INTERESTING HAPPENINGS FROM JULIAETTA AREA

Chris Molden, 61, died early Monday morning at his home in Juliaetta, after a short illness.

Mr. Molden was born at Milan, Minn. in 1886. He was united in marriage to Laura Gunlock at Noru, Port, Canada, in 1910, and to this union two daughters were born, one daughter, Gladys, passing away 16 years ago at the age of 14. One daughter, Mrs. Albert Erdahl of Plentywood, Montana.

Mr. and Mrs. Molden moved to Plentywood, Montana in 1917, living there until 1942, when they came to Idaho, and to Juliaetta in July of 1945, where they had since made their home.

Besides his wife survivors are a daughter, Mrs. Albert Erdahl of Plentywood, Mont., three grandchildren, Robert Lee, Betty Lou and Evelyn Erdahl, and a sister, Mrs. Hans Peterson, Milan Minn.

The body will be sent to Plentywood for burial. Arrangements are in care of Brower-Wann, Lewiston.

Shower Honors Mrs. Hoisington

Mr. and Mrs. E. M. White were the host and hostess at a surprise miscellaneous shower last Sunday afternoon at the Cletis Hoisington home, honoring Mr. and Mrs. Lauren Hoisington. Mrs. Hoisington is better known here as Miss Kathryn Maund.

The honored couple received many lovely gifts, not only from those present, but many came by mail.

The afternoon was spent in visiting and playing games, after which refreshments of ice cream, cake and coffee were served.

Thermometer At 90 Degrees

Sunday and Monday were undoubtedly the hottest days of the year to date — with the thermometer hitting 90 degrees right on the nose both days — and they were characterized by local residents hitting for "the shady side of the street."

Rain would be a very welcome item — not only to wheat raisers, but to the bean farmer and the truck gardener in the canyon, for the wind, aided by the past two very warm days, has sapped the moisture from the ground.

Fall wheat is generally in good condition — but spring grain needs rain.

Another Pool Donor

Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Corkill, Kendrick are the latest donors to the Area Living War Memorial Swim Pool, giving $5.00.

Business Houses To Close

Business houses in Kendrick will, almost without exception, be closed for Memorial Day, tomorrow, Friday, May 30th.

So far as is known at this time, all other places of business will be closed for the entire day.

Final Licks On Swim Pool

Monday afternoon of this week, Jack Kuykendall, on leave from the Osberg Construction Co., and Walter and Orville Sparber, Ralph Reid and Elroy Kuykendall and Clarence Perryman, on leave from Tom Keene's building program, began putting the "final licks" in on the swimming pool and expect to have it finished by the end of this week!

Immediately upon completion of the fence erection, Otto Schupfer can begin the "final licks" on the wiring — and then it will be ready to go — and will be welcomed by young and old — but especially by the youngsters, who can hardly await their first plunge.

Treasure Island, Calif. May 22, 1947

Dear Mac and Bill: Just a line to let you know I'm getting the paper — not regularly, but it usually catches up with me sooner or later.

I want to thank you and all concerned for sending it, but right now better take my name off the list for a while. I am getting transferred to a navy diesel school, and will be on leave following completion of that training.

Thanks again for the paper, it really has been swell.

Sincerely

Mr. and Mrs. Clem Israel went down after them, and they were over-night guests at the Israel home.

Fourth Celebration In Doubt

At a special meeting of the Kendrick Commercial Club, held Wednesday evening of last week, the organization voted to suspend the annual Fourth of July picnic, held for many years.

At the same meeting the decision was reached to turn the day over to the local post of the Veterans of Foreign Wars — to do with as they might see fit, the annual dance being the only event remaining after the decision against the picnic.

It was felt that since no local music was available for entertainment during the day, or for the dance in the evening, and that new items should be worked out — the picnic should be discontinued for this year as a club project.

L. S. Thurber appointed A. O. Kanikkeberg and W. L. McCreary on a special committee to contact the Osberg Construction Co., and request the loan of Jack Kuykendall, and Tom Keene for the loan of Walter and Orville Sparber, Clarence Perryman and Ralph Reid, so that the group might complete the construction of the Area Living War Memorial Swim Pool — now that all the materials are here.

Kendrick 18 — Moose 12

Scoring in every inning but the second, Kendrick defeated the Clarkston Moose, 18 to 12, here Sunday afternoon in a high-scoring Lewis-Clark league contest. The winners gathered 17 hits off two Clarkston hurlers, and were charged with six errors. Clarkston made nine hits and committed 11 errors.

Brammer Kendrick, was leading hitter of the day with four safeties in six trips to the plate. One hit was good for three bases and another for two. R. Armistead and Don Fry, Kendrick, and Wiseman, Clarkston, hit home runs.

Batteries: Clarkston, Wiseman, Ball and Kuykendall; Kendrick, L. Trout, A. Kanikkeberg and Deobald.

In the Valley Division of the Lewis-Clark League, Kendrick now stands in fourth place, with three wins and three losses.

IDAHO HIGHWAY COSTS HIGH, ANALYSIS REVEALS

Boise — Idaho's highways cost more for maintenance during the 1944-46 biennium than either Wyoming or Nevada's, a tri-state highway department comparative analysis released this week by Associated Taxpayers of Idaho, Inc., revealed. The analysis also showed that both Wyoming and Nevada diverted a larger percentage of funds to construction than did Idaho.

The analysis, compiled by Max Yost, executive manager of the association and published in the Idaho Tax Bulletin, showed that Idaho spent $2,655,095 for construction during the biennium, while Wyoming spent $4,576,652 and Nevada $2,403,448. For maintenance, Idaho spent $4,208,439; Wyoming, $2,431,426, and Nevada, $1,626,972. Nevada has 5,593 miles of state and federal highways; Idaho 5,180 miles and Wyoming, 4,286 miles.

The average cost per mile for maintenance showed Idaho $812.43; Wyoming, $294.90, and Nevada $276. Idaho's gasoline tax is 6 cents a gallon, while 4 cents is the tax in the other two states. Gasoline taxes amounted to $9,808,475 in Idaho during the biennium; $4,251,404 in Wyoming, and $3,212,080 in Nevada.

In presenting percentage expenditures, the Idaho Tax Bulletin called attention to the possibility of difference in accounting methods and account classification, which would make accurate comparison difficult. The survey showed, however, that Idaho's highway department spent more for administration and maintenance in percentages than Wyoming, but less than Nevada.

Administrative percentage expenditures for Idaho were 2.29 percent; Wyoming, .65 percent, and Nevada 5.16 percent.

How Honest Are Fishermen?

How honest are fishermen? Mention fish and someone invariably insinuates that the truth is being brutised.

Jim Simpson, fish culturist of the state fish and game department, believes that a large majority of anglers can be trusted to stick to facts, even when they are telling of what they caught on opening day. He paid the boys and gals that compliment today as he announced a creel census that will depend on its results on public cooperation.

Assistance of sportsmen's clubs all over the state is sought in the effort to find out where fishing is good, bad, or indifferent. The department asked that fish committees of the various groups distribute cards to as many anglers as possible so they can record the number and size of fish caught, where they were landed, and how long it took them to catch 'em. "We don't have enough department men to put in the field on this job," Simpson said, "but sportsmen can put it across by gathering a lot of information."

Jokers and pitfalls surround the project like nests of booby traps. The game department is aware of them. In the first place, officials it is well known that some fishermen are reluctant to tell anybody—even their wives—where they find the best fishing. They travel week after week to "No-Tell-Um" creek where fishing is "All right."

Then there are the gents who, in past efforts at creel census, have padded the books with fictitious reports of terrible days on certain streams in order to warp the planting program. Others of the same breed have boasted loudly of some locality that couldn't possibly support a six-inch trout in order to mislead neighbors to this dry gulch while the tricksters sneak to another reservoir.

Simpson is aware of this chicanery, but he still feels that beneficial facts can come from the multitude of honest fishermen willing to take a few minutes to help the program.

"I think it would be a very fine project for the fish committees of the various clubs," he said. "I would like to caution all clubs to stress accuracy in making all their reports. A creel census that is warped to satisfy selfish desires is worthless. If submitted accurately it will be of real benefit in formulating stocking policies. Certainly all of us are interested in one thing, and that is better fishing."

A good time to start the creel census, the department suggested, is the opening day of trout season throughout the state, June 4. Here and there some waters are open now, but the big push will come in June.

Why Butterfat Tests Vary
 Have you ever wondered why butterfat tests vary in the spring? This question has never been satisfactorily answered, according to Lester I. Legrid of the Wisconsin Department of Agriculture. Writing in Hoards Dairyman he says there are a number of causes, though, which bring about these variations.

In the first place, the butterfat test in milk tends to go up during cold weather and down when the mercury rises. Widely changing temperatures in the spring seem to make the tests from the same herd vary even from day to day.

Among other causes are these: Adding fresh cows to the herd. As a rule the test is higher during the first weeks after freshening, and then gradually drops.

Irregular milking sometimes causes test variations as do changes of milkers and excitement during milking. Sudden changes in feed may also affect the test. When they first go on pasture, cows tend to test slightly higher for a short time.

Cows often increase their test slightly until they reach maturity, then gradually decrease as they grow older.

Of course the strippings have a higher test and if the cow isn't completely milked out the test will be cut down.

Exposure to stormy weather and physical discomfort tend to reduce butterfat content of the milk.

By watching all of these things a fellow can do much to keep butterfat fluctuation at a minimum. And, careful cooling at all times will help assure the dairy farmer of a correct test the year 'round.

Experimental Forest Growth

Idaho's experimental forest, consisting of 7,018 acres on Moscow mountain, has made notable progress, D. S. Jeffers, dean of the school of forestry, University of Idaho, stated last week. Plantings of 12 various species have been made in sample plots on Meadow creek, and some reforestation of Ponderosa pine seedlings is now established on the same unit. Some logging and access roads have been built. Forage use by cattle and a few small timber sales have broadened the use of the forest and created opportunities for research and experimentation, Dean Jeffers said.

"The outlook for 1947 and the years ahead is most encouraging," he declared. "The value of the experimental forest will grow and broaden in use. In Idaho the forestry problem is almost entirely one of obtaining good second growth forests. Our experimental forest at the University of Idaho can help solve that problem."

The university will attempt to demonstrate the dollar value of growing trees, as well as experiment with various plantings and conduct growth studies. All of the experimental forest was donated to the University by Idaho individuals and companies.

Last year, 30 percent of all persons killed on America's streets and highways were pedestrians. Watch while you walk.

Some Fishing Can Be Done
 Even though trout cannot take legal leaps for Idaho tackle in most of the state until June 4, there is no reason why fishermen should twiddle their thumbs and pine for the tug of a line on Memorial Day. Regardless of the fact that the rainbow rodeo does not start until little later date this year, the fish and game depart- ment noted today that a variety of fishing is on tap right now for the fan who cares to go and get it.

To begin with, the game depart- ment pointed out, Snake River is open to taking of all fish, including trout, the entire year. That takes in most of the river except the upper end in Eastern Idaho and gives the man with a hook plenty of water to work. Then there is the famous kam- loops of Pend d' Oreille lake, which has been in season since May 1. All lakes in the Panhandle can be fished now for trout and other species. Streams open later in common with most of the state.

There is open season the year 'round on bass. Fair catches are re- ported at St. Maries and in several lakes further north. An occasional largemouth is taken on a plug or bug in Payette River. Smallmouth are striking in Clearwater River. They are also legal in Bosie River up- stream as far as Barber Dam, and in Payette River up to Black Canyon Dam.

Lower drainages of Clearwater River in North-Central Idaho are being fished for trout with success that is improving with the decline of flood water. The territory has been open since April 15.

In Eastern Idaho the emphasis is on Bear Lake and South Fork of the Snake River, both of which made their bow May 1. Memorial Day crowds are expected to be large and the outlook is for better fishing than has been possible early in May.

Bullhead catfish, perch, and crap- pie are doing their level best to please anglers at dozens of sloughs and reservoirs. Murtaugh Lake in Twin Falls county, Ben Ross reser- voir in Adams county and Lake Lowell in Canyon county are bulls- eyes for the bullhead fans.

Biggest fish in the state—not ex- cepting the behemoths of Pend d' Oreille that set new records for kam- loops rainbow—are to be taken from Snake River by hardy fishermen who employ quarter-inch cord and hooks as big as ice tongs. Sturgeon are in season all the time. The bag limit is two, but it's quite enough when the fish run to 300 or 400 pounds, as is sometimes the case. Lewiston and Hargerman are choice areas for stur- geon catches. Sportsmen who have wrestled them on casting tackle are convinced that there is scarcely a harder battling fish in the whole variety that Idaho offers.

More Dude Ranches in Idaho
 The number of resorts and dude ranches in Idaho has increased con- siderably, according to Earl W. Mur- phy, secretary of the Idaho State Chamber of Commerce.

"We have just completed our first postwar listing of Idaho resorts and dude ranches, and there are more than before the war," Murphy said. "Many new dude and guest ranches

Bedrooms Need Wiring Too!

You'll be happier in your new — or remodeled — home if you've wired EVERY room for comfort. A bedroom needs more than a central ceiling fixture. You'll want outlets for a bedside lamp, electric clock and radio, perhaps a heating pad or blanket, or small spot heater. To rearrange furniture as you please without yards of extension cord, follow the Six-Foot Rule.*

Remember—adequate wiring, key to the modern home, fits your bedroom too. Whether your home is old or new, the wiring can be modernized.

*No spot along the baseboard more than six feet from an outlet.

Public Utilities Commission
With the development of Idaho and other western states' came the problem of providing water supplies, transportation facilities, and electric power and telephone services. It was found necessary to grant certain exclusive franchises to groups and individuals able to finance such gigantic undertakings. In the absence of competition, a regulatory body was set up to protect the public against any abuses which might arise and to insure adequate public service at reasonable rates. In 1913 the state legislature created the Idaho Public Utilities Commission, and in 1929 auto transportation companies serving regular routes were placed under its jurisdiction.

The commission represents the people of Idaho in hearings before the Interstate Commerce Commission and other state and federal regulatory bodies. It is charged with protecting the rights of companies licensed under it and with insuring a reasonable rate of return on capital investments. Acting somewhat as a court, the commission hears appeals from both citizens and operating utility companies.

The commission is governed by three men, each appointed for a six-year term. B. Auger, president of the commission, was appointed in 1943. He was formerly an attorney at Grangeville. W. B. Joy, formerly of Richfield, was appointed in 1945. H. N. Beamer of Halley was appointed in January, 1947, by Governor C. A. Robins.

In January, this year, the commission granted raises in rates to two telephone companies operating in Idaho, due to increased costs of labor and materials. Other cases are now under consideration.

Last year, for the first time, the company had a stripping machine operate on the Robert Keyes ranch, taking off the tops of blue grass. The harvest netted Keyes a nice profit and this year other ranchers expect to sell blue grass seed. The stripping process does not injure the crop nor cut down the feed value, while the seed brings a high price.
