Lanny.

"Stephen can spare you," he decided. "It's got to be," McNamara urged. "Nance fied the town with a letter of credit for ten thousand, but she'll go through that like a weasel through a rat hole. Take a bankroll with you, Lanny, and when you get there take cisco," McNamara interrupted. "Well, will a strange photograph on her passport get her back into the

"She can go to the American consul in Paris, and present proof that she's the same woman with a different nose." Stephen said.

"She'll do nothing of the sort." Mc-Namara was very emphatic. "When her trail is lost it will be lost forever. Lanny, when you have that new nose built for the girl, have half a dozen new passport photographs of her taken, and send them and her passport to me. The seal of the United States of America is on the passport and covers a part of the photograph. I know a man that'll make me a seal that would fool the American eagle himself. We'll fit it down over the old seal and stamp the new photograph. Then I'll send it back to you—and may God have mercy on my soul, for you can blackmail me for that the longest day I live," Dan cried.

each cheek. "And that's a seal that'll get by, too." Dan was embarrassed. Lanny was, too -so she took a hasty departure.

This was too much, Lanny put her arms around him and kissed him on

The two men stared after her, admiration in their eyes. "A d-d fine woman, that. None finer," said McNa-

"Why don't you marry her?" The suggestion popped out of Doctor Burt as suddenly as it had occurred to him. "Now, there's an idea," McNamara mumbled dazedly. "How long have you been mulling it over?"

"Subconsciously, since you entered the office. I caught a gleam in Lanny's eyes-and when she kissed you, the subconscious crystalized into the conscious."

"I'll think it over."

"You'll not think it over, Mac. You'll make up your mind now. And I can get along without her, although the going will be pretty skiddy. But of course she'll marry you if you ask her. Lanny never proffers her friendships or her loves on the half shell. And there's still time, my boy, still time."

"Not if she goes to Paris." "I've heard of police chiefs securing a leave of absence for six months." "I couldn't take a six months' honeymoon to Paris, lad. I've saved eight thousand dollars-" "What? You a chief of police and only worth eight thousand dollars?" "God help me, boy, I'm honest." Stephen roared his merriment. "Why, you great jackass, I know that, I wouldn't let every man have Lanny. But don't you worry about money. Lanny is a business woman. She's managed me since I was a boy, and that includes my finances. I'm loaded up with good dividend paying stocks. You know. I could be a mighty good friend to the man who would be good to Lanny."

"I'll consider the proposition," the cautious Celt replied, "although I'd rather be a bachelor than a disappointed lover."

"Tell you what to do, Mac," Stephen advised. "Send her a nice photograph of yourself. If she puts it in a silver frame you may proceed with confidence."

"How will I know, my boy?" "If it's in a silver frame on the dressing table in her bedroom, it'll be a cinch."

"How'll I get into her bedroom, you blockhead?" "I'll steal her latchkey and have a duplicate made. Then you can investigate."

McNamara rose and held out his hand. "'Tis a pity, Stephen, my boy, you aren't in my detective bureau. Good night." The annual parade of the police force was but a week distant, and during that week Dan lived entirely on orange juice and spent his nights in a Turkish bath. As a result he dropped eight pounds off his northern elevation. Very erect and martial he sat on a milkwhite charger, while a photographer took several exposures of him and his command.

When the prints were delivered to him, he sent them all to Lanny with a note saying:

"Now that we are both in the same crooked conspiracy, I thought you might be interested in having the latest photograph of the biggest crook of them all."

The following day Stephen Burt sent him a key, and the following afternoon McNamara let himself into Lanny's house and discovered one of the photos on her dressing table- and in a gold frame! Another print in a silver frame appeared in ner drawing

"Holy Moses!" he soliloquized. "I'm in for it now! God help me, there's no

CHAPTER IX

Upon his return to his office Mc-Namara found in his mail a photo graph of Lanny, indorsed: "To dear old Dan--from his partner in crime-Lanny." While he was gazing upon it and telling himself how little justice the portrait did the beloved subject Stephen telephoned, demanding that he come to the office.

Lanny was in tears. "I've just had another visit from Mrs. Merton, Dan," Stephen began. "It seems that after two years of inactivity, during which time she had elected to believe Penelope Gatlin dead, she has developed a crazy notion to prove it. She wants to get Penelope's fortune."

"You questioned her about her daughter?" "Yes, but she doesn't know it," said Stephen. "I hypnotized her first and spent an hour questioning her, and it appears that this morning she visited your captain of detectives and asked him to throw out a dragnet to locate Penelope Gatlin. She brought him some snapshots of the girl-told him her real name-all about her moneythe girl's habits and peculiaritieseverything. When I'd discovered enough to put Lanny in tears, I awakened Mrs. Merton and sent her away happy, but with this command firmly planted in her subconscious mind-she must not think of the name Penelope Gatlin. When I awakened her I asked her if she had an adopted daughter. She replied, surprised, that she had. I then asked her the name of this adopted daughter-and a look of terror came over her face. For the life of her she couldn't think of the name and begged me not to mention it if I knew it."

"It's a pity you didn't think of doing that before she went to the detective bureau with her information," McNamara cried, and called up the Security Trust company.

"The captain of detectives has put Flynn and Angelloti on the case," he announced drearily when he had hung up, "and Flynn has already been to the bank, making inquiries. When he presented his credentials the cashier showed him everything. They'll identify that girl as Nance Belden, trace her to Paris as readily as I did, and the French government will be notified that Penelope is an escaped convict. They will immediately deport her and Flynn will meet her at Hoboken."

"But can't you do anything about it, Dan?" Lanny pleaded.

"Nothing! Flynn and Angelloti are on the trail officially now." He stared at. Lanny tragically. "I'm out of the picture now and can do nothing but advise you. Send two cables—one to Nance Belden in Paris and the other to Penelope Gatlin at the same address. Say: 'Come at once-Lanny dying-cable name vessel on which leaving,' and sign it 'Steve.'

"I'll meet her at the dock," Stephen decided. "I'm due in New York next week."

"You'll do nothing of the sort," said Dan. "I'll send that convict in my house." He shuddered and grimaced in his distress. "I could handle the wop with money, but Flynn has sworn an oath! And because I've made a monkey out of him he'll keep it. He'd rather make a monkey out of me now than acquire great riches-and if I'm broke, most likely the captain of detectives will step into my shoes, and Flynn will stand a good chance of becoming captain of detectives. Oh, murderation, Lanny darling, have you a little whisky in the house? I'm faint, so I am." "You're suffering from heart trouble, you egg," Lanny cried savagely. "Yes! weak heart, a soft heart, a human heart."

"Send that cable," he roared.

"Yes, get busy, Lanny," Stephen urged. "The bird of time has but a little way to flutter-and the wretched fowl is on the way." After Dan McNamara had left his office, Doctor Stephen Burt gazed with mild disapproval upon Lanny. "Unlike you and Dan McNamara," he said, "I dislike having the peaceful tenor of my life disturbed." "This intrigue is myrrh and incense to me. Stevie."

"I know it. You and Dan love a fight for its own sweet sake, but I do not. I have a particular aversion to grand jury indictments, and it is a possibility you and your boy friend have let me in for." "Fiddlesticks!"

"Lanny, I'll be angry with you in a minute. Now, listen to me, and whatever you do, do not talk back. Dan McNamara has run out on us. I mean you. He's through. Dan's rattled. If he hadn't been he'd never have ordered the sending of such a fool cable-

"Dan McNamara knows his way about," Lanny defended. "He's more than nine years old."

"So do I. Lanny, it will be highly dangerous to send that cablegram. How is she to know it isn't a message to decoy her back to the penitentiary? If she receives it while she's Penelope Gatlin, she is extremely liable to cable for confirmation before acting on it. That would mean a delay of not less than twenty-four hours. On the other hand, if she is Nance Belden when she receives it, she will leave Paris openly and walk right into the hands of the New York police. I'm not much of a detective, but tonight I'm a better one than that McNamara idiot."

"He's not an idiot. He's one of the mest men I ever knew." "Keep quiet," he ordered severely.

You ditch my train of thought," He drew a sheet of paper toward him and commenced writing, while Lanny glowered at him. Presently he sat up

"Grave danger stop beat it some other country traveling by motor stop upon arrival cable address stop if need funds will cable them stop leave Paris establishment going concern stop go out for walk and disappear stop unless these instructions followed you leave trail for persecutors to follow.

"Mac." He locked up, "How do those instructions strike you?"

"The instructions are fine, but why commit forgery by signing Dan's name? If the original is traced-"

"I have signed it Mac, and the world is filled with Macs. When Dan has reached his office, telephone him and tell him to do something that will prove in any court he was in his office when I filed this cablegram."

Lanny relented. "You might make a detective, at that."

Twenty minutes later Dan McNamara was listening to Lanny reading Stephen's cablegram over his private line. "Excellent," was his sole comment. "but print it in block letters. Even a typewriter can betray one. When Steve files this telegram have him pay for it with a hundred-dollar bill, and have him wear large black goggles and the rim of his hat pulled down all the way round. The girl who receives it will think one crook is cabling another. If she's ever asked what sort of man filed it, her description of the sender, plus my own perfect alibi, will put me in the clear."

"How are we to manage after she has eluded the Paris police?"

McNamara sighed gustily. "Flynn will be in touch with her bank, and every time she cashes a draft on her letter of credit, Flynn will have a line on her address."

"You're no help," Lanny snapped, and hung up. Half an hour later, from the cable company's main office, Stephen dispatched the cablegram.

With Dan McNamara definitely out of the fight, Stephen felt lonely and apprehensive. He wondered why the girl had fled to Paris in the face of Dan McNamara's instructions to flee to Lower California, to enter which no passport is required. He asked Lanny.

"Oh, that's no mystery, Stevie. I brought home from the office, intending to show it to Dan, an article by a celebrated plastic surgeon of Paris. Penelope read it with great interest. She went to Paris to consult this French plastic surgeon and also to have samples of her new nose drawn by a competent artist."

"So that's how the Paris police informed Dan she was having her portrait done by an American artist, ch? I suppose it will be her luck to be in a hospital undergoing the operation when the Paris police receive word to deport her."

"I'm afraid she's balled everything up, Stephen. Flynn will have the numno time to fix a new passport photograph on to it. They'll not trust to the photo to identify her if she tries to land. They'll check up on the passport numh

"Will you never cease discussing this miserable business, Lanny?" Stephen burst out irritably. "If it hadn't been for you we wouldn't be in this wretched predicament." When the captain of detectives called in Detective Sergeant P. Flynn and related to him the tale told to him by Mrs. Rudolph Merton, Flynn gave no sign of being particularly interested. Carefully and methodically he arranged in his mind the facts as stated, and when he left the presence of his superior, all he knew was that he was to strive to recover a lost heiress by name Penelope Gatlin, and that she had a nose that should make her recognizable anywhere.

After nine hours of refreshing slumber, Flynn proceeded to ponder the case of Penelope Gatlin of the saddle nose. "I seem to be getting my fill of girls with saddle noses who disappear mysteriously," he decided lazily-and instantly something clicked in his brain and he knew he was on the trail of Nance Belden again. An heiress, eh? McNamara had hinted at powerful influences back of Nance Belden, and she certainly must have hired the expert help she had had in her escape from San Quentin penitentiary.

Instantly Something Clicked in His Brain and He Knew He Was on the Trail of Nance Belden Again.

"McNamara knows who she is." Flynn decided. "He's getting his-in chunks-for helping her. I'll bet it's the same girl."

He decided not to take Angelloti into his confidence. For two hundred and abandon his interest in Nance Belden; the wilderness.

whereas P. Flynn had scorned to quit, He would pick up the trail again alone. and when he had Nance Belden or Penelope Gatlin on his hook-well, she had to pay somebody to keep out of San Quentin, and that somebody should be P. Flynn. He went to San Jose that day and interviewed the officials of the bank, who, when he flashed his shield, gave him all the information they possessed. Dan McNamara had artfully destroyed all the girl's police photographs, but if she had secured a passport, Flynn argued to himself, she had left two of her passport photographs with the passport office, and Flynn knew he could borrow one of them.

Flynn's shield was an open sesame to the man in charge of the passport office. Two minutes after his arrival he knew Nance Belden had secured a passport.

Employing identically the same means McNamara had employed, he traced Penelope Gatlin to Paris within three days. But he had now to prove that Penelope Gatlin and Nance Belden were one and the same person, so he interviewed the United States marshal, who secured for him one of the girl's passport photographs. Armed with this, Flynn crossed the bay to San Quentin.

"Is that Nance Belden?" he asked the matron.

"That is Nance Belden," was the renly.

From the ferry he went at once to the home of Mrs. Rudolph Merton. He stuck the photograph under her nose and asked gruffly: "Is that Penelope Gatlin?" A tremor ran over Mrs. Merton's face. It seemed to Flynn that she was frightened, disturbed. "Well?" he demanded. "You can't expect the police to find your missing daughter if you don't help. Is this her picture or isn't it?"

"I-I don't know. I have never heard of her before."

"Never heard of her! Why, she's your daughter!" "I haven't any daughter."

"Why, you called on the captain of! detectives and asked him to find your daughter. What do you mean by telling me you've never heard of her?" "I can't remember. I don't know.

Oh, please, please don't ask me! Somethink terrible will happen. I-I-" "You refuse to identify this photo; as that of Penelope Gatlin?" Flynn was growing irritated. Finally she had hysterics and a maid came in and asked P. Flynn to leave the house.

Flynn was profoundly irritated. He knew Penelope Gatlin was at 27 Rue St. Honore, Paris, but he did not know that Nance Belden was! Back at central office, he compared the passport ber of her passport and Dan will have photograph with the substitute photograph Dan McNamara had pasted on Nance Belden's fake police record card -and knew it for a fake.

Suddenly it occurred to Flynn that he had had an official interview with everybody connected with this mysterious case, except Dr. Stephen Burt. "You're a long time getting around to see me, Sergeant," Stephen charged, and indicated a large, comfortable armchair. "I called on you once, Doctor, but you didn't know it. That was the night after Nance Belden escaped from San Quentin. Me an' my partner trailed you to the chief's house." "I've always thought you and the excellent Angelloti didn't make the best of your opportunities," Stephen murmured. "Still, I suppose you were playing with dynamite." "We were," said Flynn, "but no more. The chief's one of the higgesthearted men in the world, but a picnici egg if you rub him the wrong way. So we pussy-footed."

"No fair man could deny the excellence of your pussy-footing. I know! all about it. How about a wee Dock! an' Doris?" Stephen suggested. "There's an idea for you, Doctor."

Stephen summoned the butler and ordered the drink. Flynn, with great! deliberation, produced Penelope's photograph.

"Do you know the lady?" he queried. "I think I do, Sergeant." "Who is she?" "Is there any reason why I should express an opinion?" "Not unless you choose to be goodnatured. I suppose you know you're in Dutch for aiding and abetting an escaped convict." "Well?"

"Naturally we don't want to make the going hard for a man of your standing," Flynn continued. "My dear sergeant, you would have started the fireworks long ago if you had anything tangible to proceed upon." Flynn sipped his highball. "You're being well paid for shielding this girl, of course. I don't blame you a bit, but; -you're too big a figure in your profession to get into trouble with the ".solice."

Radios On Tractors

Noting that some manufacturers were offering rubber-tired farm tractors equipped with radios, Roy B. Gray, chief of the bureau of agricultural engineering, said it wasn't a bad idea.

"It's all part of the general tendency to take some of the drudgery out of farming." he commented.

"Of course," Gray said, "riding a tractor is a darned sight easier than walking behind a horse-drawn plow. But it's pretty hard sitting there all day in a dusty field. The radio breaks the monotony."

amount of social relaxation is every student's just due, and a working versity training.

Students who patronize the dating bureau fill out application cards. They list, among other facts, their ing ability, and special interests. Men's and women's cards are matched by the bureau. There have been few complaints thus far.

"On any campus as large as Idaho's," Dr. Miller explains, "There are many students who miss congenial friendships for no other reason than the awkwardness of meeting each other and getting acquainted. Idaho students are proud of their widespread reputation for friendliness. Any means of making more students acquainted with a wider circle of friends is, therefore, consistent with the tone of the campus."

Well, Folks-It's getting most awful close to Santa's annual visit time—so beyond urging you to bring in your cream and use the check for Christmas shopping and mentioning the fact that our butter, cottage cheese and ice cream should be a part of your Christmas dinner, we'll devote this space to fun.

Man (entering grocery store): "I want some shorts for my pigs. How much are they, please?"

Girl clerk: "So, you're onother of those wisecrackers, eh? I guess you'll be wanting brassiers for your cows next."

"Look here, I bought a bottle of your hair restorer last night and all it's done is to raise these big bumps on my head."

"My gracious," said the beauty doctor, "we must have sold you a bottle of bust developer by mistake!"

Here's to the happy, bounding flea You cannot tell a he from a she! For they both look alike you see, But he can tell—and so can she!
