The cash wheat market at Portland, along with most all other markets in the country, was somewhat lower at the close of the week. The bid prices on the cash market for all soft wheat and lower grade hard wheats were 1c per bushel lower than the previous week. Prices on high grade milling wheat, both hard white and hard red, remained unchanged. The market was characterized by lack of interest. Feed wheat demands continued to be supplied by the C. C. C., and mills were interested only in specific kinds of wheat and quantities sufficient to take care of their milling requirements through the month of June. Small quantities of soft white and western red, in transit, were reported to have been booked for shipment to midwestern markets during the week. Car receipts at Pacific Northwest terminals were very light for the second week. Total number of cars reported at Puget Sound and Columbia river ports were 285, of which 99 were for Portland. Mills entered the wheat market for only occasional lots, with the rather poor offering restricting purchases. Most mill needs were still being filled by out-of-state purchases.

Prices for car-iots of all classes of winter wheat at Kansas City were based on OPA ceilings and accumulated service charges. Receipts fell a full 100 cars short of a week ago and totaled 367 cars. Only an occasional car was offered for sale on the open market. For the most part arrivals went direct to mills and elevators on old contracts. New trading was on a strictly "to arrive" basis. Mills are experiencing difficulty in securing wheat to maintain grinding operations in the face of heavy flour bookings. Public elevators are far behind on shipments to mills and on loadings of CCC wheat. Shipments for the period totaled only 390 cars. Winter wheat is in good to excellent condition and under the influence of warm weather and adequate moisture, made rapid growth in nearly all sections. However, over the Pacific Northwest area growth was slow due to coolness. It was too wet in a few sections, especially Oklahoma, where some yellowing is reported locally.

Acreage seeded to grain for the 1945-46 season will be about the same as last season, but this will vary for individual grains if farmers carry out their March 1 intentions. Increases in winter wheat and oats acreage about equal sharp reductions in barley and spring wheat acreages. A spring wheat acreage of 19,008,000 acres is planned this season. Planted acreage in 1944 was 19,335,000 acres. Based on 1937-42 average yields production of spring wheat may total 241 million bushels. This, added to the December estimate of 762 million bushels of winter wheat, would give an indicated 1945 production of slightly over a

A 2 per cent reduction in acreage to be planted to feed grains is in prospect for 1945 compared with the 1944 planted acreage. Greatest reductions are reported in barley while an increase of 8 per cent is indicated in the 1945 oats acreage. A record the hearing.
