WAYLAND DAVIS ARRIVES HOME FRIDAY ON LEAVE

Wayland Davis of Kendrick, who was a crew member of the U. S. S. Little, sunk by the Japanese off the island of Guadalcanal in a naval engagement, returned home Friday evening, last week on a 30-day leave of absence, and brings with him the following account of the battle, taken from the Los Angeles Times of October 13.

Wayland says this account is very accurate, and tells it far better than he could, and as it has already passed the censorship, we give it to you as it appeared in that paper:

Two overage American destroyers were sunk after fighting to the last in an early morning sea battle with a Japanese light cruiser and destroyer force off Guadalcanal.

Outnumbered and outgunned, the pre-war destroyers continued to return the Japanese fire until both were burning from stem to stern and all guns had been knocked out. A large number of both crews were rescued.

Oil-smearing survivors said the Japanese apparently suffered little damage in the one-sided engagement.

The destroyers, which had been in use as escorts for supply ships operating in the Solomon Islands, were caught in the Indispensable Strait by the Japanese task force which slipped into the Solomons during the night. The Japanese poured salvo after salvo into the two ships from extremely close range.

Survivors said there were at least three Japanese ships in the attacking force and possibly five. One ship was identified as a light cruiser of the Yubari class and two others were heavy destroyers or light cruisers.

Lieut. Jack E. Gibson of Pontiac, Mich., said the American ships "never had a chance."

"We were on anti-submarine patrol of Guadalcanal," the bare-footed, half-naked lieutenant said, "when we first saw the enemy firing on Kukum. The black overcast night made it impossible for us to distinguish whether the fire was coming from a submarine or a surface vessel."

"We were preparing to open fire on the hostile craft when a flare lit up the entire area. The enemy immediately opened fire on us. The first and second salvo were behind us, the third caught us on the after deck house and knocked out our rear gun."

The doughy destroyer continued to fire with its forward gun, but the next fusillade of Japanese shells finished off that gun.

"By this time we were in a bad way," Lieut. Gibson continued. "The first shelling had torn away our steering gear, destroyed our communications system and set us afire. We were still caught in the merciless glare of the Japanese searchlights. The order was given to beach the ship as soon as the first hits were scored on us, and we were steaming out of control as we were unable to steer her."

"The salvo that hit the No. 1 gun forward bent the barrel back and destroyed it. The next group of shells hit the galley amidships and put the last gun out of action."

The fires were burning out of control by this time and the order was given to abandon ship.

"I stayed on the bridge a few minutes to make sure it was cleared of all personnel and then dove overboard. Fortunately my favorite hobby has been swimming and I went over the lee side of the ship and started to swim in the direction of Guadalcanal."

"I picked up about eight men swimming and tried to keep them all together. We sighted two rafts and swam toward them. Just then the hull of a ship loomed out of the night and I knew she must be a Jap as ours were all out of commission. She headed right toward me and I swam like hell to get out of her path. She swept past doing about 25 knots less than 30 feet from me. She appeared to be a light cruiser of the Yubari class."

"I started back to the raft when a second Jap ship bore down on me about 800 yards behind the first. I swam the other way to avoid her and was so close when she passed that I had to look up to see her deck."

"After congratulating myself on being missed twice, I turned around just in time to see a third Jap ship heading my way. It's a terrible feeling to look up and see a ship coming at you full speed seemingly intent upon running you down. The third vessel caught me in her wake and I knocked me around under the water."

Lieut. Gibson swam around until dawn when he was picked up by a rescue boat from Guadalcanal. He was uninjured and refused medical attention despite his ordeal.

Seaman Rubin A. Pickett of Mason, Tex., suffered a broken arm during the sinking of the other destroyer, but was rescued and brought ashore.

"We returned the Japs' fire as long as we could," the seaman said, but all we had after the first couple of salvos hit was the after gun and a few light anti-aircraft guns which the Japs soon put out of action. I think we hit one of their searchlights, however, with our machine gun fire."

"Our ship was caught in a cross fire from two of the enemy ships and in a few minutes she was a burning mass of wreckage. The fire started first amidships and soon swept through everything. It was a nightmare."

Rescue work continued all day and all but 14 men were saved from Pickett's ship.

Dear Friends:
Thought I had better drop you a few lines and thank you again for the paper. It is getting pretty cold in Alaskan waters, and the ocean does really get rough some times.

We play basketball once in a while, and it surely reminds me of the good old days in Kendrick.

I saw Sidney Clemenhagen up here and was sure glad to see some one from the old home town. We sure had a lot of fun swapping what little news we knew.

Well, thanks again for the paper—and I'll see you all when this war is over.

Yours truly,
Harvey A. Thornton.

Ben:
Let's get our scrap in the fight. The country needs old metal of all kinds. Folks in the Northwest are helping a lot. What can we throw into the pile?
Henry.

How to make a rusty plow cut 3-inch armor plate

SOUNDS impossible? Not a bit! All you do is melt the plow. For example, an old plow weighing 100 pounds supplies enough scrap metal for twelve 75 millimeter armor-piercing projectiles! This illustrates why Uncle Sam is urgently asking everybody to turn in old iron and steel. In response, the people of the Northwest, in towns, in cities and on farms, are going all out in salvaging scrap. In 1941, 177,985 tons of scrap rolled East and West over the Northern Pacific Railway. In the first six months of 1942, another 111,263 tons swelled this total. In addition, Northern Pacific's own shops and yards have yielded, since Pearl Harbor, 50,000 tons of old metal. This scrap, together with commercial scrap collected along our line, is moving swiftly to steel furnaces over the "Main Street of the Northwest."

Remember — This is a true co-operative, owned by the farmers and operating on the same basis as 75 per cent of the successful dairy co-operatives in the United States.

We are getting our repair work under way, and expect to rush this to completion as fast as possible.

In the meantime — remember our lockers. We have a few empty ones left. Buy them by the year. You save money that way. Ask us about it!

"And now," said the sweet young thing to the salesman, who had just put a second-hand car through its paces, "show me the depreciation. I hear it's heavy on these cars."

"As a matter of fact, madam," replied the salesman, who was nothing if not quick on the comeback, "we found it a source of worry, so had it removed."

The teacher was trying to impress upon her young pupils in the tenement district the importance of being original. She illustrated by saying:

"Mickey, repeat these sentences in your own words: 'I see a cow. The cow is pretty. The cow can run.'"

Almost instantly Mickey said: "Boy, lamp de cow. Ain't she a honey? An' I ask you, kin she take it on the lam?"

"Ever receive a shock over the telephone during a thunder and lightning storm?"

"Yes. Once I called up my wife while she was cleaning house and told her I was bringing a friend home to dinner!"

And don't forget — we want to buy your cream!
