Slightly more than 200 measures have been presented by the senate, which is about average for the upper chamber.

While citizens in all sections of the state, spurred to activity by the withdrawal of federal loan privileges, shouted into the ears of their senators and representatives to repeal the deficiency measure that had already been signed by Governor Barzilla W. Clark, battle lines were being more definitely drawn for the clash over appropriations for the conduct of state affairs.

Indicative of the trend was the defeat of a junior college bill which went down in the house, thus eliminating an appropriation of $75,000 for each biennium, and the winning of a parliamentary skirmish in the senate by proponents of increased University of Idaho appropriations, who were able to muster 32 votes against 26 who were opposed.

Meanwhile the house approved a bill appropriating $114,000 for a state tuberculosis hospital, with the proviso that the federal government would furnish 45 per cent of the total funds. U. EXPERIMENT STATION

The plant pathology department of the University of Idaho agricultural anxious to have bean growers of Nez Perce, Lewis and Latah counties, which comprise the major beangrowing area of northern Idaho, give a new bean variety a thorough field trial this year. The new bean is "Norida," a small white bean, and is the result of a 10-year breeding program in which the Idaho station has endeavored to develop a variety suited to this region. It is a dry shell type bean, and therefore not suited for use as a green bean in home gardens. Three members of the plant pathology staff, Dr. C. W. Hungerford, plant pathologist, Dr. W. H. Pierce and J. M. Raeder, associates, have cooperated in producing this new bean. Any grower interested in making a field trial should communicate his request to the plant pathology department at the University of Idaho.

There has undoubtedly been time enough wasted on "silly" bills to have put through all the worthwhile legislation (radio, bull fight, divorce, gas business, bed sheet, etc.) and obviated the necessity of holding the much-talked of extra session.

Wolves End a Feud

Substitute a Sho'-Nuff Romance in the Mountains When They Trap Girl and Boy in the Darkness

The wolves kept up their hellish cries and circled nearer and nearer, their yellow eyes gleaming through the darkness.

By WILLIAM HORNE

CINCE the first Hartley killed the first Vaughn in 1869 at a whisky still on the Little Tennessee River in the Smoky Mountains of North Carolina and started the bloody Vaughn-Hartley feud that has taken a toll of a dozen lives, there has been no let-up in the bitter hatred between the two clans until that dark night a few weeks ago when Fate took a hand in the form of a pack of hungry, bloodthirsty timber wolves in the fastness of the Smokies.

It was near sundown when young Tom Vaughn tucked the squirrels he had killed into his belt and started down the narrow, winding trail that led into the gap to his Herman Blum, Mrs. Gus Kruger, home two miles south on the edge Suddenly from off in the darkness came the howl like that of a dog. Tom Vaughn stopped in the path. It came again, and this time it was answered by another dismal, wild call father away. Timber wolves!

Hears Woman Scream.

The eerie cries came again, this time seemingly closer together. With these came a third cry-a cry so shrill and so piercing and so terror - filled that Tom Vaughn gasped and crouched low in the trail. For this third cry was the scream of a terrified woman, and it came from the darkness scarcely a hundred yards off to the right.

The listening man opened his mouth and gave a long, piercing yell that echoed hollowly back from the invisible cliffs behind him. He strained his ears, listening, and presently his call was answered. He called again, his voice lowered: "Where are y"?" The answer came from the dark: "Right by th' creek-who is it?"

Soon he stood looking down into the white face of a girl. In that thick blackness he could not tell her identity. So he leaned over and peered at the light patch in the darkness.

"It's me," he answered, trying to pierce the dark with his eyes. 'Tom Vaughn. Who air y'?''

There was no answer from the prone figure against the bole of the tree at Tom Vaughn's feet; merely a gasp of surprise.

Feud in the Blood.

"Who air y"?" He leaned down and peered at the white blob that was the girl's face. "Air y' hurt?" "My ankle," came the final answer, now in a voice that was slightly husky and just a bit harsh. 'It's broke, but I don't need no help o' yore's. Tom Vaughn-" The boy gasped his surprise and slowly straightened up stiffly. "Marian - Hartley -'' he whispered, hoarsely, anger welling up in his

"I-I fell down from that rock," she said then, and her voice trem-

"Jest when did y' do hit?" he asked. "Long afore sundown," she answered, "but don't ye mind, Tom Vaughn. I don't need airy bit o' help from no Vaughn." Her voice was trembling with hate, and at these words the boy slowly stood up, his lips tight against the retort he was about to make.

Then he turned and looked down at the dim form against the tree lack'n ye air, till th' doctor c'n be bole. "Hartley er no Hartley," he had." said in a tight-lipped voice, "I got Tor t' git ye out o' hyah, Marian Hart- | Hartley at the community church ley. These varmints is gittin' plumb

Planning Escape.

There came no answer from the girl, and Tom Vaughn fumbled through his pockets for matches. Finally he realized with a thumping heart that he had no matches. He had used the only one he had a few moments before.

He turned and spoke down at the girl. "I ain't got ary a match, Marion Hartley," and his voice was grim and hard, "an' I ain't got but a handful o' shells fer my gun, nei-

"I c'd set thet laig o' yore'n," he told her finally, "eff'n I had er light t' see hit by.

"Hit's pain'n' purty bad," the girl answered with a groan. "I druther ye'd git me out o' hyah, Tom Vaughn.'

But Tom Vaughn couldn't do that. He was strong enough to carry the slim girl in his arms all right, but he knew that once he left the shelter of the creek bank those bloodthirsty wolves would drag him down and have both of them at their mercy.

So instead of answering her, he fired a quick shot at a pair of gleaming eyes a dozen feet away, laid his rifle down and cut some lowhanging branches from the oak limbs above his head.

Attacked by Wolves.

As midnight passed other wolves joined the sieging band, and their arrival seemed to make the firstcomers more courageous in their attacks, which now grew more frequent and ferocious.

Finally one of the boldest made a sudden lunge at Tom Vaughn. He had been standing looking back over the low creek bank when it happened, and it was the girl's quick scream that brought him pivoting about to meet the charge. He swung his rifle as he turned and felt the barrel of it thud against the animal's head.

Fangs at His Throat.

Just as the wolf charged, Tom Vaughn blindly pulled the trigger of his rifle. The heavy bullet tore through the savage brain and the animal fell limp at l.is feet.

He swung wildly about and fired a shot at random toward two more that had ventured to within six feet. He heard a yelp in answer as the bullet struck, but both animals whirled and disappeared snarling into the darkness.

Tom Vaughn had always known that a hungry pack of wolves will turn cannibal when one of their number has been killed or mortally wounded, so he grasped the dead animal by both hind legs and flung it into the brush.

The Feud Is Over.

Presently he heard a low snarl in that direction. Then another and another, until finally the night was filled with growls and snarling yelps as the hungry pack fell to to devour the body of their dead com-

Finally, after hours that dragged like a hideous nightmare for the watching boy and the feverish, injured girl, dawn came to the swamp.

He gathered the girl in his arms and went on down the trail toward Lake Santeelah and his home. "Ye live better'n five mile from hyah," he told the girl by way of explanation, "an' 'tain't but three mile from my house t' Tapoco. I reckon as how 'twon't be no harm take a Hartley woman t' a Vaughn house eff'n she's broke up
