"Idaho," said the 1887 pamphlet, is pre-eminently a country of the present and the future. From where the picturesque lakes of Coeur d'Alene and Pend Oreille bask in the wooded mountains of the extreme north, to where the cattle feed upon a thousand hills in the south, her vast territory is now open for exploration. Responsive to the pick of the prospector, her hills are yielding up their treasurers, which have lain hidden since the dawn of time. Her long-silent valleys are making to the husbandman a due return for his faithful and arduous toll. This mountain-locked territory, now ren-dered easily accessible, offers unsurpassed advantages to the home-seeker, the prospector and the capitalist.

Her fertile fields and inexhaustable mines, her extensive forests and unoccupied pasture-lands, her rushing rivers and her placid lakes, invite energy and enterprise to develop the resources which nature has so very lavishly bestowed."

The climate of Idaho was especially recommended to persons who had any "predisposition to consumption," harmful to patrons, according to any "predisposition to consumption," Postmaster Fred Stedman, and even though the Christmas rush is now luvial" soil "from two to ten feet

Ignorance of the rules does not excuse anyone, and serious federal charges may be faced for mailing prohibited matter.

Nine of the more common types of unmailable matter are listed below:

1. Intoxicating beverages.

2. Inflamable matter such as matches, lighter fluid, and other armound.

The Snake river gravel mines were described as "rich and very extensive," paying "from $10 to $50 per day to the hand, with prospect of 100 years of such yield."

In 1887, work horses in Idaho sold from $75 to $125; saddle horses from $25 to $60; cows from $30 to $50; beef on the hoof from 3c to 4c a pound.
