Judge Peterson goes on to say

We haven't arranged any definite program at this time, but we plan to have two or three speakers to make short talks; two of whom are quite old timers; also some musical numbers and community singing of old-time songs.

"There will be a picnic dinner at noon and the program will be in the afternoon. Coffee will be furnished for the dinner."

The winter wheat harvest was delayed further by showers in the southwest and in the central valleys but cutting made good progress elsewhere. At the close of the week haryest had begun in southern Indiana, Illinois, Nebraska, Maryland and Virginia. In the southwest harvest made rapid progress in Oklahoma and Texas. Cutting was becoming general in Kansas and was beinning further west. In Europe, the weather was favorable for spring grains in the Balkan countries, but prospects for winter crops continued unsatisfactory with indications that wheat supplies would be much below last year. Harvesting was under way in Italy but was a week or more late. Recent crop reports indicate sufficient wheat for home needs but expected outturns are somewhat under last year. In western Europe, beneficial rains relieved dryness but prospects continued below normal. Condition of the crop in the Scandinavian countries is also unsatisfactory. The scarcity of wheat in Spain was being relieved by shipments from Argentina. Some rains were received in the dry Volga area of Russia but the condition of wheat was reported irregular and only a small surplus above domestic needs was expected above trade agencies. Bohemia, Moravia and Slovakia winter killed crops have been replaced by spring seedings, but the yield of the winter grains was expected to be much below normal. In Argentina excessive rains, particularly in southern areas, retarded wheat seedings but a large acreage is still in prospect. Commercial stocks of wheat in Argentine at the first of June were placed at 92,-146,000 bushels. Wheat seeding was still backward in Australia because

Business Good At Philadelphia

Philadelphia businessmen glanced lappily over preliminary figures and ventured a guess that visitors to the republican national convention in that city spent $12,000,000; ate 90,000 hot dogs, drank 140,000 bottles of soda pop and smoked 108,000 packages of cigarettes.

Complete figures were not available but George Elliott, general secretary of the chamber of commerce, asserted business was "fully up to expectations." Earlier he had announced Philadelphia should realize $12,000,000 from its second political convention in four years.

Chief beneficiaries were central city hotels and restaurants, jammed during the five-day conclave.

Telegraph companies reported that newsaper reporters sent 2,500,000 words describing the convention; a taxicab company (Yellow Cab) of-ficially estimated 15,000 calls daily were received and handled from the convention hall vicinity.

The heavily loaded train left Vollmer and was lost control of on the first steep grade, two miles this side. The crew then began to realize the perilous position, and in bill at the Kendrick Theatre this response to signals from the engines "clubbed" them, but without avail. Their hope then was to gain control sary to say anything about Gene over the train on a level stretch of and Smiley as every picture fan track about four miles further. Around curves and over bridges they sped, with the friction of the brakes on the wheels making a blaze of fire that illuminated the whole canyon and struck terror to the hearts of those who saw it and knew what it meant. The entire distance of 12 miles was covered in ten minutes, so that at this end the speed must have been terrific. The scene of the disaster shows this to be true.

Train Broke

When the train reached a point about one mile above town, four cars broke loose and left the track, going over an embankment about fifty feet. Just before the train broke Brakeman Budge stepped upon the first of the four cars and was making his way to the rear ena when the cars left the track, precipitating him down the embankby the undersigned administratrix of the estate of W. The remainder of the train sped on down the grade like a flash of lightning, and with its heavy roaring noise attracted the attention of those living in sight of the track, who were just in time to see the terrible accident. So great was the momentum of the train that when the curve was reached the track was carried on a straight line from the road-bed and the train went off into the river with the track at a right angle. The brave crew stuck to their posts herocially and met their death doing their duty. The bodies of Engineers Ogden and Bain 24-5x and Fireman Peterman were recovered soon-after the wreck, that of Ogden being horribly mutilated, while Bain's neck was broken, but tank, $15; 1 good work horse, his body was not disfigured. The distance between Kendrick and Vollmer is 12 miles and the fall is said to be 100 feet to the mile. A particularly sad feature of fire-man Earl Bradshaw's death is his response to signals from the engines the trothal to Miss Bannie Worthing for brakes, the brakemen doubter to moscow Their nuptials were to have been celebrated soon.

Engineer A. E. Bain was well known in Kendrick, and fired for some time on this run when Kendrick was the terminus of *the branch. He was known as an industrious and faithful employee. He was a member of the I. O. O. F. lodge, and the members of that fraternity in Kendrick acted as a guard of honor and escorted his remains to the train when they were shipped to Spokane Saturday. A large beautiful wreath of flowers were placed upon his remains by the Daughters of Rebekah. He carried an insurance of $2,000 with the A. O.

The coroner's jury sat behind closed doors, and rendered a verdict that attaches the blame to no one and called it an unavoidable accident. On this question there is a wide difference of opinion existing, which will no doubt be brought out in the settlement of the results of the disaster.

As usual there are numerous rumors current as to what the men said before leaving Vollmer. One is that the engineers were fearful of the results and told a party that, if they took the train down they could come down and gather them up.

Imagine the thoughts that came to these men as they sped down the mountain side, crossed bridges, rounded curves and the station almost in sight; the last curve reached and then the awful, awful moment, that the next was destruction. God only knows the anguish and burden of their last thought.

It may be only a matter of ppinion or a business proposition with some people to care for the dead as one would a side of beef, but that doesn't make it so that all share the same opinion. No wonder corporations are sometimes called "heartless."

Imagine two engines and sixteen cars of steel rails piled in an area 100 feet square and you have the picture drawn-all it lacks is the horrors of reality.

The dismembered foot and lower limb of Earl Bradshaw was found this morning about twenty feet from where the body was found.

Well, Folks—Here it is the Grand and Glorious 4th of July, our national Independence Day and may it be Independence Day in all the ages to come. We have but one suggestion to offer to those who don't approve of this day, who would prefer another system of government — go where that man or that government is! By the way, harvest is on its way, that means threshing season, and by gölly, we are going to have two crops to thresh this year—our grain crop and our bl-annual crop of political candidates. Let's be mighty careful who we choose folks—for these are truly times. are trying times.

Postponing the Evil Day

The debt limit of the nation has been set at 45 billion dollars, and some of the statisticians seem to be sure that it is now that much. Dexterous bookkeepers might subtract paper-profits on unused appropriations and get the administration over the hurdles till late in the present year—even without imposing new taxes. But the rate of spending so far this year, and approval to new fancies and facts make it definitely sure that the debt limit will be insure that the debt limit will be interest that the sheep are.—Virgil.

THE SUMMER HEAVENS By Wickliffe R. Smith

studded sky at night it is hard to earth. realize that each of the beautiful stars we see is a sun similar to our own sun in many respects; though many of them are larger and a few smaller than ours. Some are hotter and others are cooler; some older while others are younger. Then, too, every color we know is represented in these far-away suns. It is very probable that each one we see, and every one of the billions of others beyond the reach of the naked eye, or even the most powerful telescope, has a number of inhabited worlds revolving about it, just as our own sun has nine or more such worlds within its grasp.

The distance of these fixed stars, or suns, is far beyond our comprehension. Let us think of it in this way: If we could travel as fast as a telephone message goes, we could go around the earth more than seven times in a second; could go to the moon in less than two seconds, while eight minutes would be required to reach the sun. If we had relatives on all the planets in the solar system we could visit each of them and get back to earth again in a few weeks. But if we wanted to go to the nearest of these fixed stars it would take about four years to make the trip. A journey to some of the far-away suns would keep us going for more than a million years. And when we got there we could see other suns millions of light years farther on. And no end—if there is one—in sight yet.

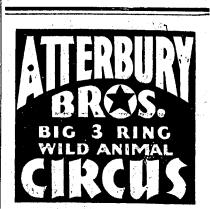

Let s study for a little while about the planets. These are worlds re-volving around the sun. The earth is one of the nine known members of the sun's family of planets. At this time some of the planets are out of sight, or nearly so. Mars is so far down in the western sky, as an evening star, that it is not interesting to us. Venus, the beautiful star that has been so conspicious in the western sky for several months, is now between the earth and the sun and cannot be seen. But it will soon appear in the eastern sky as a morning star and will be very brilliant for several weeks. Right now the most interesting planets are Jupiter and Satrun. They rise about mid-night and shine the remainder of the night. They are very close together in the sky. Be sure to see them. If you have a telescope you can easily see the moons of Jupiter and the rings of Satrun. Mercury is always so close to the sun that it is hard to see and never very interesting to most observers. Only oc-casionally can it be seen at all.

There will be an unusual number of wonderful displays of the northern lights this summer. The brightest and best will appear in the northeast from 10:30 p. m. to 3:30 a. m. They are well worth the observance. While you are waiting for the northern lights to appear you will see meteors and shooting stars A few of them will be so high above the earth that they will pass on without coming this way. That is—they will continue on their journey
