TEAKEAN GOSSIP

(Delayed)

We have been enjoying lovely weather for some time, but are expecting rain again. Mr. and Mrs. Ned Harless of Hoquiam, Wn., and his mother, from

Cataldo, Idaho, have been here visiting relatives. Mrs. Carrie Herring was taken very ill last week and Asa Choate took her to Orofino, where she is being cared for at the Burn's hospital. Her daughter, Stella, is with J. A. Harless visited at the Carroll Groseclose home last Friday evening, while Mrs. Harless, Ned, and wife were there. The Brock family will probably not return here this fall, as Mrs. Brock has accepted a school at Whitebird. She will assume her new duties the first of November.

Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Drury of Jasper, Oregon, are visiting at the H. . Ogden home.

Grover Groseclose went to Juliaetta to spend a few days last week. Mrs. Herring was missed at Sunday School last Sunday, as she is the superintendent, but others took her place and did the best they could. We hope she will soon be back with us again.

Will your HOME OF TOMORROW Be Western Ranchhouse?

Probably the greatest contribution of the West to Amercian home architecture is the Western Ranchhouse. Adaptable to any desired size or landscape. its simple, modern lines have lasting charm.

When you plan YOUR post-war home, make it an all-electric home of tomorrow! Consider, for example, the new lamps: indirect and fluorescent: lighting—germ-killing, health-giving rays—softly illuminated stair risers—invisible light rays that cause painted walls to glow with soft and varied beauty—the electric eye to serve and protect you in many ways.

Too, you will wish television, and sound recordings on wire—push-buttons laundry—air conditioning—quick-freezing and food-storage units . . . Rapid scientific advance and Washington Water Power's low rates make all these possible for YOUR home of tomorrow!

Washington Water Power pioneered electric cooking, automatic electric water heating, electric refrigeration in Inland Empire homes of today . . . and Water Power will pioneer new electrical conveniences for your home of tomorrow
