(It was brought out that since the above had been compiled the Lapwai District had relinquished claim to the trict had relinquished claim to the balance of Districts No. 9 and 61, although official confirmation was lacking. It is understood that no children would be affected by the change, but the valuation of the proposed new district would be upped by about $31,461).

Jasper Nutting introduced Louis A. Boas, chairman of the Latah County committee, who in turn introduced the various county committees, before turning over the meeting to Corola Ingle also of formed by the Rev George Kengyen consolidation, emphasizing that it was to improve the quality of the educational opportunities per child—a wider range of subjects thus being offered. It would permit better school plants, with modern lighting and heating — greater social advantages through a wider contact; better teachers, due to specialization and ability to choose as better pay would be possible - and last, but not peast, better transportation facilities through modern and well equipped busses — all of which equipped busses would prove of distinct advantage to every child.

Mrs. Nell P. LaFollette, county superintendent of Latah county then read the proposed plan, naming the districts included.

He stated that the valuation of the district would be approximately $1,800,000 or a valuation per pupil approximately that of the Moscow district.

In speaking of the director districts he emphasized that every effort was made to equitably distribute them according to population, children and valuation.

The meeting was then thrown open to questions and discussions. with all present being given every opportunity to be heard. Chief dission centered around the trustee voting districts, location of schools and administration center.

In the plan offered the center was located at Kendrick. An alternate plan was presented by petition, and feeling that all districts were represented, Mr. Ingle called for a standing vote, and a count showed 100 in favor of the original plan and 44 outled. The petition, however, is to become a pust of the records of the county board.

A discussion was also held briefly on the Boulder creek edge of the proposed district, with a conference scheduled with a representative of that district and the county board. Proposed Attendance Units of the
