EDITORIAL

Well, folks—The government is marching ahead on its plan to prime the pump again, Congress is still "congressing" as usual and as usual doing nothing of importance. The grand jury is still investigating, and political candidates are "throwing their hat into the ring" as regular events. It won't be long until they'll be as thick as cats around a fish market, and all for the same purpose—a desire to get their fingers in the political pie that is being passed around, which is sometimes known as "pork barrel politics."

By the way—have you tried our ice cream lately. You'll find it even more delicious than in the past. It's good and good for you.

Judge (to prospective jurymen: "So you've formed an opinion of the case?")

P. J.: "Yes, your honor, one look at that man convinced me he was guilty!"

Judge: "Heavens! Man! That's the prosecuting attorney!"

"Have you ever been kissed in a taxi?" he asked.

"Well," she replied with a touch of indignation, "do I look like a girl who has never had a ride in a taxi?"

"My dear brother," said the preacher, "you must learn to love your neighbor as yourself."

"But my wife won't let me," the convert replied. "My neighbor is a pretty grass-widow."

At Flint, Mich., the Buick works were blockaded. No member was allowed to enter until he had paid his union dues. The churches might try that.

An extemporaneous speech is one where the speaker doesn't know what he is going to say before he starts and his audience doesn't know what he said after he finishes.
