Following the reading of the minutes of the previous meeting, business was taken up. The library was discussed again, and it was learned the committee had sent the state books in, and other books on hand would be turned over to the school on permission of the donors. Mystery pocket novels that har been donated, were sorted out and turned over to the O. E. S., who in turn sent them to hospitals for Service men to read.

The project committee presented several suggestions for the group to consider: First, giving the sum of $50.00 toward a music box for the student body, which could be used at their parties; second, piping hot water into the girls lavatory; third electric clocks for the school rooms not now equipped with them. These suggestions were discussed, and a motion put through to investigate the kinds of music boxes available and their prices. The committe appointed was Ralph Joslyn, Mrs. Ben Westendahl and Mrs. Herman Travis. At the "White Elephant" awarding, Claude Jones became its owner. A count was taken of parents present, with the fifth and six grade rooms leading. This entitled them to the traveling prize, a bowl of goldfish, for the coming month. The meeting was then turned over to Mrs. Gerald Ingle, who lead a most interesting discussion on "Parents and Teachers As Partners." Mrs. Oscar Slind played a medley of piano selections, after which Miss Betty Halseth sang two solos, accompanied by Mrs. Slind. All adjourned to the Home Ec. room for reshments at the meetings

Minor Adjustment Helps Cars Most motorists have been greatly impressed with the brilliant performance of their cars with the new postwar gasolines. However, many of them are still not getting the top performance that they could easily secure from these gasolines with slight engine adjustments. This friendly tip to drivers is offered by Clarence S. Beesmyer, vice president of General Petroleum corporation, and it affects all gasolines and all high compression motors.

The high octane gasoline necessary for best results in high compression motors calls for an advanced spark and some minor carburetor adjustments. During the war, government restrictions pulled down the octane ratings of gasoline and limited many of the "flash" ingredients. In order for cars to operate efficiently on war grades of gasoline most motorists had carburetors adjusted and if a good mechanic was doing the - the spark was retarded to lessen detonation.

Now that better high octane gasoline than ever before is available for these high compression motors an advanced spark, as well as an adjusted carburetor, is necessary to get the full power and brilliant performance which the new post-war gasolines make possible.
