American Initiative Saves Lives

It is a matter of record that the medical service for American armed forces is unequaled throughout the world, and fatalities among our wounded are unbelievably low.

The foundation of such a service was an independent American medical system and a privately supported and operated American Red Cross. This combination was ready to give medical care which could not have been secured in any other way.

The blood plasma service of the American Red Cross will go down in history as one of the most remarkable life-saving activities ever re-corded. Without it, countless thousands of American soldiers and sailors would never return home.

One of the things to be proud of about American medical service and Red Cross Service is that it is a testimonial to the superiority of private initiative and enterprise in science and relief work, as contrasted with the ideals of the totalitarian state in controlling and dominating the lives of its citizens.

Blood plasma ranks as the foremost saver of lives in our army and navy. The job of the Red Cross is of blood in 1944.

From Rex Blewett, at Camp Butner, N. C., comes a letter of thanks to the Gazette. He says in part:

Dear McCreary's:
I'm afraid that this will be another letter of excuses why I haven't writ-ten sooner—but there is one thing that I want to stress more than anything, and that is how very much I have enjoyed the papers. When I was in Georgia most of them came in one bunch, and soon afterward I was transferred here and then I got another bunch last
