"The Texan"

One of the outstanding pictures to be shown on the silver screen for several years is "The Texan," the story of the unhappy days that fell upon the Texas of a shattered Confederacy, when a horde of unscrupulous northern carpetbaggers descended upon the populace. Die-hards, particularly a pretty girl, and a fire-brand rebel, still unconquered, look to Mexico as an ally in continuing the struggle. A southern soldier, predated the orators, realizes there is no north, no south, rather a united country and all must pull together. Almost instantly starts the struggle against the unscrupulous officials of the state—and makes the story, founded on history, one of the best in years. It is of the same class as "The Covered Wagon" and "North of 53." The featured players are Joan Bennett, Randolph Scott and May Robson. This splendid picture will be seen at the Kendrick Theatre this coming Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights.

All that is left of the horse and buggy age is the buggy whip masquerading as a radio aerial.

Bear Ridge Evening School

About 20 of the men were present at the Community hall last Thursday evening to discuss the importance of purebreds (or high grades) vs. scrubs.

There was some doubt in the minds of those present as to what a purebred animal actually was. Some believed that purebred and thoroughbred was one and the same thing. In reality, thoroughbred is a breed of English saddle horse, and is in no way related to other livestock, such as beef, sheep or swine. When speaking of livestock we should use the term purebred, when thinking of fullblooded stock.

After the question of what a purebred, grade, and scrub animal is, had been discussed, the reasons why purebreds are superior was taken up. In a recent survey made by the United States Department of Agriculture among 200 farmers who owned approximately 25,000 head of both purebreds and scrubs, they were much in favor of the purebred animals for the following reasons: Better conformation and quality; better selling price; increased production; stock more saleable; more profit for feed consumed; owners interest and pride (results in better care and greater returns); greater uniformity; early maturity; greater ease in fattening and finishing; increased vigor; easier to handle.

This question was asked: "Which is the easiest to improve, a scrub herd or a good herd?" After much discussion it was decided that a good herd could be improved but very slowly, while a scrub herd could be improved by leaps and bounds.

Since Thanksgiving falls on next Thursday it was decided to meet on the day following at the regular time—7:45. Our topic for discussion will be, "The Beef Calf, Its Growth and Development."

It was unanimously voted that on Thursday evening, Dec. 1, following the meeting, that the wives and friends be invited and an evening of entertainment be enjoyed.

They Can Give Thanks

Nine Idaho counties will have occasion to give thanks a week hence because they have not had any traffic fatalities in their domains since the first of the year. This is the unscarred record of those counties, up to this time, before Thanksgiving. They are: Blaine, Butte, Camas, Caribou, Clark, Custer, Lincoln, Madison, and Valley. Minidoka reported its first automobile death for the current year when a pedestrian was killed a half mile east of Rupert on election night. Butte is the only county in the state that has not had a fatality charged to it since the keeping of records started in 1935. Power county held a similar record to Butte up until two months ago when a resident was crushed to death beneath an overturned truck. Camas and Power each have one fatality over the almost four-year period. This is based upon records from the Law Enforcement Department.

With the ruling by the National Safety Council that the two women who were drowned when their automobile was driven into an Ada county canal last June, was not a traffic accident, that brought Idaho's total fatalities for the year to 143 for the ten months, comparable to 151 for the corresponding months in 1937. Up to the middle of November there were eight deaths, while the entire month a year ago had 13 deaths, which brought the 11 months total to 164. With still seven days to go this month, there is a possibility that the month's toll may be held down, even though the Thanksgiving holiday, with the home-comings, football games and festivities is near.

While there has been about 50 per cent reduction in motor vehicle collision fatalities so far this year, yet it has been the state's worst year for automotive crashes. The grade crossing accident at St. Anthony on the night of Nov. 12 brought the number of fatal accidents to 12, with 20 deaths. Thirty pedestrians have been killed on the highways during the ten and one-half months. Liquor and speed, accompanied by recklessness contributed to the year's fatalities. Practically all months of the year and particularly when the road and weather conditions called for careful driving upon slippery roads in stormy or foggy weather, this has been true.

Not a Solution

There seems to be more to solving the cotton surplus than laying a thick comforter of same in the top of each pound box of chocolates.

SUN SPOTS

(By Wickliffe R. Smith)

The largest and most interesting member of the solar system is the sun itself. It is more than a million times as large as the earth. It is so large that if the earth were hurled into it there would be no apparent increase in the size of the sun. But perhaps that which appeals to students most strongly in the study of the sun is the subject of sun spots. Much has been said in newspapers and magazines lately (the last year or two) regarding these phenomena. Even students in our high schools and colleges have been taking a keen interest in observing the big spots, or holes, in the sun. One reason for this exceptional interest is, doubtless, the large number and unusual size of the spots. Many of them may be seen easily with the aid of only a smoked glass to protect the eye. Sun spots were noticed 800 years before the invention of the telescope in 1610. As many as 200 spots have been seen at one time, while occasionally none at all are visible. There are two well known belts of sun spots—one on each side of the sun's equator. They are seldom found less than five nor more than thirty degrees north or south of the equator. If these big holes in the sun are as deep as they are believed to be, many worlds the size of the earth could be thrown into them and hidden from view.

Spots Are In Motion

Spots travel from east to west across the face of the sun. It requires about two weeks to make the trip. They then appear again on the eastern edge of the sun and are easily recognizable, though they may have changed in form slightly. They often increase their speed as they near the center of the sun, but after that they slow down again and disappear on the western edge. The spots near the sun's equator travel more rapidly than they do farther north.

If you are a close observer of sun spots you will notice that some of them do not move in straight lines, but curve either to the north or south. The curvature may be caused by the inclination of the sun's axis to the ecliptic. Then, too, you will notice that some spots move in elliptical paths. This is caused, perhaps, by the gigantic cyclones that pass over the surface of the sun with almost inconceivable velocity.

It is not known definitely just what effect sun spots have on the earth, but astronomers agree that they affect conditions here in many ways, and perhaps much more than we now realize.

The planets affect the sun, some of them because of their size, and others because of their nearness to it. When the giant Jupiter and the smaller, but closer planets, Mercury and Venus, are grouped on the same side of the sun the effect is very great. At such times the sun spots are larger and more numerous and they also appear deeper.

It is very probable that millions of years ago, when the earth was glowing hot and the moon was inhabited, the earth contained spots similar to those we see on the sun now, though a thousand times smaller.

GRAIN MARKETS STEADY — OFFERINGS IN DEMAND

The past week, as light offerings by growers in nearby producing areas tended to offset the only moderate demand from the local trade. Prices held practically unchanged compared with a week ago. On Nov. 18, California wheat No. 1 hard white wheat was quoted at San Francisco at $1.22 to $1.25, with No. 1 soft white and No. 1 white club at $1.20 to $1.22 1/2 per 100, sacked. Oregon Washington No. 2 soft white and No. 2 western white were quoted at $1.20 per 100, in bulk.

Pacific Northwest barley markets developed additional firmness on all feeding grades during the past week and prices at Portland advanced 2 1/2c per 100 compared with the previous week. Continued fair to good local demand, particularly from Willamette valley areas where feed grain crops are short this year, was the principal strengthening market influence. Lack of selling pressure from growers was also a big factor. Barley receipts at Portland totaled 20 cars for the week, mostly feeding barley going to local and nearby mixers. On Nov. 17, No. 2 bright western barley weighing 45 pounds was quoted at Portland at $1.10 per 100, sacked.

Pacific Northwest oats markets were also fully steady to firmer in this area and prices at Portland advanced 2 1/2c per 100 during the week on No. 2 white oats, which were quoted Nov. 17, at $1.37 1/2 per 100, sacked basis. White oats from eastern Washington were being quoted at Seattle at $1.37 1/2 per 100, sacked basis. Gray oats remained nominal at Portland, where oat receipts totaled nine cars for the past week, mostly white oats.

Three Maries Who Dared

High in the hills of Haiti stood a former French stronghold, named Fort Riviere. Within its walls Haitian desperadoes, who had been driven from one position to another, rallied for their last desperate stand against the U. S. Marines. Built of rock with loop-holed masonry walls, it offered a formidable defensive position for the enemy.

Cautiously a force of marines surrounded the fort and laid their plans for an attack in November, 1915. They had no artillery. Obviously it would be extremely hazardous to attempt to scale the walls, but one of the groups found a narrow aperture in the fort where a possible entry could be made.

Upon the discovery of this breach this detachment of marines pressed forward with the ultimate objective of forcing their way through the gap and coming to grips with the enemy, whose numbers were unknown. A surprise attack through this breach seemed the most feasible plan. Yet it was so narrow that only one man at a time could squeeze through.

In the van of this group were three marines. They decided to risk dashing through the aperture. Beyond that point there was bound to be instantaneous action, grim fighting, perhaps death.

The small opening prevented any concerted assault. The sergeant and the two men who immediately followed him gamboled with their lives and won. The conquest of the out-law garrison was speedily completed, partly through the disregard of danger exhibited by the first three marines, who later were awarded Congressional Medals of Honor.

ALAK! ALAS!

Last Saturday, as you probably all know, the F. F. A. boys put on a turkey shoot in the city park, and a real crowd was in attendance. Hearing of the shoot, Ed Deobald (local nimrod) spent long hours polishing up his "gas-pipe" special, and journeyed to the shoot. After considerable mathematical calculations, in which he was assisted by others in attendance, Ed connected with the bulls-eye and departed therefrom with a fine, fat turkey. He took the bird home and established it in a chicken pen at his home to remain until needed for the Thanksgiving feast.

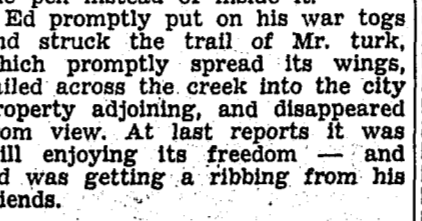

But alak and alas, the turkey had other ideas on the subject, and Monday morning when the family arose, was sitting happily on top of the pen instead of inside it.

Ed promptly put on his war togs and struck the trail of Mr. Turk, which promptly spread its wings, sailed across the creek into the city property adjoining, and disappeared from view. At last reports it was still enjoying its freedom — and Ed was getting a ribbing from his friends.

Ed And The Departing Turkey

This remarkable action photograph of Ed in full pursuit of his Thanksgiving dinner was secured for us by our ever wakeful candid-camera expert — Joe Watts!

P. S.—Tuesday morning Gerald Hill's eagle eye spotted the turkey roaming the hillside above the Herman Lohman residence. Ed promptly gathered his sons and several other neighborhood boys together, armed himself with his trusty "blunderbuss" and mounted the hill in pursuit of the elusive bird. The boys made an effort to drive it into the Herman Lohman barn, but the "pesky critter" promptly set its wings and departed again for the tall timber across the creek. Ed raised his trusty "blunderbuss", took careful aim, and fired. The turkey came down in a locust tree in front of the George Brocke residence, dead. Ed says that good marksmanship was responsible for its demise, but Wade Keene says Ed couldn't hit a flock of barn doors, and the only reason he has the bird is because it underestimated the distance across the creek, crashed into the tree and broke its neck. But anyway, Ed has the turkey — at last.

Well, folks—the jolly Christmas season is approaching, and with it comes a little ditty that seems to fit the occasion very nicely:

Santa's Complaint
The New Deal has ruined my business,
I have had to part with my deer and sleigh,
My shops are all closed by pickets,
And my workmen on W. P. A.

With the couple of dollars I salvaged,
I bought a donkey, all decrept and slow,
And so when you see me this Christmas
I'll be out on my ass in the snow!

Old Maid: "D you think I am too old to dance the Big Apple?"
Wag: "Too old? Certainly not! Anybody is young enough to dance it who isn't old enough to know better!"

Gus: "You say your laundry reminds you of a preacher?"
Bob: "Yes, it is always bringing things home to me that I never saw before."

"I hear you lost your temper?"
"Yes, but she'll be back."

On display in our windows you will see the very latest in oven glassware — round dishes, square dishes, oblong dishes, of all sizes and descriptions — with and without lids — and all are very necessary items in anyone's kitchen. Glassware is easy to clean, sanitary and economical, for it gives an even distribution of heat throughout the whole dish.

On display, also, are many of the very latest types of aluminum cooking utensils, both in oven and atop-the-stove types. You are cordially invited to see them.

Both kinds are modestly priced.

Stoves for Winter

We are today displaying a number of the newest models in heating stoves. The parlor furnace, in its new styles, makes a real addition to anyone's home. Prices are within the real of everyone. Come in and see them.
