Another Double Feature
 This week's offering at the local theatre will be another double feature, the first of these, entitled "King of the Cowboys," stars Roy Rogers, his horse, Trigger, Smiley Burnette and Peggy Moran. To lovers of the "westerns" this picture needs no further introduction.
 The second offer of the evening "The Meanest Man In Town," stars that trio of radio comedians, Jack Benny, Priscilla Lane and Rochester. If radio entertainment is any indication, this feature should be chock full of fun for young and old alike.
 In addition, the usual cartoon will be shown.

DOMESTIC WHEAT MARKETS DEVELOP WEAKER TONE

Domestic wheat markets developed a weaker tone toward the close of the week ending November 26, and prices lost most of the gain of the previous week, according to the War Food Administration. Buying interest in most grains, which has been quite aggressive during recent weeks, tapered off materially. Flour business was mostly at a standstill as handlers awaited further developments on flour subsidies and action on food subsidies in general. Steady reports of peace feelers also caused traders to mark time, and reports regarding possible suspension of import duties for 90 days also caused some unsettlement in the market situation.
 The sharp break in midwestern wheat futures markets at the close of the week was reflected in declines of 1c to 2c per bushel in cash wheat prices at Portland. Most classes, including protein hard winters and hard whites, were down 2c per bushel. The weak was rather quiet generally at Portland so far reported wheat trading was concerned, reflecting slow demand from most classes of terminal buyers and the holiday shortened week. Wheat receipts at Puget Sound and Columbia river terminals amounted to only about 490 cars, of which Portland received about 145 cars. Mill demand was rather selective and mostly of special quality lots for immediate needs. New wheat sales to the midwest were very light, although shipments on old sales were going forward in good volume. The principal feature of the cash wheat market here was the heavy sales of feed wheat to California, reported to be the heaviest for any week this season. Demand for feed wheat in the Pacific Northwest was reported being satisfied largely by shipments from Canada into Puget Sound areas. Growers were not pressing wheat for sale at country points, but offerings were reported sufficient for market needs at coast terminals. Crop conditions in the Pacific Northwest are reported as generally good.
 Cash wheat bid prices on the Portland Grain Exchange, November 26, were: soft white, $1.42; soft white, no Rex, $1.43; white club, $1.43; western red, $1.43; ordinary hard red winter, $1.42 and hard white (baart) $1.44 per bushel, all basis No. 1 grade in bulk, 15-day shipment, for coast delivery.
 The San Francisco wheat market held quite steady and recent sharp price advances were well maintained despite declines in other areas. This independent firmness largely reflected continued light local offerings to the central California feed wheat users. Stocks in important nearby producing areas were reported reduced to unusually low levels and remaining supplies were generally being firmly held. As in other recent weeks the demand from Bay region flour mills remained relatively light and was mainly for lots of outstanding quality. On the other hand, there was continued good demand from feed wheat users because of scarce supplies of corn and other feedstuffs.
 The sharp break in wheat futures came too late to be an influencing factor in the cash wheat market at Kansas City and closing cash prices were 1/4c to 1 1/4c higher, compared with a week ago, although pronounced weakness was apparent as the period drew to a close. Demand and supply held in relatively equal balance and differentials underwent no change of consequence. Absorption by milling interests regained importance, however, and storage interests were active in the accumulation of amounts to replace liberal sales of storage grain to various interests. At the close of the week No. 2 hard winter was quoted at Kansas City at $1.56 to $1.57. The nine principal southwestern wheat markets received 3,061 cars of wheat during the week, compared with 2,543 a week ago and 2,575 a year ago.
 Wheat and corn prices have tended steadily upward since 1933-1939, but gains have been less than during the comparable period of the first World War. For the crop year 1913-1914, the price of hard red winter wheat at Chicago averaged 88.8c per bushel. Five years later, in 1918-19, the comparable price was approximately $2.24 per bushel, an advance of $1.35 per bushel, or 152 per cent. For the 1938-1939 season, which in relation to the war was comparable to 1913-1914, the price of No. 2 hard winter wheat at Chicago averaged 70.4c per bushel, or about 18 1/4c per bushel under the 1913-1914 price. Since 1936-1939 the prices have gained slightly over 90c per bushel, or 128 per cent. (Ed's Note—There is a ceiling price, now, you know).

"Trading Posts" Be Established
 History will repeat itself through-out the Inland Empire with the establishment of Reddy Kilowatt "Trading Posts" at offices of the Washington Water Power company where customers may sell or purchase electrical appliances, according to the announcement of R. B. McElroy, general sales manager of the electric service company. The posts will go into operation December 6.
 "There is a shortage of electrical appliances at this time, due to wartime curtailment of manufacture," said Mr. McElroy. "However, some customers have appliances which they are not using and other customers would like to buy them. Therefore, we are setting up these trading posts, just as in the early days of this region, when the trading posts facilitated the exchange of merchandise.
 "Those wishing to sell appliances will put their price on them and leave them at the trading post, where other customers may purchase them. The company is making this service available without charge.
 Junior: "Daddy, are you sure the world is round?"
 Daddy: "I'm positive."
 "Well, then, how can people go to the far corners of the earth?"
