CASH WHEAT MARKET DULL AT PORTLAND

Declines of recent weeks in midgrains for the next two years had a strengthening influence. Lessened Canadian pressure and higher prices at Winnipeg caused thats to make good upward reaction offsetting the unsettling influence of lower corn prices for new crop shipment.

The cash wheat market at Portland did not follow the strength which developed in midwestern markets. Only slight changes were recorded in cash wheat prices here during the past week and at the as compared with last week, although soft white and hard red winter were ½c per bushel higher. The general cash wheat situation remain-ed very dull during the period. Demand was very slow at Northwestern terminals from all classes of buyers. Mills came into the market only for daugh occasional lots of special quality man. wheat, mostly to complete milling mixtures. New flour business was in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin reported slow and mills were mostly working on previous orders. On the other hand growers were not offering any appreciable amount of wheat for sale, since present current bids are below loan values, and considerable wheat was reported being placed under government loan. Wheat receipts of 925 cars at Puget Sound and Columbia river terminals were reported for the week, of which Portland had 260, were largely C. C. C. supplies and wheat for terminal storage in order to qualify under the C. C. C. support buying program. As the period ended here, the cash market was very quiet with trading generally lacking. Very little grain remains to be harvested in the Northwest. The soil is reported as mostly too dry for fall seeding. Pas-tures continue dry and there is considerable feeding of livestock.

Cash wheat bid prices on the Portland Grain Exchange on September 15 were: Soft white, $1.43; soft white (no Rex) $1.43; white club, $1.43; western red, $1.431/2; hard red winter, $1.43 and hard white (baart) $1.43, all basis No. 1 grade in bulk, 15-day shipment, coast de-

The San Francisco wheat market was quiet but steady, with prices holding largely unchanged as compared with a week ago. Mill demand was slow from all classes of trade. Offerings were light and this to light, and this, tofferings were gether with the somewhat firmer tone in other marakets, provided sustaining factors. Central California growers were marketing supplies very slowly with more and more wheat being placed under government loans. Current bids for wheat generally were somewhat below the loan basis. Offerings from growers were largely confined to wheat still in the fields and in sections where local storage space was not available for all needs. Despite the light offerings, however, supplies were easily sufficient for all local needs. Mills reported a slow flour business and confined takings of local wheat to small and scattered lots. Mill needs for high grade wheat were being largely placed in Idaho producing areas, rather than other sections. The demand for feeding wheat slackened still further with feeders turning more to barley and grain sorghums, available at lower prices.
