IDAHO CONFRONTING SERI-IUOS 'HOPPER PROBLEM

Confronting Idaho in 1939 will be the state's biggest and most serious grasshopper problem, believes Dr. W. E. Shull, entomologist with the U. of I. agricultural experiment station and state leader in the federal-state cooperative hopper program.

Based on the 1938 fall egg survey conducted by the Idaho station in cooperation with the U.S. bureau of entomology and plant quarantine, Idaho will need to spread poison bait on 225,654 acres of crop and adjacent land. For this job 1,124 tons of bait, to be supplied as part of the nation-wide hopper campaign, will be needed. In making an egg survey entomologists count the eggs in thousands of samples of soil from fields in hopper-infested areas. These egg surveys have proved highly accurate as a basis of forecasting future hopper populations.

The state grasshopper picture includes four rather serious "hot in which severe injury to crops will be certain unless early control is done. Counties in which the situatioin is most serious include Bear Lake, Caribou, Franklin, Oneida, Bannock, Power and ley in the southwest; Nez Perce, 24, 1854, in Maryland. With his Clearwater, Lewis, and parts of parents he moved to Nebraska when gion; and Boundary in the pan-

The 1939 hopper campaign will be essentially the same as that for 1938. he explains, except that no more unmixed ingredients will be given to farmers for them to do their own mixing. Central mixing stations will be established in each county where all of the bait will be mirxed before it is delivered to the farmer. Estimates for the 1938 hopper campaign indicate that for every dollar expended in hopper control work approximately $90 worth of farm crops were saved.

Between now and the hatching Raby. season, which normally begins in Mai April, Dr. Shull is sponsoring a series of district educational meetings with county agents, county commissioners, and others involved in the hopper program. Now he is sending to officials in each county results of the 1938 egg survey in their county, an estimate of the amount of poison bait needed in 1939, and general outline of how the campaign should be organized.

The principal need during 1939 is for widespread cooperation among farmers in scattering the poison bait, particularly in the regious where there aren't enormous populations of hoppers now," says Dr. "If nothing is done in those large areas this year there is every reason to expect enormous increases and heavy crop dagames in 1940."

Validity Of $5 Auto Fee Questioned Boise-C. W. Larson, former democratic state senator from Ada county, has questioned the constitutionality of the proposed $5 automobile license fee. Larson pointed to the issuance of bonds by many highway districts to be retired by their share of automobile license fees.

"It is my contention," he said, "that where bonds were issued definitely upon that source of income, that any legislative act affecting or decreasing this source of revenue would plainly be unconstitutional.

Finland Pays Installment

The treasury's debt soared to new high of $39,400,000,000 Dec, 15. This occurred when investors paid for $730,000,000 of new bonds and notes sold by the government.

Meantime another war debt payment day rolled around, and nothing was received except from Finland, which remitted it's $232 935 installment in full as usual.

Hungary made a small partial payment of its post-war debt, with a reminder that it is still awaiting consideration of its offer of Feb. 7 to make a debt readjustment.

The total amount of debts falling due from 13 nations was $160,217,-334. Previously due, unpaid debts total $1,891,489,906.

Leaders Expect Change In Law A news dispatch from Washington,

D. C., under date of Decembeh 18, says: Farmer rejection of new deal marketing controls for next year's burley and dark type tobacco crops led many members of congress to predict today that the present farm aw would be changed.

The tobacco marketing quotas were rejected in voting conducted among the growers Saturday. Their defeat gave the agriculture department a score of four losses and but one victory in referenda on sales controls for 1939 crops. In similar elections conducted the preceeding Saturday, growers of flue-cured tobacco and rice rejected quotas and cotton farmers approved them.

Congressional leaders generally agreed that the referenda wound have a strong influence on the attitude the new congress takes toward the farm problem and existing legis-Proponents of the $5 license fee lation, but opinion varied as to what action the lawmakers would take. According to the latest report given out on the liquor sale given out on the liquor sale in Idaho, it cost, the state $621,946 to sell $7,621,708 worth of hard liquor. Salaries amounted to $394, 298. Each of the three commissioners is paid $4,000 each annually. The central office is maintained at Boise and 28 stores and 81 dispensaries

MARKETS SEASONALLY DULL PRICES ABOUT UNCHANGED

Seasonal duliness prevailed in do-mestic markets during the week ended December 16, and prices were not materially changed, states the Bureau of Agricultural Economics in the Weekly Grain Market Review. Wheat turned slightly weaker toward the close of the perioid influenced by some improvement in winter wheat prospects and also by weak-ness at Liverpool where increased offerings of Southern hemisphere wheat were a depressing factor, Corn was firm early in the week as a result of a good domestic and export inquiry but lost most of the gain as offerings increased and prices of Argentine corn at Liverpool dropped below quotations of United States corn. Oats remained firm while barley held steady in cash markets despite declines in futures. The general wheat situation turned slightly weaker as offerings of Southern hemisphere wheat increased and outturns above expectations were indicated in Argentina and some sections of Australia. The Argentine Minister of Agriculture estimated the Argentine wheat crop now being harvested at opproximately 316 million bushels or 25 to 30 million bushels over recent trade forecasts.

If the official estimate is realized, able surplus of about 225 million bushels—the largest surplus since last year. The year 1937 closed the record crop of 1928-1929. No with a total of 178. "For Idaho to hold this year's rec- from Australia but average to good

Gray oats remained nominal. Steady trading at Portland was reflected in receipts of 13 cars for the week. Demand from the Willamette valley continued to absorb large proportion of current offerings in this area. Supplies of oats in eastern Oregon and Washington, which areas have been furnishing most of the supplies needed in the valley this far this season are becoming rather light, and some feed oats have begun to move into this area from Montana. The Minneapolis oats market fluctuated mainly in sympathy with corn and although the market sold down somewhat from the top for the week, showed fracitonal net gains from a week ago. Cash receipts were light and demand was fair to good. On Dec. 15, No. 3 white oats were quoted at Minneapolis at 25c---28c per bushel. Cash oats were unchanged at Kansas City to one fourth cent higher, with a ready demand for the limited open market offerings. No. 2 white oats were quoted nominally at Kansas City Dec. 15, at 281/3c to 30c per bushel.

The San Francisco oats market developed a somewhat firmer tone chiefly influenced by strength in other markets and light local offerings. Central California demand however, was only fair. Red feed oats were quoted at San Francisco Dec. 15. at $1.25—1.35 for sample grade, with No. 2 red oats at $1.55-1.80 per 100 sacked.

The control of communicable diseases continues to be a problem of major importance in Idaho. There is still much to be desired although there has been a marked improvement in reporting of diseases during the past two years. Considerable trouble is encountered because of the unwillingness of persons to report such conditions in their own families, either because of the mildness of the disease, the lack of knowledge of the disease and its complications, the fear of quarantine, or because they do not realize the need for prompt and adequate care and con-

Responsibility for control of this problem is divided between the profession, the public, and the official agencies. Each has its part to play, and each must cooperate by assuming its full share of responsibility for the preservation of health and the control of disease, in the home and in the community, if we are to affect any appreciable improvement. The early reporting of diseases to the family physician and cooperation in the isolation and quarantine of contagious diseases is a very important factor in the control program. This is not only essential insofar as the health of the community is concerned, but ofttimes early and adequate medical attention has prevented serious compli-cations. Prompt attention to such a matter may be the difference between only an occasional case of contagious disease, or an epidemic.

Immunization against smallpox, diptheria, typhoid fever and whooping cough has been an important factor in reducing their prevalance in our country. This protection is especially important for infants and small children, the period during which the mortality rate is highest. Every child should be protected against these diseases before they reach the age of one year. This will give them the greatest amount of protection at the time they need it most, and reduce to a minimum the unnecessary deaths from these conditions.

"Scrooge", a Christmas Carol

"Scrooge," a Christmas Carol, by Charles Dickens, will be presented at the Kendrick theater this coming Friday and Saturday nights. The story deals with the rejuvination of old "Scrooge," a squeezing, wrenching, grasping old sinner! Hard and sharp as flint from which sharp as flint, from which no steel ever struck out generous fire, secretive and self-contained and solitary as an oyster—Scrooge!

The story opens with old Scrooge maligning Bob Cratchet, insulting his nephew, who has invited him to Christmas dinner and his refusal donate even a farthing to a charitable cause. But that night as he goes to bed the ghost of his former partner, Marley, returns to torture him with his tale of woe as a result of his miserly practice. The three Spirits of Christmas, Past-Present-Future, also visit poor old Scrooge and show him what his life could have been and what it might still be were he to amend his ways. The name of the author—Charles Dickens—is really all that is necessary to make one want to see and enjoy this splendid picture.

TT WAS foolish to waste time and material making them, John Carlson told his mother when she said she would like to make some "gingerbread dolls" for the Christmas display in the window of his bakery. No one was interested in such things any more.

Yes, he was a very good son to her—he had given her a good home. She had nothing to worry her nowno responsibility. But she would enjoy making the dolls; that wouldn't seem like work. She would furnish the materials and make them in her own kitchen. Of course could, John said.

That he was wrong, John had to admit. "We have never had so much interest shown in the window display and never sold more than we have since we put those gingerbread dolls in the window." John told a customer who had returned for a second purchase of dolls, Hulda Carlson had made not one type of doll, but different ones, and grouped them into families. "Her idea of grouping them into families is new. That's what attracted attention,' the customer said.

When John told his mother this. she smiled. It was the love and happy thoughts-glad memories-which went into the making that was the cause, she told herself. Her children had loved the sweet bits she had made for them at Christmas. Her children and grandchildren had outgrown such pleasures. but weren't there others who would enjoy those things? There proved to be many. And what joy it had brought her. No profit in money, but large dividends in joy-real Christmas joy-that of serving and giving happiness.

"That's What Attracted Attention," the Customer Said.

Dolls Of Yesteryear

Frances Grinstead

WENTY-FIVE years ago a little girl's letter to Santa Claus went something like this: Dear Santa:

Please bring me a new head for my dolly. Her name is Christina. She still has a nice body, but her head has so many dents it won't last another year. I would like one this time with real hair made into curls and eyes that open and shut.

Your trusting friend, What has become of those Christmas dolls whose bodies could outlast half a dozen heads? When the if she wanted to make them she curls went straight, or the wig dropped off, or little brother Johnnie picked the wax off the eyelids, and sister was consoled by promising her a new head. Mother took her to a department store where there was as large a display of doll heads as of dolls. There were china heads, metal heads, and heads of papiermache. There were heads with wigs and some without. There were those with parted lips and dainty teeth showing, while others hid their smiles behind firm mouths and staring eyes.

One thing these varied heads had in common. Their necks widened into four-square bibs front and back with holes at the corners for applying the needle to the old body. The bodies in those days were of cloth, their inner substance sawdust. Where now are those torsos that could withstand endless repairing, fresh sawdust, and new heads?

They probably found their way to the attic in time and sister was promised a whole new doll. Then her trip to the department store was a matter of deciding between a "dressed" and an "undressed" dolly. Mothers preferred the latter because they would bear closer in spection as to materials and workmanship. Dolly's clothes were easily made out of the family scrap-bag or by the willing hands of the family seamstress, who did the job for recreation. Moreover, the undressed doll cost a little less. But sister liked to linger over those in silks and satins with poke-bonnets and plumes covering their golden curls. They wore petticoats and often they held their fragile fingers in tiny muffs of mink and sable.
