Bean harvest is going full tilt in the Potlatch country. The hot dry weather of the past few days has ripened the beans rapidly, as vell as speeding threshing and combining operations. A number have that they believed they could cut and pile their beans the same day, and thresh them two days later and get clean, smooth beans. We haven't heard of anyone doing it quite that rapidly, but we can well believe it could be done.

According to reports there is a larger percentage of white beans in this section than is ordinarily the case, and fewer kidney beans.

The oat harvest is now at its peak, with a considerable quantity of them being delivered to warehouses daily. The oats are said to be quite clean but light in test weight.

Public Ownership Declines Substantial declines in the num ber of publicly owned electric utiliial prices on 500 lots. Craig Bros.;
Southwick. Phone 21X1.

WANTED—Wood on subscription to the federal power program, accord-33-tf ing to a compilations of elections on public ownership questions which appeared recently in Public Utilities Fortnightly.

In 1917 there were 2,318 publicly owned electric utilities in the United States. This number declined to 2, with calf; one Jersey; one black 102 in 1939, despite the pressure of and white. Branded, but can't be the federal public power program as reflected by the campaigns by TVA and similar agencies.

Public ownership elections reached their peak in 1938, due to the ef-forts of TVA to establish itself as the dominant dispenser of electric power in Tennessee and a similar drive by the Lower Colorado Authority. Statistics show that in public ownership elections between 1934 and 1939, the total number of those voting for public ownership was less than one-third of the number voting against it. Only 2,059,371 persons voted for public ownership, against 6,985,798, who voted against it. The extent of the effect of federal pressure is to be found in the statistics for 1938, when PWA and other direct and indirect grants and funds were being distributed freely, and in 1939, when the purse strings were drawn more tightly. 1933 had 172 public ownership elections and 1939 had only 49 elections on the public power question.

Tonsillectomies John Ziemann, Southwick, had his tonsils removed here August 27. Jimmy Groseclose, son of Geo. Groseclose, underwent a tonsillectomy here August 28. Both are recovering nicely.

Public Ownership Declines Substantial declines in the num ber of publicly owned electric utili ties have taken place over a period 23-tf of 20 years, despite the impetus given public ownership elections by ing to a compilations of elections on public ownership questions which appeared recently in Public Utilities Fortnightly.

In 1917 there were 2,318 publicly owned electric utilities in the United States. This number declined to 2 the federal power program, accord-

States. This number declined to 2,with calf; one Jersey; one black 102 in 1939, despite the pressure of and white. Branded, but can't be the federal public power program as read. Owner may have same by reflected by the campaigns by TVA and similar agencies.

Public ownership elections reached their peak in 1938, due to the efforts of TVA to establish itself as the dominant dispenser of electric power in Tennessee and a similar drive by the Lower Colorado Authority. Statistics show that in public ownership elections between 1934 and 1939, the total number of those voting for public ownership was less than one-third of the number voting against it. Only 2,059,371 persons voted for public ownership, against 6,985,798, who voted against it.

The extent of the effect of federal pressure is to be found in the statistics for 1938, when PWA and other direct and indirect grants and funds were being distributed freely, and in 1939, when the purse strings were drawn more tightly. 1933 had 172 public ownership elections and 1939 had only 49 elections on the public power question.

Fishing Taken Seriously

Idahoans take their fishing and don't allow a little thing like a few years to interefere with their favorite recreation.

This fact was substantiated recently by Owen W. Morris, director of the state fish and game department, who released a statement to the effect that 763 permits to hunt and fish had been issued so far this year to persons over 70.

Of these, 37 were issued to women and 726 to men. Twenty-eight permits have been issued this year o Spanish-American war veterans, who are also allowed to hunt and fish without a license.

Since the law was passed in 1935, 6,197 permits have been issued to residents over 70 and 3,575 have been granted Spanish-American veterans. Although Civil war veterans are also entitled to hunt and fish without a license, there is no record of a permit having been issued to even one of them this year.

The oldest person to receive a permit this year was Joe Gordon of Twin Falls—a mere youth of 103 summers. Substantial progress is being made in the effort to bring good fishing "close to home" for the benefit of elderly residents, youngsters and others who are unable or unwilling to travel long distances for their sport.

According to David J. Maclay, state director of fisheries, the warm water fish hatchery being built in conjunction with the migratory waterfowl refuge at Hagerman, will be in operation this fall. Large and small mouth black bass will be produced there for stocking waters unsuited to trout. One planting channel catfish has already been made in the lower Snake and lower Boise rivers, and more are to follow. Crap-pies, perch and bluegills will also be stocked in non-trout waters.
