WINTER WHEAT SEEDINGS WELL ABOVE LAST YEAR

A winter wheat acreage well above early reports, according to the U. S. Bureau of Agricultural Economics. Conditions for seeding were generally favorable although early sowings were somewhat delayed by dry soil in parts of the United States, Europe and North Africa. Late October and early November rains were generally beneficial and conditions were appreciably improved. Germination on the whole was fairly favorable but late seeding in some areas MRS. # Liquor Control

I believe that the most feasible plan to meet the present situation is for the state to control wholesale distribution; to place retailers under heavy bond to carry out rules and regulations which shall be prescribed by the state and communities and to cover such hours of closing, sale to minors, etc. Enforcement would be through existing agencies of state, county and city.

Law Enforcement

The Department of Law Enforcement especially calls for common sense and courtesy in its operation. Such operation demands that we have common sense laws which can be enforced . . . At present, the public mind will not accept a prohibition of gambling in all phases of which you are familiar, but I believe it is possible for regulation to be on a basis where the law will disregarded. To go to extremes in dealing with this problem will prove futile for it must be kept in mind constantly that the goal sought is

COME ON FOLKS, LET'S DO SOME BOOSTING!

Everything this community has accomplished in the past, and hopes to accomplish in the future, depends entirely upon unity of action.

Farmers, all workers, business, and professional men, each contribute their share toward building up the community. Joint effort has created our schools, churches, good roads and comfortable homes. It builds good will and brings us greater prosperity. Our joint labors will make this community a better place in which to reside. Let's all boost and work together.

We are prompted to sponsor this message to the people of Kendrick and vicinity through our interest in community welfare.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—Theodore Gatlin decided to adopt a baby in a final effort to solve his matrimonial troubles. But all his love for their foster daughter could not shelter her childhood from the hatred of his wife, who had never wanted her. Their affairs ended in the divorce court but ten-year-old Penelope was given into the keeping of Mrs. Gatlin, except for two Sunday afterncons a month, On their first day together they set out joyfully to a baseball game. A ball, hit into the bleachers, struck Penelope on the nose and the neurotic Mrs. Gatlin removed her from the hospital to which her former husband had hurried her. Mrs. Gatlin spirited the child to Europe. Gatlin retired from business, willed Penelope all his money, and was about to begin a search for his daughter when a motor accident ended his life-

CHAPTER II.—Some ten years later, in San Francisco, Stephen Burt, a rising young psychiatrist, was presented by Dan McNamara, chief of police, with a new patient—Nance Belden, a girl whose terrible childhood had left her with a dual personality, for which her "saddle nose" was in part responsible. McNamara did not think she was a responsible criminal and obtained Burt's expert testimony in court. Even Lanny, the doctor's faithful office nurse, was won over to her cause despite Nance's hard-boiled exterior.

CHAPTER III.—Nance's criminal record outweighed Doctor Burt's clear explanation of her case and she was sent to San Quentin penitentiary for two years. Lanny visited her and Nance persuaded her to smuggle out a letter, which a confederate stole from her handbag outside the prison walls.

CHAPTER V.—One of the men in the boat on which Nance escaped—two of them ex-convicts, the other a bootlegger—had been wounded and they went to Burt's office, where McNamara found them. The bootlegger he let go and he took the others to his home, ordering the uninjured one to care for Nance and his pal. From them he learned that Nance's real name was Penelope Gatlin. Detective Sergeants Flynn and Angelloti, seeking the reward offered for Nance's apprehension, went to Lang's apartment in search of Nance. Looking over her San Quentin cell, McNamara found a blank check on a San Jose bank.

the refined Penelope Gatlin. Her partially restored memory led her to tell Lanny of her wealthy father, Theodore Gatlin, and of her girlhood in France. Fearing his detectives would locate Penelope, McNamara furnished her with tear and stink bombs and told her hey to use them to escape if they Penelope, McNamara furnished her with tear and stink bombs and told her how to use them to escape if they did. She uses the bombs, and gets away. Flynn and Angelotti continued hot on Nance's trail—and McNamara's.

CHAPTER VIII .- Susan Engelbright, CHAPTER VIII.—Susan Engelbright, known as "Sapphire Susie," who had served a term for blackmail, appeared and asked McNamara's protection from Flynn. She admitted that Nance had gotten her three 12-carat sapphire rings out of hock after she had helped in her plans for escape. McNamara learned definitely that Nance (or probably Penelope) had sailed for France. He also discovered he was in love with Lanny, and learned that "Nance" was living in Paris as Penelope Gatlin. Doctor Burt had been treating Mrs. Rudolph Merton, and McNamara discovered that this woman was Penelope's foster-mother, remarried.

CHAPTER IX.—Stephen warned Penelope by cable to leave Paris, signing his message "Mac." When Flynn went to Doctor Burt to ask him to identify a passport photograph of Penelope Gatlin as Nance Belden, the doctor hypnotized him and impressed on his subconscious mind that he must never again mention the two names Nance Belden and Penelope Gatlin.

CHAPTER X .- Warned through the joint efforts of McNamara and Stephen. Nance fied Paris before Flynn could Nance fled Paris before Flynn could put the French police on her trail, and popped back into Lanny's home in San Francisco. Dan and Lanny were married and accompanied Penelope to New York, where Doctor Burt had engaged the best plastic surgeon in the country to remodel her nose. As McNamara had destroyed all her criminal records, this remaking of her looks would bury her identity as Nance Belden. Dan returned when his 60 days leave expired and reported the operleave expired and reported the operation a success but that three months would elapse before Nance was out of the surgen's hands Stephen comof the surgeon's hands Stephen com-missioned McNamara to look up the girl's ancestry and living conditions in childhood.

CHAPTER XI.—Stephen hypnotized Mrs. Merton and she told how she had made Penelope's childhood unhappy through jealousy of her husband's affection for the child. When Penelope was eighteen years old, she told her she was a foundling and had negro blood in her veins, and Penelope ran away. Lanny returned, saying Penelope's new nose had made her a beauty, but that she had returned to Paris.

"D'ye think you can pull her through,

"I'm sure I can, Dan. A psychoneurosis generally is impossible to cure unless you know its causative factors and can remove them. If you can do that, it's as simple as removing a wart. Dan, have you looked up the girl's ancestry?"

tomorrow and look him up. The bank will know who he is."

The bank president ald know the name of the attorney, but added the disconcerting information that the man had been dead six years. McNamara thereupon called the man's widow to ask if she still retained her late husband's files. He had a faint hope that if she would permit him to look into the Gatlin file he might find a clue. He was informed to his amazement, that about two years and a half before, Mrs. Merton had called upon her. asked for the file and had been given it.

There was but one club in the citythe Elks-and McNamara wondered if Theodore Gatlin had belonged to that He discovered Gatlin had, and from the dining room steward, who remembered Theodore Gatlin very well, he ascertained the names and addresses of three men with whom Gatlin had according to the steward, seemed very friendly.

Of these three men, one was dead and the others were unable to shed any light upon the parentage of Gatlin's adopted daughter, although one man had a hazy recollection that the child's father had been an army officer and had been killed in the Philippines. The chief's questionings, however, elicited the names of two women who had been friendly with Mrs. Gatlin, so McNamara called upon both. They could furnish him no information beyond the fact that Mrs. Gatlin despised the child Penelope; that she had never been enthusiastic about the adoption; that she had never been kind to the girl; that Gatlin and Penelope had been inseparable pals. They had a feeling that Mrs. Gatlin, while apparently delighting in persecuting her husband, was, nevertheless, insanely jealous of his love for his adopted daughter; that up to the day of her accident, Penelope had been a bright, healthy, normal child, fun-loving and affectionate and humorous, and the delight of her foster father.

CHAPTER XI

Dan reported to Stephen, somewhat depressed, because he had returned, he thought, without a scintilla of worthwhile information. Stephen, however, thought otherwise. "I'll have to question Mrs. Merton again," he decided. He rang for Miss Ordway. "Telephone to Mrs. Merton," he ordered, "and tell her I wish she'd drop in here some day soon. Tell her I'd like the latest report on her health."

"What are you going to do?" McNamara asked.

"Hypnotize her again, of course. I've got to release her from the mental inhibition I set upon her in the case of her adopted daughter. Otherwise she'll not talk."

A minute later Miss Ordway entered the room. "Mrs. Merton says she will be down for her interview in half an' hour, Doctor."

"When she am out into the nurse's office until I have her under control; then I'll admit you. I want you to take copious notes."

Mrs. Merton fluttered into Stephen's consultation room forty minutes later. "Oh, Doctor Burt," she whined, "I'm so glad you've sent for me. My insomnia is worse than ever," she wailed. "Oh, Doctor, do you think I'm going crazy?"

"Not at all, not at all," he soothed her. "You are excited over nothing. But you are in a highly nervous condition, of course, and until you have settled down it would be useless for me to attempt to examine you. If you could have a little nap for, say half an hour on the couch in the next room, I'm sure you would awaken much re-

"Oh, if I could only sleep half an hour, Doctor, if I only could. What a relief it would be."

"Nonsense, my dear lady. We doctors have ways of inducing sleep even in the most obstinate cases of incomnia."

At his command she lay down on the couch and Stephen place a cushion under her head. Employing the appropriate method of inducing hypnotic sleep, Stephen had her drowsy within three minutes; in ten minutes she had passed into a profound state and Stephen summoned McNamara, gave him a pad and pencil and silently indicated a chair.

Mrs. Merton, however, was aware of his presence. "Who's there?" she demanded in a drowsy tone.

"Doctor McNamara, Mrs. Merton. I have called him in to confer with me on your case." 'You are so kind, Doctor Burt," she said. He resumed his passive stroking of her forehead and cheeks; in a low, monotonous tone he commanded her to answer all his questions. Then suddenly: "Have you thought of your daughter, Penelope, of late?"

Grimace of distress flitted across the beautiful face. "No distress or bad luck will attend the thinking while you are with me, understand? I command that gave Penelope a dissociated peryou to think about her—to remember sonality." her and to answer truthfully all my questions regarding her." "Yes, Doctor."

"Why did you and Mr. Gatlin adopt

"He wanted a baby and I couldn't give him one." "Could you, if you had cared to?"

"Yes, Doctor." Her tone was very peevish. "How old was she when you adopted her?" "About a month."

"Where did you find her?" "In the Infants' Shelter in San Fran-

"Yes, Doctor. A Captain and Mrs. Robert E. Elliott." "Why did the Elliots abandon their baby?" "The captain was killed by the Moros and his wife died in this city in child-

"Do you remember what branch of the service the captain was in?" "He was a captain of cavalry." "When you and Mr. Gatlin adopted Penelope, did you have any written record of her parentage?" "We had a letter from the matron at the Infants' Shelter. And we had a letter from the doctor who attended Mrs. Elliot at St. Dunstan's hospital, and some letters from old neighbors of the Elliots."

"Why did you get the letters from the old neighbors?" "Theod re was concerned about the baby's ancestry."

"And was it the best?" "I do not know. It satisfied Mr. Gatlin."

"What has become of all the records pertaining to Penelope?" "I burned them."

"Why?" "To keep Penelope from getting them."

"Then she wanted them, did she not?" "Yes, Doctor. She demanded them."

"When was this?" "On her eighteenth birthday."

"How did it happen that she waited until her eighteenth birthday before demanding them?"

"Up until then she thought she was our own flesh and blood."

"Ah! Why did you burn these records rather than give them to Pene-

"I hate her" "When you refused to give them to her, what happened?" "She cried and laughed and screamed and attacked me. She said she hated me. Finally she fainted, and I had the maid put her to bed and lock her in her room." "Did you give Penelope any information at all, at any time, regarding her parentage?"

There was a slight hesitation. "I lied to her. I wanted to hurt her because she wouldn't recognize my moral right to half of Theodore's estate. So I told her she had negro blood in her veins." "What made you invent such a horrible tale?" "Penelone is a decided brunette. I thought even if she did not believe me. my statement would create in her mind a doubt and a fear that would drive her crazy."

"What happened after that, Mrs Merton?".

"In the morning she was gone." "How did she go?"

"She made a rope of sheets and blankets."

"Have you seen her since?" "No."

"Is she dead?"

"I do not know. I hope so." Stephen turned to Dan. "Any questions?"

McNamara shook his head owlishly "I can revive most of the record-perhaps all of it. The captain's record is in the army files; when he married, a notice of it appeared in the Army and Navy Journal: with that and what I can get out of the officers who soldiered with the captain, I'll get a pretty complete picture."

Stephen resumed his cross examina-

"Did you ever beat Penelope? Did you ever pinch her and slap her and lock her un?" "Yes. Doctor."

"Wake the fiend up and send her home," McNamara roared.

"I will—as soon as I look up her memory of Penelope," Stephen replied. He impressed upon her the fact that she was not ill at all. He commanded her very earnestly to forget that she had ever heard of him.

Then he awakened her, as McNamara departed, gave her a long look, felt her pulse, told her she was much improved and handed her some sodamint tablets. She departed in a somewhat happier mood.

"Well," McNamara demanded, when he and Stephen found themselves alone again, "what do you think of that one for a hell-cat?" "I do not think, Dan, We merely accept such people as we accept sunlight and rainfall." "Do you think you'll see any more of this woman, Stephen?"

"I hope not. I hope the hypnotic suggestion I gave her is strong enough to overcome her acquired instinct for Illness."

"Were the things she told you illuminating?'

"Very. I suspected most of them and she confirmed my suspicion. We know now that Penelope is of sound ancestry. Her father was not a neurotic. If he hadn't been a normal, gallant fellow and physically fit he would ! never have become a captain of cavalry. He was killed in action. But we have arrived at a starting point, Dan-the reason for the mental shock

"I didn't get that-at least not quite, Stephen,"

"For some reason best known to themselves, the Gatlins kept from Penelope the fact that she was not their own flesh and blood. However, while we have definitely established the date of the mental shock and the character of the shock, we have also established the causative factors leading up to the shock. Penelope had a most unhappy childhood. From earliest childhood she was the victim of bitter. rebellious thoughts. Then that baseball wrecked her nose. This was a mental and physical shock. The separation and divorce of the Gatlins was acidly, "you've certainly taken your ness and love denied can make of hu- not to come back when I received your another terrible shock, because she lost Gatlin and there was nobody to pro- You're looking mighty particular, Lanny tect her. And Gatlin's death was a severe shock. Then, as she emerged from childhood into maidenhood, the knowledge that her nose made her hideous naturally became an obsession with her.

"Now, Dan, by this time there was no further necessity for concealing the facts of the child's birth. Gatlin, dead, had left his entire estate in trust to Penelope, and on her eighteenth birthday she was free to do as she pleased. She could leave her hell-cat of an adopted mother now. She carried her own check book. The knowledge that she was not flesh and blood of the beloved Gatlin came as a terrible shock and with it, of course, came other terrifying speculations."

"More piling on of the inferiority complex," McNamara interrupted, "And she cracked under it. Then she made up her mind to forget Mrs. Gatlinand she did."

"A clear case of auto-hypnosis Dan Now you've got to run down the record of our Penelope and that of her parents. She must have it and it must be proof of the most convincing character, because such proof is necessary if we are to restore to her her mental tranquility."

"Well" said Dan, "I'll be back presently with the girl's record, and then-"

"Out of the darkness into the sunlight, Mac."

"Well, the next one I find in the darkness will stay there," the chief The absence of the capable Lanny was a constant reminder to Dr. Stephen Burt of his sole experiment to date in a case of dual personality. He yearned life! with an alert scientific yearning to get to work on Penelope Gatlin, and when Dan McNamara appeared at the office one day he saw by the satisfied smirk on the McNamara countenance that all had gone well. 'Let me see the documents," Stephen demanded. McNamara handed over the pile of papers.

"Well, you've done your full duty placently. "She's gone." and have kept the police of various cities busy for a few days," said "What do you hear from Stephen. Lanny?

"She'll be home next week. The skin graft on the girl's nose was a complete success."

"And how does the girl feel about the situation now?'

"She's crazy about her new nose and spends hours examining it in a hand mirror." Stephen smiled. "Naturally, she would."

"Lanny says the girl's been her real self more than half the time since that' first look."

"She would be. And now I'm going to add to her happiness by sending her this 'record, which I shall supplement with a report of my own on her case. She'll study it, and in this convincing proof that she is not what Mrs. Merton told her she was, she'll probably get well. These cases are simple. Dan. All you have to do is to discover the cause and remove it. Nature does the rest. She will have no more rebellious thoughts, because the despot can do her no further harm. Her black moods of depression will not come again; she is organically and mentally sound, the product of a sound ancestry on both sides of her family."

"But she knows she was an inmate of San Quentin. She'll remember she was a thief."

"She will, of course, feel great shame when fully restored to her normal personality. In her other personality, with her acquired instincts of morality and convention smothered in her subconscious mind, she had, of course, no sense of remorse or shame. I think that when I have explained this to her she will understand just what her mental condition was. And her fear that the world will discover her sorry record will. I feel certain, be alleviated by her knowledge that it would be impossible for anybody who knew her as saddle-nosed Nance Belden to recognize her as good-looking Penelope Gatlin."

"Not for a great many weeks, Stevie."

He glanced up at her sharply. "How come, Lanny?" Lanny's face was the color of an old rose. "I'm going to have a baby," she whispered. And then Stephen Burt stood up and took dear old Lanny in his strong young arms and hugged her. At last she was going to have her little slice of "Of course," Lanny said presently, 'you'll be the baby's god-father?"

He nodded. "Of course." Three months passed-to Stephen Burt remarkable by reason of the fact that Mrs. Rudolph Merton did not call upon him. At last, to satisfy his curiosity, he telephoned Rudolph Merton to ask him how his wife was. "I don't know," Merton replied com-

"I congratulate you, Mr. Merton. Good-by and good luck to you. You deserve it."

As Stephen hung up the telephone receiver, chuckling, Miss Ordway brought in his mail. In it he found a registered parcel that had been through the custom house, with duty prepaid on it. It contained the finest and most expensive combination stop-watch and timepiece he had ever seen, and a note that read:

"Dear Doctor Burt: "I know it would not be au fait for me to ask you for a bill for professional services, for I realize that what vou did for me was done as one human being to another and quite without thought of financial remuneration. Moreover, I prefer to remain forever your debtor. You will never know what you have done for me. Christ, restoring life to the dead son of the widow of Nain, performed no greater miracle than did you in restoring life and happiness to my dead soul. I would try to thank you if words were not so pitifully inadequate to express the profundity of my gratitude. Will you not please accept the enclosed trifle as a token of that gratitude, and add one more debt to those already

Some days, when I have achieved sufficient courage I am curious about my other self, evolved from darkness. There are blanks in my life. Perhaps you can fill them in. Perhaps you will not care to, knowing that they are better left blank. I do not think, however, that I was ever terribly wicked. If so, I have no recollection of it.

It occurred to him to tuck that last phrase in for good measure. Lovenot merely the love of a man for a woman but the love that is a fine friendship-was, he knew, very necessary to Penelope. # CHAPTER XII

It was late fall. Stephen had just returned from his vacation; it was his first day back at the office and he was a bit rebellious at the flood of patients that awaited him. He finally got rid of the last one at five-thirty, and following his custom, settled back for a pipeful of tobacco, when Miss Ordway en-"There's a young lady calling," she announced. "She says she is Miss Elli-

"I don't know her, Miss Ordway. A prospective patient?"

"I imagine she is. I didn't ask." "Tell her it's beyond office hours and suggest that she call during office hours tomorrow."

Miss Ordway departed to deliver the message, but returned presently to say that the young lady begged to be permitted to see him. "Very well, show her in," he acquiesced irritably. "but remember Professor Finnegan if she stays too long."

Miss Elliott entered. Stephen rose and waved her to a chair. Then: "Well, Miss Elliot, what seems to be the trouble?" "Does my general appearance indicate to you, even remotely, that I am one who requires the services of a neurologist and psychiatrist?" she asked him. Stephen smiled. "Scarcely. What is it, then? You want a subscription to something?" "How astute you are, Doctor. I am soliciting subscriptions to a fund designed to furnish expert medical atten tion to a very deserving public servant. I refer to Detective Sergeant Patrick Joseph Flynn."

"I know him, Miss Ellott. What's wrong with Flynn?" "His blood pressure seems to be very high--" "Nothing doing, Miss Elliott," Stephen interrupted. "I admit I sold this terrible Flynn the notion that he had high blood pressure, but I did that for a reason I do not care to explain. The man has the arteries of a boy. What's Flynn to you? And just who might you be?" "You have my name. What I want to know is this: Are you ashamed to take me out to dinner?" "No. of course not." Stephen blinked

"I appear eminently respectable?" "Quite. In fact, a most presentable lady." "Not so homely, eh?"

"On the contrary. But I shall not go to dinner with you.' "Why?" "Well, while the experience might be delightful, I think you're too pert." The lovely face drooped sorrow fully. "Oh, Stephen, would you be that mean to poor little Penelope?" "Good god of love!" Stephen almost yelled. "Are you my little Penelope?" "Of course I am. Oh, Stephen, you contentedly in his arms. He hugged her fraternally. "My dear, dear girl," he declared, "if I were a praying man I'd get right down on my knees and send up a prayer of gratitude to Omnipotence. You're well?"

"Oh, yes, indeed I am," the girl cried with a catch in her voice, "I'm happy -not perfectly happy but-hug me! Oh, Stephen, Stephen, it was so hard cablegram. But I had to fight things: out and I didn't want to come home until I could meet you bravely. Stophen, are you truly glad to see me again?"

"I am," he answered, and marveled that he should be so glud as he was. His heart, for some mad reason, was singing within him. "Sit down," he commanded, and went back to his own chair. "I'm going to talk to you for five minutes, and then the subject will be taboo for ever. Imagine a long hill with a deep pond at the foot of it-a pond all scummy green and slimy-a miasmatic pond. Imagine that you started running down that hill in the dark, that you stubbed! your toe and rolled the remainder of the way-into that pond. Well, that's exactly what happened to you. You. were running in the dark and you stubbed your toe and landed in at social stratum equivalent to that scummy pond. Do you remember your forter-mother?"

"Faintly—as one remembers faces and events of one's childhood."

"Well, don't bother to remember her. Her cruelty almost ruined your life. but she is out of your life now, never to return. There are four human beings living who know that Penelopa Gatlin and Nance Belden were one and the same. I wrote you a meticulous account of your illness. so you understand all about that, but what I want you to know now is that no power on earth can ever discover you for the purpose of making you pay the penalty for the misdeeds of Nance Belden. By the way, where did you get that name?"

"I had forgotten who I was and I! had to have a name. So I picked that one out of a book."

"The new nose has helped wonderfully, hasn't it?" She nodded. "I do not want to hide!

"You must not. That would be depriving the people of the sight of something very sweet and wonderful."

Penelope flushed, but nevertheless obeyed. Stephen drew her cheek down to his. "I want to tell you something," he murmured. "The first night I saw you, my heart went out to you. And when Dan told me how it all happened. I had a tremendous admiration for your courage and wit. I love brainy people, Penelope, and you have brains. I knew what was wrong with you and I felt so sorry for you, my poor dear; I wanted to help you more than I ever wanted to help any human being. I understood all about you; you were just a little lost atom crying so pitifully to be saved, to know love and protection and happiness, that you developed into a game, and Lanny and Dan and I just had to play it to the You're my woman. You love me little, do you not?" "Why," said Penelope soberly, "I've loved you from the day Dan brought me to this office. You were kind to me. and you didn't seem to see my nose. I was so grateful—and ever since I've been waiting out there, somewhere." She hugged him fiercely. "Oh, Stevie, darling, all the rest of my life I shall devote to you. I'll not be oppressive with my love and I'll not be possessive, but I do want the task of adding to your happiness. I know what happiness is. I can appreciate even a little bit-and I'll never forget to cherish what you gave me and give back all I can."

"That way happiness lies. You seem to have the formula," he replied gravely.

The door from Miss Ordway's office opened and the nurse looked in. "I'm sorry, Doctor Burt, but Professor Finnegan has just telephoned that you are fifteen minutes late to your engagement to meet the great German savant, Herr Doktor Uffitz."

"But I didn't press the button, Miss Ordway." "I know you didn't, Stevie, dear," Penelope spoke up, "but I did-acci-

Well, Folks-Now that New Year's headache is just a memory, let's consider your income for 1937. Unlike the usual prattle of the insurance salesman who is interested only in the welfare of your family when you cash inwe're going to tell you frankly we're interested in the cream your cows produce. We want to buy it. The cream check you get is your 'velvet" on the deal. So why not bring in a can? Get the check-you'll be surprised how much a can of cream will bring you. You'll like our service, too. Just try it.

New curate: "And what did you think of my sermon on Sunday, Mrs. Jones?"

Mrs. Jones: "Beautiful, sir, and so instructive. We didn't know what sin was until you came."

Mrs. Schmonsky: "What does that word 'asbestos' on the theatre curtain mean?"

Schmonsky: 'Don't show your ignorance. That's Latin for 'Wel-
