Tuesday night there was one of the most beautiful displays of Northern Lights that anyone could wish to see, the whole northern sky being lit with broad bands of pink, orange, pale yellow and lavendar, the display lasting for some time. So bright were the colors that their reflection could be seen in the eastern horizon.

In the lighter vein we might say that local radio dealers (Abrams Hardware and Travis Furniture) have been having a great deal of trouble with the purchasers of new "Fair and Warmer."

Tom Keene also reports a desire on the part of thermometer purchasers to bring them back and exchange them for a thermometer that won't freeze.

Everett Fraser reports that the mercury in his thermometer hit the bottom of the tube so hard it broke. He picked up the frozen fluid and took it into the house to thaw out - and when next he saw it his little grandson was using what had been in the bulb as a "shooter" in a game of marbles!

Lady Luck Leads Finders To Many Buried Treasures

Geological knowledge is handy in hunting a gold mine and archeological lore does no harm when digging for buried cities. But some of history's most exciting finds have come about through sheer chance, involving people whose minds were on other things.

The recent experience of striking English miners, who discovered valuable fossil remains while passing their "stay-down" time chipping at the mine roof, recalls the odd fact that the first black diamonds to serve industry were turned up in a door weight.

The homely, black substance, which is a form of carbon but infinitely harder and purer than coal, seemed of little consequence when it was first discovered in Brazil in the 1800's, notes National Geographic society.

Then an Amsterdam diamond cutter tried powdering a bit of it from his souvenir door weight to polish a difficult stone. It worked so well that eventually its use spread to industrial drills and other tools requiring hardness and precision.

Lady Luck often looks over the shoulders of farmers and fishermen. An Italian peasant digging a well in 1748 struck some rulns which turned out to be the lost city of Pompeli. A few years ago, an English farmer plowed up a priceless collection of early Roman silver which had been missed by archeologists digging in the same field.

Origin of Peeping Tom Explained by Researcher

First "Peeping Tom" really had something to peep at, according to historical research conducted for World Book encyclopedia.

Dr. George F. Reynolds, University of Colorado, explains that Lady Godiva, the gal who rode horseback clad only in her flowing locks, is responsible for giving our language the name "Peeping Tom."

According to the legend, the very modest and refined Lady Godiva asked her husband to reduce the taxes he imposed as Lord of Coventry. The lord snorted that he would reduce taxes on the day sne rode down the main street clad only in her birthday suit.

To her lord's amazement and the consternation of the village wives, Lady Godiva prepared to make her famous ride. The village ladies appealed to the local boys to stay indoors and spare Lady Godiva any embarrassment.

The legend relates that all the villagers went indoors and closed the shutters. The men modestly avoided even coming close to the shutters—that is, all except Tom the tailor—he peeked!

The story goes that the tailor's peeking was discovered because he was struck blind.

For centuries a fair was held to celebrate Lady Godiva's heroism, and the name "Peeping Tom" has become a standard phrase in the English language.

U. S. Seed Export

During the war, exports of seeds to Europe increased greatly despite the submarine menace and other transportation difficulties. The U.S. government became the largest buyer and exporter of seeds. From the fall of 1942 until mid-November of this year the commodity credit corporation shipped more than 367 million pounds of field seeds and many million pounds of vegetable seeds. More seed corn than any other seed was exported by the government. It was followed by other seeds in this order: Austrian-Winter peas, wheat, vetch, timothy, rye, orchard grass, cotton, ryegrass, Sudan grass, peanuts, red clover, sorghum, sugar beet, Kentucky bluegrass, and crested wheatgrass. Large quantities were also shipped of alfalfa, alsike clover, white clover, mixtures of alsike and white clover, bromegrass, meadow fescue, millet, redtop, hemp, rape, soybeans, and sunflower seed.

Study Blood Parasites

A group of scientists of the California division of fish and game and the Hooper foundation of the University of California have completed a two-year study of blood parasites in birds in the Bakersfield area. The scientists were particularly concerned with mosquito-borne bird malarial parasites, in hopes that information gained might be helpful in their studies of encephalitis in the Bakersfield area. A total of over 6,000 blood smears were obtained from wild birds during the two-year study, chiefly from areas close to Bakersfield. Analysis of the blood smears disclosed the existence in the birds of the malarial parasites as well as other kinds of parasites. Bird malaria is not communicable to man.

Beaver—Biggest Rat of All

Because he is the greatest engineer and architect in the animal kingdom, the fact that the beaver is a member of the rat family frequently is overlooked. But he is the biggest rat of all, frequently getting up to 60 pounds in weight. These amazing engineers, who were given teeth for saws, go downstream from their home and build a dam. This backs up deep waters which hide the entrance to their home and give them a good pool in which to hide from their enemies and to nail fish. The beaver lives on the bark of trees he gnaws as he cuts them down. He stacks up a woodpile for the winter and when cold weather comes he feasts on it.

Poultry Will Require Water for Winter Steady Flow Obtained With Pressure System

Farmers have tried various ways of preventing water from freezing in their poultry houses in cold weather. Some simply drain the poultry line and go back to carrying water during the winter. Others, who dislike carrying water even more in the winter than they do in the summer, appear to have devised satisfactory ways of keeping their pressure water systems working no matter what the thermometer reads.

The result of one farmer's idea is shown in the accompanying illustration. It presents one of 16 waterers fashioned from drain tiles, 2½ feet high and 12 inches in diameter. Pie plates, suspended a few inches below the top of the tiles, are used for drinking purposes and water flows into them on a continuous, year-round basis. Ordinary sink drains, located below the plates, direct the overflow into a central waste system which serves the three-story poultry house. Waste water spills over a hill a short distance from the building. The steady flow of water through the supply pipes, plus the fact that all such pipes are doubly protected by being located within conventional soil tiles, keeps them open all winter. To date, ice and snow have not retarded the waste outlet. The system's 500-gallon supply tank is served by a two-horsepower electric motor.

Ideal water heater for winter use can be installed at little cost.

Pays to Mechanize

The mechanical age is paying dividends on the farm as well as in industry, says the Farmers and Manufacturers Beet Sugar association. A century ago 64 man-hours of labor were required to produce an acre of wheat, now less than 10 hours are needed. One hundred, fifty years ago the labor of 19 farm workers was necessary to produce the food consumed by one person diving in the city, now one worker can produce for four people living in the cities.

Herds and Flocks

Milk slump usually is caused by fly trouble, poor pasture or both. To control flies, keep buildings sprayed with DDT and use a repellent type of spray at milking time. To bolster short pastures, feed grain or silage.

Mudholes for hogs, aside from harboring parasites and disease, are likely to cause animals to overheat. An animal plastered with mud, baked on by the sun, is likely to heat up in a hurry.

Mangy hogs usually bring 50 cents to $1 less per 100 pounds when sent to market. It's easy to clean up mange with benzene hexachloride.

Farm Population Drops 10 Per Cent Since 1940

Farm population of the United States declined about three million persons, or 10 per cent, between the census of 1940 and the special estimate as of January 1, 1948. The latest farm population figure of 27,439,000, however, is more than two million larger than the total for January, 1945, when many farm residents were in the armed forces or working in war plants, census reports show.

Want To Loan Your Pond?

U. of I., Moscow — Wanted: At least five Idaho farmers who will be willing to "loan" their farm ponds to the University of Idaho for the next three years in the interest of research for better farm fishing.

The university has all the ingredients for the project except the ponds. Dr. H. W. Steffens, head of the department of biological sciences.

the department of biological sciences, however, figures that out of the however, figures that out of the large number of farmers who have new ponds there will be at least five willing to make a sacrifice today in the interest of better fishing tomorrow. Moreover, he is secretly hoping the ponds will be near enough to the university so a close check can be kept on them.

Co-operators in the new project, approved by the university regents as a special research project, will include the soil conservation service, the state fish and game department, the state fish and game department, and the wildlife research unit of the university's forest, wildlife and range experiment station.

The only one who will be doing any "fishing" in the research ponds, Dr. Steffens explains, will be Thomas Coulton, teaching assistant in biological sciences. Athough an ardent fisherman, Coulton's fishing will be purely in the interest of science. He is a graduate of the University of Maine, with a widlife major and a desire to do what he can to make fishing better.

"During the past several years, farmers throughout Idaho, working with the soil conservation service, farmers throughout Idaho, working with the soil conservation service, have been building large numbers of farm ponds," explained Dr. Steffens. "Because most farmers like to fish it was only natural that when the pond was made then should want to stock it with fish. But when they asked what kind of fish to plant, how many to plant in a pond of given size, what food they needed, we found ourselves shy on answers. we found ourselves shy on answers. Seeing the large number of farm ponds and the interest in backyard fishing. Tim Vaughan, representative of the fish and game department in northern Idaho, suggested a re-search project. We all agreed with him on its value."

The fish and game department will provide bass, crappies, sunfish, perch and perhaps trout to stock the five research ponds. Different combinations will be tried in different ponds to see what species of fish get along best together and what ones produce the most pounds of fish per acre. Rate of reproduction and final balance of numbers of each species will be detarbers of each species will be determined. Annual production of fish will be calculated for various sizes of ponds.

"Farmers with ponds want to have this information and we hope to be able to give it to them," Dr. Steffens concluded.

A salesman was traveling a country road when suddenly he saw a house burning. Running up, he pounded lustily on the door until an old lady opened it. "Lady, your house is on fire!"

he cried excitedly.
"Eh?" queried the old lady. "I say your house is on fire!"

She put her hand to her ear and leaned closer. "What?" "Your house is burning up!" he roared at her.

"Oh! Is that all?"
"Well," faltered the salesman, taken aback, "that's all I can think of just now!"
