Why Hunt Alibis?

A stranger in our country, reading current political attacks on American industry, could not be blamed for coming to the conclusion that the executive management of our industries has not only been a dismal failure, but a menace to the nation.

Would yet met and no future plans had you hire him, because of his outstanding business record, to manage your affairs? Chances are ten to one you would not. And yet, thousands of John Joneses in high political offices, are today, in effect, ursurping practically every phase of operation and management of American industry, even though they have had no experience with the industries lodge observed Wildey's birthday taken to St. Joseph's hospital on they presume to manage, and do not assume any financial or tax responsibility.

Is it possible that such "political management" of industry has anything to do with the reticence of

Mr. Joe Citizen to invest his money? Possibly the American investor has become fearful of political tinkering with business. Possibly this simple reasoning has something to do with the "general feeling of fear" which blocks investments for expansion of industry under a trend which takes management away from those who put up the money and hold the sack.—Industrial News-
