

Republicans To Meet In Lewiston
 Members of Idaho's state republican committee met at Boise Monday and selected Lewiston as the place for holding the party's 1940 delegate convention, the date to be May 6. The conference was attended by 33 of the 44 counties of the state. Thus the political pot for 1940 has begun to simmer and it is predicted that before the fire goes out things will have boiled for a long time, with quite a few singed fingers and a few other parts of political anatomy somewhat tender.

You needn't ask a man's opinion of any matter, just find out how it affects his interests.

THUMB-NAIL IDAHO HISTORY
 By Glenn Balch

Some time back Jake and Eric Jansen sold their gold property on Crooked creek, in the big Idaho primitive area. The reported price was $50,000. Frequently, in mine sales, there is a big variation between the reported price and the actual price.

Fifty thousand dollars is a lot of money and at first glance it would seem that the Jansen brothers had bumped into some luck. Fifty thousand dollars for a hole in the ground. All they had to do was stake the claim and then pocket the cash.

That may be the way it looks, but the way it happened is a true prospector's story, with all the hardship and heartbreaks and disappointments that lie behind practically every successful mine and a good many others that are not and never will be successful.

Way back when the nineteenth century was still a mere infant the Jansen boys arrived at Roosevelt, then the rip-roaring queen of the Thunder Mountain gold boom. They arrived without much money but a pretty fair string of pack and saddle horses.

For a year or so they managed to make a living, working mostly in the saloons which at that time flourished in Roosevelt. Then one morning hard luck hit them right square in the face. Someone had rustled their horses.

They determined not to lose their stock without a struggle, so they armed themselves, borrowed some horses and set out on the trail of the stolen animals. The tracks lead down Monumental creek. The rugged Salmon river breaks, as desperate a country as existed.

Night found the Jansen boys in the Crooked creek canyon. They pulled off their saddles and packs, turned the borrowed horses loose to graze and made camp. During the night the horses wandered up on the side of a hill. In the morning Jake went up after them. Up there, on an outcropping of rock, he found a piece of likely looking float. It was an interesting piece of rock, and Jake was a prospector at heart, but there were stolen horses to be recovered.

The brothers went on, but Jake didn't forget that float, and a few weeks later, with their horses safe in their possession again, the two men came back to Crooked river. That was along about 1905.

They put up a tent in the canyon and began picking away at the rock outcropping on the side of the hill. They lived in the tent all that first hard winter, and when spring came they had a few feet of tunnel laboriously punched in the side of the mountain.

The years rolled on, one after another. The brothers put up a log cabin and kept punching away at the hole in the mountain. There was little or no income, but they managed to exist. More years passed. They kept pecking away, strong in their faith and indifferent to the hardship. Better than 30 years passed before they finally sold the claim.

Somehow, in view of that, $50,000 does not seem to be an awful lot of money. Thirty years is a long time. Nobody can say that the Jansens didn't earn their luck.

What are the Jansens doing today? Pecking away at another hole in the mountainside, of course.

TEAKEAN GOSSIP
 We've been having lots of rain for the past few days, and plenty of mud.
 Rev. and Mrs. Pike came over from Moscow to hold services Sunday. Only a few came out Sunday night on account of the heavy down-pour of rain. On Monday there was a business meeting. Ways and means were discussed to promote a better interest in the Sunday school. It was decided to organize a Home department, start a contest and to have teachers, officers and others interested members come early and have a prayer service before the Sunday school hour.

Visitors at the Merton Preussler home Sunday were Mr. and Mrs. Frank Johnson, Grover Groseclose, Mrs. Anna Harless and Marie and Mrs. George Kimb.

L. Clavin seems to be improving in health. We hope he will soon be able to be in his place at Sunday School, as he is the superintendent.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Groseclose and little son Arthur visited Sunday afternoon in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gifford Brown. Other visitors were Mr. and Mrs. Earl Aiken and Sam Harp and family.

There was quite a lot of excitement Monday morning about 1:00 o'clock, when telephones began ringing. Folks jumped out of bed thinking it was a fire alarm, but soon found that the phones were ringing of their own accord, or at least no one until after daylight. One lady received quite a shock by putting the receiver to her ear. At one place the phone was disconnected and an electric light bulb held to the wires, which lighted it. We haven't found out just yet what the cause was, but suppose the phone wires are too close to the power lines somewhere.

Mr. and Mrs. Merton Preussler and children called at the Groseclose and Brock homes Monday.

Most of the men attended a farmers meeting at Cavendish on Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Avery Miller visited their son, Don, and family, one day last week.

Creek Rises And Falls
 Potlatch creek has had a lot of fun the past few days rising and falling. Saturday it was up in good shape, although not approaching flood stage — Sunday it dropped — Monday it rose — Monday night it fell — only to raise again Tuesday morning — and drop again that afternoon. The ground is literally so full of water that it can hold no more, and a few hours of hard rain are ample to send it up.

Our Growing Debt
 Our per capita debt for all the branches of government totaled $59.25 in 1913; in 1938 it totaled $432.65. In other words, the worker with the smallest income, who probably delays going to the dentist or hesitates to buy a new pair of shoes because he can't afford it, owes the government nearly $500! Some day a start must be made to pay the public debt. Paying it will be painful—but less painful than not paying it, which is something all of us will eventually find out if we continue to follow the line of least resistance. Those who have subscribed to the belief that we have been getting something for nothing are due for a rude awakening, and the sooner it comes, the better off we shall all be.—Red Wing, Minn.

INTERESTING NEWS ITEMS FROM KENDRICK SCHOOLS

Try-outs for the Senior class play were held Monday night with some of the members of the faculty and ladies of the town as judges. But because everyone was so good in every part, it has been particularly difficult to decide, and at the time this was written a final decision had not yet been reached.

Next Wednesday morning at 10:15 a. m., the Idaho Pep band will present a program in the gym, to Kendrick school students and all others who may wish to attend. Mr. Mason received a letter the other day stating that Kendrick High had been included in the tour which the band plans to make, and since this news has been received, the whole school is anxiously awaiting the day.

The general public is cordially invited to this free entertainment—which we know will be well worth hearing. Don't forget—Wednesday morning, March 6, at 10:15 a. m. The much-anticipated Fathers' Daughters' Banquet of the Girls' League will be held Wednesday evening, March 6, at 6:30. The committee in charge of this affair, Barbara Long, Laurene Craig, Betty Boyd, Davida Craig, along with advisor, Miss Graham, have been doing some heavy planning, and we're sure it will prove to be a memorable event.

The next year's basketball team has been practicing with this year's, but as yet we haven't heard whether they can beat them or not. Mr. Armitage will begin practice with the baseball boys and the girls' softball teams as soon as the rains let up a bit. After all, no one plays "water baseball" at least, we've never heard of it.

Mr. Fitzpatrick (also known as a bleached Joe Louis) has begun training the boys for boxing, the following having responded to the rough treatment we hear they receive from him: Everett Farrington, Kenneth Wolf, Wallace Fraser, Louis Hunt, Joe Langdon, Felix Holt, Arnold, Bud Aiken, Delos Miller, Forky Fry, Dick Fry, Jim Kuykendall, Dean Corpton and Pete Stump. In an interview Mr. Fitzpatrick granted to the press, he stated: "As yet we have no scheduled matches but will probably have some in the spring. First, however, we will have an inter-club smoker in the gym, the proceeds to go for some badly needed boxing equipment."

The band is working on some new numbers for the Spring Music Festivals to be held in Lewiston and Grangeville. Fitz says: "They're badly in need of practice, but still they are a darn good band."

The Girls chorus are working on a few quite difficult three part songs in preparation for the Music Festivals, one of which is the beautiful "Moonlight Madonna."

AND YOU PAY THE BILL

By Glenn Balch

Inspiration for the tax study was had during the regular meeting of the state board of equalization last August. For a period of two weeks this board was in session, listening to county tax assessors and the representatives of the various tax-paying groups.

The county assessors outlined the program by which they proposed to raise governmental revenue for the coming year. They announced the assessable valuations of their respective counties. Industrial and group representatives argued their contentions before the board. The hearings were at last completed, the board adjourned and everyone went home.

Ordinarily that would have been the end of that. But the hearings, which went into every detail of taxation, in this particular instance, left members of the board with the belief that the situation could be improved.

As a result, Governor Bottolfsen decided to appoint a committee to study our governmental revenue structure. He named both Democrats and Republicans to the end that there could be no charge of politics.

Members of the committee are: The governor; Mrs. Myrtle P. Enking, state treasurer; J. W. Taylor, attorney general; Donald A. Callahan, state comptroller; and G. L. Jenkins, state commissioner of finance. Byron Defenbach, state tax commissioner and former state treasurer, is secretary of the committee.

The committee is, of course, without power to change or alter the state's tax laws in any way. Only the legislature can do that. But the board of equalization hearings convinced the committee that the problem of our tax burden can be attacked from two angles. One angle is adjustment under our present laws. The other angle is new legislation designed to bring our tax system up to date.

The committee in its various hearings has been seeking to uncover ways and methods of bringing about more equitable distribution of the tax burden under the present laws. If feasible means of doing this are worked out, it is possible that the Idaho public may feel the first benefits of the tax study next year. The improvement will be advocated at the meeting of the board of equalization next August.

The committee, however, plans to go still further and present legislative suggestions to the next session of the legislature. It hopes to point out legal methods of equalizing the burden, thus relieving those who at this time are excessively taxed.

Another interesting thing about the present study is that it is being carried on without one penny of appropriation of public funds for its support. But the various members are giving their time generously and the study is perhaps the most thorough and sincere that has ever been conducted in Idaho.

Gully Washing Season Here
 "Gully-washer" season having descended upon the northwest with a vengeance, flushing more thousands of tons of rich top soil downstream with annual regularity, the question arises anew: "What to do about it?"

Progressive farmers almost everywhere in the northwest have taken individual steps to reduce erosion losses on their places, with technicians of the Soil Conservation Service and county agricultural agents lending a hand in the establishment of effective control measures. But the erosion problem goes far beyond individual fence lines, they remind.

Usually, complete protection over an entire watershed area is necessary before individual farms can become safe from erosion destructiveness. So, just as farmers have found it necessary to get at some of their other common problems cooperatively, they are now finding it essential to attack their erosion and flood control problems in a group way.

The most effective means of conducting a cooperative program for sound land use and protection is through the medium of a soil conservation district, according to the belief of an increasing number of farmers. As a result, districts are now being considered in many counties of the northwest.

A district not only insures more effective results through united application of individual self-help, but it offers farmers and livestock men a systematic and more effective means of calling upon state and federal agencies for auxiliary assistance in solving land-use problems.

The district program is under administration; leadership of the state soil conservation commission, composed of H. E. Nagle, of Parker, chairman; J. M. Isaacson of Malad; and Dean E. J. Iddings, director of the University of Idaho agricultural experiment station. State Coordinator R. N. Irving, of the Soil Conservation Service at Moscow, is an advisory member.

Educational assistance is provided by Arnold Poulson, Idaho state extension soil conservationist with other agricultural extension workers.

Makes Great Economy Record

More than 400,000 miles lay behind this 1937 Chevrolet coupe when the state of New Jersey issued performance figures on it prepared by the state highway auditing bureau. In three years of 24-hours-a-day operation, the unit averaged 16.7 miles per gallon of gas. Average operating cost, which included gas, oil and grease, tires and tubes, parts, repair labor and depreciation, was only $0.150 per mile. Left to right in the photo above are Frank C. Young, supervisor of equipment and transportation, New Jersey state highway department; Frank W. Devereaux, assistant superintendent of plant and equipment, and T. Willard Emmons, chief mechanic.

WE NEED MORE CONTENTED COWS
HAROLD THOMAS, Editor

EDITORIAL

Well, Folks—Seems like it just can't quit raining. Boy, the old Potlatch was doing a real job of roaring Tuesday morning — and we hope that's all it does, just roar. Springs certainly shouldn't go dry this year, or pastures lack for early moisture, at least.

By the way, have you noticed how the wheat market has been going up and down, up and down the past few weeks? Rather like a "Jitterbug cutting a rug, isn't it?" But that's one thing you don't have to worry about with old bossy — cream is cash and cash is king. Perhaps it isn't as spectacular as wheat marketing, but it means cold cash.

By the way—Have you tried Pride O'The Potlatch Creamery butter? If not, why not? Remember, we sell milk and cream. Ice cold, it's obtainable at our place anytime.

Teacher: "Tommy, what is one-fifth of three-sevenths?"
Tommy: "I don't know exactly, but it ain't enough to worry about."

A girl's ambition used to be the kind of a person that people looked up to. Now, she prefers to be the kind they look around at.

"So, you're a salesman now, Sambo? I suppose you stand behind the products you sell?"
"No, sah, boss. YoYu see, Ah sells mules!"

The following letter was received by a company which manufactures corn syrup:

"Dear Sirs—Though I have taken six cans of your corn syrup my feet are no better now than when I started."

Milk is good for you!

Agricultural Conservation Program

Latah county farmers will find the 1940 Agricultural Conservation program gives them many opportunities for improving their farms during the coming crop season, according to H. F. Koster, chairman of the conservation association.

"The first copies of the 1940 AAA handbook, listing the practices which farmers may carry out under the program this year, have arrived in the county office, the committee announced.

"The program encourages farmers to carry out their regular soil-conserving practices, such as seeding alfalfa and pasture grasses, but it places more emphasis on other conservation practices which farmers haven't done so much with in the past."

In dryland areas, practices include strip-cropping to prevent wind erosion, contour planting to control sheet erosion during run-off, and terracing following.

Farmers can earn up to $30 over and above other AAA payments by planting stands of forest trees for windbreaks, farm woodlots, and erosion control along live streams. Any farmer, no matter how small, has a minimum soil-building allowance of $20, which he may earn in the AAA farm program this year.

"There are many other practices in the program designed to fit specific farm conservation problems. Any farmer in the county will benefit by a talk with a county or community conservation committee member on how the program can be fitted to his own farm."

Many of the farmers already have worked out their 1940 "farm plan and estimate sheet" which shows them how they can earn their 1940 conservation payments with good farming practices which they need on their farms.

Any farmer who hasn't worked out a farm plan sheet yet should contact the local committee.

Straw For Erosion Control

If you have an old straw stack that you don't need for feed or for any other purpose, don't burn it, or just let it stand out in the field — you can make good use of the straw for erosion control.

Straw, as well as pine needles, leaves and other mulch material can be made to save your soil.

Soil layers have a pat slogan for gully control: "Seed it, fertilize it, mulch it and watch the grass choke the gully to death." Of course the doctrine won't apply to very large gullies, but the principle is the same.

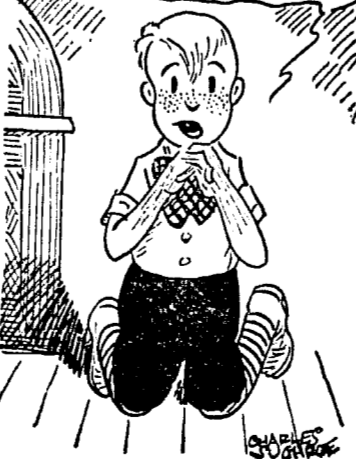

Experiments have shown that straw mulched fields hold three to four times as much water as bare plots. The mulch takes up more water, and more water sinks in on all soil types thereby.

Roads Without Bottoms

Dirt roads in this section of the country are almost impassable, in fact, unless well drained and ditched they can't be driven over at all — for the almost continuous rains of the past few days have so filled the earth with moisture that it can hold no more — and a sea of soup results.

Carbon Monoxide Gas Deadly

The deadly carbon monoxide gas is not poisonous, but kills by depriving the tissues of life-giving oxygen, says the bureau of safety.

Haemoglobin, the red coloring matter and oxygen-carrying element of the blood, has nearly 300 times as great an affinity or attraction for carbon monoxide as for oxygen. Since normal air contains about 21 per cent oxygen, the presence of only one three-hundredths of that amount of carbon monoxide is sufficient to saturate half the blood haemoglobin and remove it from circulation as far as its oxygen-carrying qualities are concerned — if breathed for a time.

At rest, a man uses only one-third of the oxygen carried by the blood — during muscular exertion, two-thirds. A man at rest may live even though his blood is one-third saturated with gas, but violent exercise may cause collapse, since the haemoglobin remaining free from the gas may prove insufficient to provide the necessary amount of oxygen. At fifty per cent saturation collapse will probably occur, even at rest.

The delicate nerve cells of the brain and other organs of the body cannot survive if deprived of the all-necessary oxygen, and there is danger of permanent injury if the gas be inhaled for an extended time.

An engine running in a closed garage provides one cubic foot of carbon monoxide for each minute, for every 20 horsepower.

SEE THAT SHELL!

ONLY that small section of a horsehide from over the animal's hips contains the inner layer or "shell." It's a tough substance much like a cow's horn and almost as hard and stiff when tanned the ordinary way. When tanned by Wolverine's exclusive triple tanning process, however, it makes uppers soft as kid and soles flexible as bamboo without losing one iota of this unique leather's wear defying toughness. No wonder Wolverines are comfortable as house slippers yet give you months and miles of extra wear that saves you plenty on work shoes. Why not stop in soon and try on a pair of these wonderful Wolverines?
