Idaho Scenery By Jean Rist

The scenery of Idaho is wonderful! It's lakes are like saphires set in the emerald beauty of the forests. Wild animals and birds live in the forests, and the lakes and rivers are alive with fish.

Between the mountains, the rivers leap and dash on their way to the ocean.

The thing of most beauty, I think, in Idaho, is the Snake river and the Snake River canyon. This river flows for awhile as a little trout stream. After a few miles it leaps over a number of falls, then flows peacefully along as tho' resting for its mad dash through the canyon of the Seven Devils.

While it rushes madly along beating itself to a foam, the deep glory of the Canyon reflects in changing forms in the water.

The Snake River Canyon must tor. surely hold as much beautiful scenery as the Grand Canyon of the ings at 7:30.

The Crater of the moon is another of Idaho's wonders. Where firey rivers once flowed, perpetual ice now forms floor and walls of huge caves and hangs like giant daggers from the ceiling.

Idaho tourists, instead of traveling through other states looking for beauty should "See Idaho First."
