AND YOU PAY THE BILL

By Glenn Balch

In this year of 1940, public governing bodies of the state of Idaho are finding themselves in a painful dilemma. On the one hand they are having difficulty in financing those functions of government that have been accepted as highly desirable if not actually necessary; and on the other hand it is quite obvious that taxes, on some classes of property at least, are approaching that point known as "diminishing returns," which is another way of saying "confiscation."

Any question as to this latter assertion will be rapidly removed by a survey of our tax rolls. Such a survey will show that a vast amount of the property on these rolls is delinquent in tax payments for periods ranging from one year up to several. The survey will likewise establish the fact that the various counties at this time held tax-titles to large amounts of property formerly on the rolls but now deemed of less value than the assessments against it. Half a million acres of Idaho land has disappeared from tax rolls in the last eight years.

This property, being held by the counties, is no longer tax producing and this fact, in turn, increases the burden on all other property still in the hands of private owners. Such a vicious circle, if not checked, could eventually lead to a condition where the counties would own all the property and yet not have sufficient tax income to pay the court house janitor.

Difficulties of public financing are increased by the fact that there seems to be no thought toward a lessening or a decrease of the functions demanded of the various units of our government. Rather we find that, despite the many phases of our public and private lives now governmentally controlled, there is a constant exertion of pressure on governmental offices, and in some instances by governmental officials seeking to increase the importance of their jobs, for additional expansion and broadening of governmental functions.

There seems to be—and in truth there is—no end of things which the counties and cities and school districts and highway departments can do for their citizens. Needs can be found on every hand, some of them closely approaching the critical. And there are those in every community who stand ready and anxious to assert their leadership and exercise their influence by going to public officials and demanding this or that.

These groups may not say as much but they invariably infer that refusal to grant their demands will bring reprisals at the polls in the next election. Public officials are as human as the rest of us and they desire to retain their jobs. They may also present the argument to themselves that "this is what the public wants"—as evidenced by the committee's visit.

(Editor's Note: This is the first of a series of articles on the study being made of Idaho's system of public revenue. The purpose of these articles is to acquaint the taxpayers with the results of the state tax committee's hearings and investigations, with the hope that these findings will point the way to a sane and sensible solution of Idaho's tax problems.)

All during its numerous hearings, the tax committee has been alert for suggestions or ideas for reforming or improving our Idaho system to the end that some measure of relief might be given the taxpayer. Many questions have been asked and cumbersome statistics have been compiled with that thought in mind. The committee has been and is desirous of accomplishing a real and lasting benefit.

Ideas and suggestions have been brought to the committee, many of them by the very people who appeared at the hearings. Some of these theories for advancement have merit; others are obviously short-sighted. All, however, will be given careful consideration.

Other ideas have developed in the course of the hearings, from the material and information presented. These, too, will have the committee's earnest attention.

It is planned that the committee will in time formulate and publish its findings, together with such recommendations and suggestions as it believes are worthy of the consideration of the public and the next legislature. The work of assembling these suggestions is now being carried on, and they will be thoroughly discussed at future meetings of the committee.

In order that the general public may have some idea of the type of proposals that have been advanced, a few of them are listed in the following paragraphs:

1. It has been proposed that all money collected from property tax levies be expended in the county where it was collected. This proposal resulted from the contention that under the present system some sections are being taxed for the benefit of others.
2. It has been suggested that all household goods be exempted, on the theory, it seems, that so much of this class of property is evading taxation that it is unfair to penalize those honest enough to report household valuations.
3. A reduction of the gasoline tax to four cents per gallon instead of five, with no refund provision. This apparently comes from the fact that the refund feature of the present law is expensive to administer and is also being heavily abused by tax evaders.

Each of these proposals, as well as the others that will be studied by the committee, must have careful consideration for the effects of such changes in our tax laws might be far more far-reaching than appears at first glance. And most tax students agree that one of the difficulties of our present system is that it has been subjected to too much hasty and ill-considered legislation.

The Airways

Some of us old boys find it difficult and almost impossible to get in step with the pace, speed and progress of the airways. It was even so with the automobile—how we did love our horse and buggy! Now the motors have become second nature to the whole human race.

The recommendation of President Roosevelt to abandon the Civil Aeronautics authority as an independent organization and to merge that activity in the department of congress has drawn attention to the airways, not only in relation to flying in the United States, but to the American clippers that have spanned the Atlantic and Pacific oceans and brought North and South America into much closer relations and easier distances. Washington has been told during the last week or two that American airways have captured leadership in world transportation lost by our shipping business long years ago. That's going some!

Traffic Lanes Be Held

Capt. H. C. Carlson, Idaho State police, has issued a general order calling for traffic lanes to be started immediately in all sections of the state.

Gov. Bottolfsen last week asked united support for all agencies in an effort to keep the months of June and July free from traffic tragedies. He pointed out that these months have proven especially dangerous to motorists.

Carlson stated that warning tickets were to be issued, requiring proper attention to defective equipment, until a date to be fixed later, when arrest tickets will be issued for any defect considered serious. It is likely that June 1 will be the deadline.

Defective brakes and lights are dangerous, and we are going to do what we can to eliminate this hazard of streets and highways.

Be Careful How Old You Are

You are not protected by collision insurance on your car if the driver is under 14, or if driven in violation of any state law, warns Harry M. Rayner, commissioner of law enforcement.

Many complaints have been received charging that the holders of restricted licenses are violating conditions. This is especially true of those holding licenses good for daylight driving only.

Youths under 16 years of age are not authorized to drive a car at night. If they drive anyway, and are caught, their license, of course, will be revoked. But more serious, perhaps, is the fact that any damage by collision will not be covered by the insurance policy.

Parents and guardians are requested to cooperate with the state police in stopping night driving by those under 16.

Agricultural experts say 3,000,000 tons of soil are lost annually in American fields by erosion.

Parents Asked To Cooperate

Parents are asked to cooperate with the department of law enforcement to get compliance with the statutes in regard to bicycle riding, says the bureau of safety.

The bicycle is a vehicle under the law, and subject to all traffic regulations while on the street or highway. The police do not wish to resort to display of force to secure observance, except in cases where non-conformance means real danger—either to the bicycle rider or the general public.

I am voting to retain Senator John Thomas in the United States Senate because the whole-hearted endorsement of Willkie and McNary sounds good to me. (Name on file). Adv.

Regarding Right-Of-Way
There has been considerable discussion regarding who has the right-of-way on narrow mountain roads. On being questioned State Traffic Officer Harry Clark had the following to say:
"Circumstances may vary conditions, but it is generally conceded that the vehicle moving up a hill has the right-of-way, since it is safer and easier to back up a hill with motor power, than to attempt to hold the load while backing down the hill."
"However, conditions may alter this, due to which vehicle is loaded, and their proximity to a sufficiently wide place to permit passing."

Matters Of Public Concern
Representative leaders from the country's boards of trade and business men's associations recently had a convention in Washington. Emphasis was placed upon the dangers of the financial situation, growing out of the enormous volume of public spending and taxation. These business men apparently supported programs favoring national defense, by strengthening the army, navy and air forces.

Congress still grows about government "relief," and at the same time votes the money to continue that style of administration. The business men in their recent conferences urged the transfer of administration relief to states and local government, with federal aid. The argument among the business men was that the job could be improved by the states.

I am voting to retain Senator John Thomas in the United States Senate because he has more influence in national affairs than any other man we could send to Washington. He is always reliable and dependable. (Name on file). adv.

YOUNG FARMERS NEED INCENTIVE

Youth Must Be 'Sold' on Rural Life.

By EUGENE L. SPARROW

Through some hokus-pokus, characterizations of city life usually are taken from the exceptionally fortunate examples but the examples of country life are drawn from the "Tobacco Road" and "Grapes of Wrath" strata.

This custom of comparing the best of urban life with the worst of rural existence is an injustice to farm boys and girls and a threat to the welfare of the nation. Young men and women exposed through formative years to literature, art, movies and drama which distorts the true picture of city and country are likely to believe they can be happy only where success is measured in terms of millions.

The glare of city millionaires hides slums and poverty that are more typical of great cities than the immense wealth so often cited. The average amount of property accumulated by farmers is greater than the average for city workers.

Rural parents can counteract the publicity favorable to city life by teaching their children to share early in the responsibilities and the rewards of farm life. Encouragement for the boy or girl to raise live stock, gardens, or crops, and ownership of the profits help in making farming brighter for children.

Mechanical farm equipment has reduced the need for hand labor on farms and for laborers, but factory equipment likewise has reduced the number on shop payrolls. Choice of life in the city or country should be made by rural boys and girls on a basis of fact rather than fancy.

Bantam Chickens Prove Profitable

About the smartest creature with feathers is the bantam chicken. Such characteristics of bantams as intelligence, small size and finally the practical fact that they produce eggs has made them favorites in many sections of the country. Many families keep a bantam for about the same reason that they keep a dog.

The profit of the breeder and fancier is high as compared with maintenance, as these miniatures only consume one-fifth as much as the large breeds. Buyers will pay from $1.50 to $4 for a setting of quality eggs. Breeders sell single birds from $2 to $15, while fanciers readily refuse twice that price.

It's not expensive to house bantams. If they are to be raised on the ground a yard 4 by 12 feet will provide ample space for a rooster and two hens—for breeding purposes. If housing is for eggs, six or eight hens can be raised in this same space.

A number of bantam breeders are raising their stock on wire flooring. The same size pen or inclosure is used but it is raised about two feet off the ground. All ages develop well on wire flooring.

Harness Cleaning

Harness is often damaged in winter by acid bearing moisture in closed barns. The dampness rusts buckles and hardware, and the moisture weakens the leather. Rats and mice are not so likely to chew a well-oiled harness. Any good neat-foot oil compound will seal the pores in the harness and protect it against acid and dampness, while the oil also protects the metal parts against rust. Before oiling, harness should be taken apart and cleaned and weak parts replaced. After oiling, the harness should be dried in a warm room.

Rural Briefs

Erosion removes more than 20 times as much plant food as is consumed by crops.

Center punch all holes to be drilled in iron or steel. This will prevent the drill from creeping.

One way to be sure that the brine for meat curing is strong is to keep adding salt until the solution will float an egg.

Many farms have trees planted to serve as windbreaks in winter and to supply shade in summer. A good windbreak needs at least three rows of trees.

A good ration for a brood sow is about half a pound of oats daily, a small amount of some protein supplement, such as tankage or soybeans, a good legume hay and sufficient corn to gain about a pound a day up to farrowing.

The best beef cattle are purebred, says E. T. Robbins, live stock extension specialist, University of Illinois. During some years, the surplus from many purebred herds has been marketed as steers. They regularly top the market.

North Carolina Family Lives on Soy Bean Diet

It used to be that a self-respecting cow wouldn't eat the lowly soy bean unless it was exceedingly hungry. But today this once-detestable food is being made to perform a variety of dietetic functions at the home of Jay N. Judd of Asheville, N. C.

Judd is a farmer. He also is one of the growing battalion of men who have taken upon themselves the job of preaching this gospel: "The soy bean is the greatest health food on earth. Eat it." And Judd practices what he preaches.

In some form, soy bean is the base—and often an embellishment—of three meals a day seven days a week in the Judd household.

He's manufacturing about two dozen different products from the peanut-sized bean, and that's just a beginning of what he hopes to do.

Judd says there's a "gold mine" for the South in this crop if the people can be convinced that the bean is good. Extensive consumption of the bean, he asserted, has greatly improved his health.

"There was an old automobile parked out in the garage that I didn't have any use for. So I rigged it up with a mill I'd bought and started feeding this contraption with soy beans I'd bought from farmers."

Since that time, hundreds of bushels of soy beans have passed through the mill making the flour from which a strange assortment of foods is derived.

"There's soy bean milk, for instance," Judd said. "Not only does it look like cow's milk, but it actually curdles when it gets a few days old. From this milk my wife makes cottage cheese, butter and several other things."

"Then there's soy bean oil. We use that for making mayonnaise, seasoning cakes, flavoring salads and ordinary cooking purposes."

"As a matter of fact, you can almost add 'soy bean' to everything we eat."

Lad Awarded Six Cents After 'Loss' of Tonsils

Edmund Sikorski of Goshen, N. Y., 11 years old, received six cents because a physician removed his tonsils instead of stitches from a lacerated hand. A Supreme court jury awarded the damages after about an hour's deliberation.

Testimony showed the youth entered the Goshen hospital about 10 days after cutting his hand. He had been told by his physician to return for removal of stitches. His older brother, Henry, about 23, misunderstood, however, when a nurse asked if Edmund was "one of the doctor's tonsilectomy cases" and replied in the affirmative.

Edmund was then put under an anesthetic and his tonsils were removed. The physician, who had several other tonsil operations on his schedule that day, did not recognize the boy. He said the tonsils were diseased and that the operation was beneficial rather than harmful.

Fresh Stencils Important

A merchant employing a stencil duplicator to print his advertising letters and circulars is frequently asked how he repeatedly obtains such clear and uniform copies. In explanation he emphasizes the use of fresh stencils. Typing or tracing cannot be done effectively on an old stencil because the wax-like composition of the stencil has become too dry and tough. If stencils are used only occasionally, so that it is impossible to keep a fresh supply at hand, he advises keeping the unused stencils on a shelf in the cellar or basement where humidity and temperature are usually much more uniform than on the upper floors of a store or office building. If this method is impossible the package of stencils should be kept in an air-tight box.

Closet Lights Prove Helpful

Proper lighting for the closets in a home is a necessity often overlooked but one which can prove a bothersome nuisance. Solution to the problem is a single one through selection from many available methods. A ceiling light in a closet may have a pull chain or wall switch. This light may be forgotten, however, and burn for hours. A switch outside the closet door may be equipped with a pilot light which glows red when the light in the closet is on. Another satisfactory method is installation of a door switch which automatically turns the light in the closet off when the door is closed. A light which burns for a stated time and then automatically turns off is still another satisfactory method of closet lighting.

New Bathroom Accessories

For years china dominated the bathroom scene, but recently bathroom accessories have appeared in metals, plastics and glass to challenge china's monopoly. Towel bars, soap dishes and other accessories now add color and life to the bathroom, as the choice of materials has widened to fit every requirement and color. Old bathrooms may be modernized and brought up to date with these new fixtures and accessories. Not only is new beauty introduced through striking color accents, but utility is heightened in modern bathroom accessories. Many of the new models are of unbreakable and nonshattering materials.

'RICH' COW FOOD FAILS IN TESTS

High Cost Outweighs the Butterfat Increase.

By KARL E. GARDNER

Can cows be fed something that will make the milk richer? Is there such a feed? Many dairymen have asked these questions, and the practical answer is "no."

At least that's what experiments in the Cornell university department of animal husbandry indicate. Here is an explanation of what these experiments showed:

At least three feeds are known that will raise the butterfat test slightly. At Cornell, experiments were made with these three: palm kernel oil meal, coconut oil meal and ground soybeans.

A feeding of the palm kernel oil meal and coconut oil meal at the rate of 20 per cent of the grain ration gave a small rise in test. The increase was less than one-tenth of 1 per cent and thus of small importance.

Ground soybeans fed at the rate of 18 per cent of the dairy grain ration seemed to produce a small increase in fat test. Other experimenters have noted a more definite rise in the fat test when soybeans comprised more than 25 per cent of the grain mixture.

Don't be misled, however. Improvement in test is not great and the cost of these feeds rarely permits their use in proportions necessary to give a practical increase in butterfat.

The economical method of improving the fat test seems to be the same method used for several centuries. This method is selection and breeding. The bull used in the herd is of prime importance, because he influences more offspring than does any other one animal in the herd.

Varied Diet for Soil Will Restore Fertility

A well-rounded diet of plant foods for undernourished soils, rather than dependence on a single "cure-all" for restoring fertility, was urged by the Middle West Soil Improvement committee in a recent statement.

"Many farmers believe that alfalfa, clover, soybeans and other legumes are the one and only prescription for building a healthy soil," the statement points out.

"The value of legumes in crop rotation should not be underestimated. But by themselves they are not a panacea for soil ills. To be effective, they must be accompanied by adequate amounts of phosphorus and potash."

The benefits from legumes lie in their ability to deposit nitrogen in the soil. But if farmers continually increase the nitrogen and neglect the phosphorus and potash requirements, they will have a soil top-heavy in one form of plant food and woefully lacking in the others.

The results of over-emphasis on one type of plant food at the expense of others is evident in grain crops which follow nitrogen-building crops. Lodging, over-development of straw and under-development of grain are common forms of damage.

"Nitrogen, phosphorus and potash are all vital, but each must contribute its benefits in co-operation with the others. Some land requires more of one fertilizer element than another. The average farmer can determine the needs of his soil by consultation with his county agent or agronomists of his state college or experiment station. They are equipped to make specific suggestions concerning officially recommended fertilizer analyses adapted to various soils and crops."

Keep Farm Records

A farmer is a business man—and also a scientist, a merchant, a financier, a manufacturer, and sometimes a weather prophet. A business man keeps records of his profit and loss, and a farmer should do the same, says R. W. Shoffner, a farm management specialist. Money invested in land, equipment, and building is no different from that invested in stocks and bonds. Money invested in stocks and bonds is expected to return the owner a profit. Likewise, an investment in land and farm equipment is expected to yield a profit or give a return on the investment.

In order that weaknesses in the farm setup can be determined and a basis for future operations can be worked out, farm records are highly important.

Year-Round Clover Aids Pasture Needs

Sweet clover will go a long way toward bridging pasture needs if both first and second-year growths are available in the same season. The second-year plot will provide early spring and summer forage, and possibly a sweet clover seed crop. This field may then be put back to small grain in the fall or the next spring. Meanwhile, the first-year clover becomes usable in the late summer and carries over to the following year.

PROTEST

The girl that kisses cats and dogs Needs save no kiss for me; If quadrupeds have won her love, Then I'd unworthy be.

I like canines; I like felines; Both fill important places; But I do not like to see them 'slob' O'er maidens' pretty faces.

So pet your cats, pal with your dogs, And always treat them kindly; But when it comes to kissing them, Oh, do not act so blindly. —T. O. Greene.

She Knew! We learn with regret that an old school friend of ours died last week of acute indigestion. We remember his widow well. As a co-ed she frequently said: "Why should I learn to cook? All you have to do is buy a cookbook and follow the instructions."—Hutchison News.

EDITORIAL

Well, folks—Harvest is still going full blast—and the political campaign is reaching a fever heat. Political candidates, like grains of wheat, must be carefully selected from the chaff—and there's always plenty of that. By the way, have you been neglecting the income possible from your cows in the rush of harvest? That is something you can ill afford to do. For cream is cash—and cash talks in anybody's language—even Hitler's. A little better care will pay you big dividends. Try it and see. Yes, we still have some locker boxes for rent? Do you have one?

Young Fry: "I can't see how you get into that little bathing suit."
Beach Siren: "You're darn right you can't."

Mrs.: "Henry Patterson is such a nice man. He holds an umbrella over his wife, more carefully than he did before they were married."

Mr.: "Sure, why not? He pays for the dress, now."

One thing man will never be able to understand about women is how they manage to just get into the garage on the last drop of gasoline.

This sign appears on a building in Escanaba, Mich., which is being remodeled and occupied by a barber shop: "During alterations all patrons will be shaved in the rear."

"Oh, doctor," said the young lady, "will the bear show?"
"That, madam," said the doctor, "is entirely up to you."
