Idaho is "talking turkey" this year in a big way. Nearly twice as many birds are being raised in comparison with the 1948 crop, according to an estimate received by the University of Idaho Extension service from the U. S. bureau of agricultural economics.

Idaho's turkey output is expected to be 268,000, a whacking 90 percent increase over the 141,000 of last year. The trend is similar throughout the nation. Taking the country as a whole, the crop will be the second largest on record, exceeded only by the 1945 crop. By current estimate the national turkey population in 1949 will reach more than 41,-000,000.

Populations. The commission authorized director T. B. Murray to close director T. B. Murray to close if drouth conditions warrant at the opening dates.

Other actions included: Authorization for the director to appoint officers pending approval of the attorney general's office, and cancellation of construction plans for a log crib and earth-filled dam near calling for partial concrete construction.

Mildred Haberly, extension nu-tritionist at the U. of I., says this is the season of the year when field workers need more food than three square meals a day can furnish. It's hard for the average man to eat enough to keep him going at full speed throughout a 10-hour day of hard work.

The between-meal lunches need not be heavy nor take much time out of the work program. Sandwiches, hot or cold drinks and home made cookies are about all that most men will want in the field. Poultry Flock Care Calls for Sanitation

Good care of the poultry flock calls for sanitation, declares John Weeks, of the Auburn polytechnic institute extension service poultry division. He says it is the best way to prevent poultry diseases.

Another important thing to remember, he points out, is that the amount of heat required depends upon kind of house, kind of brooder, and age of chicks. Chicks should be kept comfortable.

man is as tiny as an average 10year-old. But when it comes to radio, Jane is a real grownup-and the youngest radio operator in the country.

Jane doesn't like to take too much credit for her accomplishments. After all, her daddy is a math teacher and one of the best known amateur radio operators in the Philadelphia area. He taught her all she knows.

But according to her father, Jesse Bieberman of suburban Cynwyd, it's a different story.

Wanted to Learn "Jane wanted to learn to be a ham," he said. "She's a bright youngster and likes everything. She's full of pep. She likes to read, likes her Girl Scouts and her piano and she likes school."

Tiny Jane, eldest of three sisters, took an active interest in radio when she was 6 years old. She wanted to know how to copy the code as it came, dot-dashing through her daddy's receiver.

So, the lessons began. When her father left for the army, she had learned to copy five words a min-

The radio training fell off. When daddy came back there was more important things than radio to talk about at first.

Last spring, Jane decided she wanted to take up her radio studies again. She and her father went to work. To pass the examination for an amateur operator's license given by the federal communications commission, she had to copy 13 words a minute and answer many technical questions. Passed Examination

Jane and her father went to the customs house and Jane took her examination.

"She was very confident." said Herbert Lipsom, the FCC man who gave her the test. "If you didn't look at her and see how small she was, you'd swear she was a grown-

"I asked her if she was nervous and I told her our testing machine that sends out code on ticker tape would probably make her nervous. "'Oh, no,' she said. 'My father has one just like it. I used to practice on it.'

"Her father went out and she took the test. She filled out her application all by herself, turned in the test and said she hoped it turned out satisfactory. The entire exam took about two hours and she went through it like a veteran operator.

The only thing that seemed to disturb her was her math. She said her father had given her special training and she was concerned about whether she'd know the answers to the stock questions."

Six weeks later, Jane received her "B" amateur radio license. That made her eligible to transmit and receive certain frequencies.

Maryland Community Famed As Chicken-Raising Center

SALISBURY, MD.-If the Delmarva peninsula, that fertile strip between the Chesapeake bay and the Atlantic ocean, had its own flag, it probably would display a haughty rooster rampant over crossed drumsticks.

Chickens are to Delmarva what wheat is to Kansas. The peninsula's broiler industry produces about one-third of the nation's supply.

Raising broiler chickens is one of Maryland's leading businesses. On the peninsula itself it ranks tops, to the golden tune of about $80,-000,000 annually.

Yet it has remained to a large extent a peoples' industry. The current huge output of about nine million broilers a year hasn't overshadowed the importance of a back yard operations.

Relatively few of the broiler growers depend on chickens alone for their livelihood. It's largely an important sideline to farming, but physicians like Dr. R. M. Knox of Salisbury, druggists, real estate men, dentists, bankers and other professional men get into the act. Knox for instance, has a 15,000 bird flock.

Famed Indian Landmark Gets New Niche at River Falls HOLCOMBE, WIS. - The Holcombe Indian, an eight-foot tall wooden figure that has been a familiar sight to river men since 1876, will continue his vigil from a special niche in the hydroelectric dam being constructed here.

The figure was carved by a former sailor, Luke Lyons, from a carefully selected white pine log cut by Jene Juvette near here 73 years ago. It was originally placed on the old Holcombe dam and was known to generations of lumberjacks who drove logs down the Chippewa river.

A flood about 1880 swept the Holcombe Indian down to Jim Falls before it was recovered and replaced. When the dam was abandoned the figure was removed to the Holcombe town hall and later to an enclosure on the river bank.

In 1950 the weathered and historic figure will be placed in a glass enclosed niche in the new hydroelectric plant.

Soap Holes Found Value in Disguise

Produce Magic Mud With Multiple Uses

Ever since Belle Fourche, S. D., was a rip-snorting cattle town at the end of the old Chisholm trail its residents have been damning the "soap holes" that plagued the Fast-riding cowboys often took a nasty tumble in this super-slippery mud and cattle were forever getting bogged down in them.

But now, like a man discovering his hives are really a blessing, Belle Fourche has found its soap holes are one of its biggest assets. Every one of them is filled with a magic mud called bentonite. It's an odorless, tasteless, soapy mud with a thousand uses and scientists are thinking up new ones every

Most of us already are using it a half dozen times a day, but almost nobody has heard of it. Men use it in shoe polish and hand cleaners. Women use it in face

Bentonite is the most absorbent material found in nature. When moistened it swells to several times its normal size. This quality makes it useful in waterproofing housing foundations and many other industrial powder, lotions, beauty cream. Bentonite also is found in many types of paint, plaster and cleaning agents. It's handy for filling holes in giant dams and for casting; moulds for molten metal. Forced down thousands of feet into the earth this magic mud lubricates; the drills in oil wells and sends the debris up to the drillers.

Its new uses and increasing popularity for its older uses all add up to a boom such as Belle Fourche hasn't seen since the gold rush.

In the past 10 years the population has practically doubled and bentonite now pours $600,000 a year into the town in the form of additional purchasing power.

Fifteen years ago Belle Fourche shipped out three carloads of bentonite. Last year its production was 6,187 carloads and this year they expect carloading to go considerably higher.

Scientists say that bentonite, a strange mixture made up mostly of dust from prehistoric volcanoes, is found almost nowhere in the world except in the Black Hills of Wyoming and South Dakota.

It is the most absorbent material nature ever has devised, they say, and a half dozen teaspoonsful will soak up a glass of water.

New pyrethrum-like chemicals that kill insects have been made synthetically for the first time in the laboratories of the bureau of entomology and plant quarantine, it has been announced by the U.S. department of agriculture.

The chemical makeup of the synthetic materials is almost identical with that of the insect-killing principle in pyrethrum, according to the chemists.

The ship that helps create jobs in Alaska

From Ketchikan on up the coast ... in dozens of towns and cities in Alaska... people greet the tanker "M.S. Alaska Standard" with considerable affection. For, over the years, she's helped Alaskans develop thousands of jobs.

Regularly she loads a full cargo of petroleum products and takes them wherever they're needed ... like some giant floating service station. She pokes her prow into rocky inlets to serve fish canneries, goes on up the coast a few miles to bring a new mine the lubricants it needs to work, stocks oil for fishermen so they no longer have to travel six or seven hundred miles to refuel when the salmon run is on.

In short, she helps both the coast and interior of Alaska develop its resources ... just as the oil industry throughout all our country helps other industries grow and people work, produce and prosper.

Safety Pin Inventor Sold Rights for $100

vears ago a Brooklyn inventor got a patent for a remarkable household gadget, with the result that nobody today remembers him, but everybody uses his product.

The man was Walter Hunt; the gadget was the safety pin.

Hunt never knew his invention may have antedated him at least 4,000 years (some say since the bronze age, more than 2,000 years B.C.) But nobody ever tried to patent it, and he was given patent No. 6,281.

That should have put him on easy street-but Hunt needed money and within the short space of three hours he had conceived the idea. made a model and sold his rights

Had Good Mind

"Hunt had a good mind, but very little practical sense," said Joseph Nathan Kane, a writer who digs up historical charcters and brings them back to life.

"He gave his inventions away to pay his debts, and he always owed

"What good would that do? I can't even buy my wife a meal of victuals.'

Suddenly Hunt lifted his head. "I have it. I'll be by this afternoon and pay you.'

Hunt hurried to his shop and rummaged around until he found a piece of brass wire about eight inches long. He pointed one end. Then he bent the wire and made a loop so that the two sides acted as a spring. He bent the other end and brought the point through it. He made a right twist and looked at what he had done. It was a shielded safety pin.

British Youth Jubilant As Candy Now Unrationed

LONDON.—Candy came off the ration after seven dreary years. This was big news among the youngsters of Britain.

Savings banks were being pryed open so the big burst of the new freedom may be financed adequately.

The confectioners' windows looked wonderful.

The conversation of the young fry, who have been limited to four ounces a week for a long as they can remember, was filled with such technical terms as:

Hundreds and thousands—gobstoppers — bull's-eyes — sherbet dabs — and, of course, lollipops and suckers.

Some large candy companies remembered that, while the ration ticket is in the discard, quite a few children haven't got a savings bank to raid. So, all around the country, thousands of pounds of candy were distributed free. One firm alone sent big boxes to 120 dependent children's homes.

A manufacturer estimated there are seven million British children of lollipop age who had never bought an unrationed piece of

'Vacuum Cleaner' Rigs Suck Oysters from Sea Bottoms

AKRON.-A new method of harvesting oysters with a giant "vacuum cleaner" rig that sweeps clean the bottom of the sea has been developed by a New Haven oyster grower in co-operation with B. F. Goodrich engineers.

The suction equipment not only loads about 1,000 bushels of oysters an hour, but catches at the same time thousands of destructive oyster drills, a boring snail which is one of the principal enemies of the shellfish. The oyster company uses a converted army FS, the type of vessel that transported supplies to military installations on isolated small islands in the Pacific. On the port side is a 40-foot length of 10-inch steel pipe to which is attached 20 feet of flexible suction hose and a six-foot nozzle resembling that on a household vacuum cleaner.

Girl Adopts Career Of Training Dogs For Hunters' Use

year-old Wisconsin girl with a faint skein of freckles across her nose and a pair of large, gray eyes is undertaking a career as a trainer of hunting dogs-something almost unheard of in this masculine dominated branch of outdoor sport.

She is Wanda Woog of Random Lake, the assistant trainer of Charles (Chuck) Morgan, handler of two national retriever champions and for many years one of the best known of the professionals in the Wanda's parents-and just about everybody else around here-were much opposed to Wanda going to the dogs, but she survived all such opposition and says, with commendable sagacity for one of her years:

"I guess that's the way it is with any woman who thinks she can do a man's work." (The ladies who rebel strenuously at those who contend woman's place is in the home have a strong ally in Wanda.)

After five years of watching the training methods of the redoubtable Morgan, Wanda decided that dog training and field trial handling was just the dish for her. As a kid in her teens she would watch the veteran at his field training chores hour afte hour, and naturally learned a lot, for she is that kind

But there was school. The folks insisted on that. Wanda thought maybe she could launch her training career after high school but mama and papa insisted on more schooling, so Wanda had another year of it at Whitewater State Teachers college. By that time she was so crazy about dogs, hunting and the outdoor life that there was no holding her back. She became Morgan's assistant.

Teachers on School Bus Held to Be Hitchhikers

RALEIGH, N. C .- North Carolina teachers can ride school busses to work if they want to but the state legislature says they're stricly hitchhikers.

A bill passed by the legislature allows teachers on the state-operated busses. They have no authority as teachers while riding, however, and drivers cannot go off the regular route to pick them up.

The law specifies that teachers must give up their seats if there isn't enough room to accommodate all the children.

Italian Bagpipe Player Delights New York Throngs

NEW YORK .- Windows are wide open again along Sullivan St. and banshee wails float once more over tenement roofs these nights and filter into crowded streets from areaways. Responsible for these hair raising harmonies are the Italian bagpipes of Roco Costello.

Costello is probably the only Italian bagpipe player left in this city, which had a few dozen such instrumentalists when he came to this country from southern Italy in 1901. He was 24 then and the bagpipes were the only possession he had brought to this country from the farms and woods of his childhood.

"When I came over," he recalled, "I play on a ship for nine days. Everybody dance. People sick there. I don't care. Always playing bagpipes." He laughed and rose from a sofa to repeat the tarantellas and polkas he had played during that voyage.

After filling the apartment and several blocks of Greenwich Village with the chords that sounded like a duet between a steam calliope and foghorn, Costello paused to show how he tuned the instrument.

He worked his fingers over holes while corking and uncorking woodden pipes and blowing into the bag under his arm. Occasionally, he would remove a bit of wax from a hole along a pipe or else apply some wax with a bone pin. The tones were sometimes quite piercing. He was surprised when asked if neighbors complained.

He snorted and beat his chest. "When I play," he retorted, "people listen."

Bobber of Horses' Tails Added to U.S. Folklore

TENSLEEP, WYO.—Mike Bernett had no idea of making history back in the fall of 1833. All Mike wanted to make at that time was a horsehair checkrein for a wild bronc. He was short of material and, being a resourceful man, he chopped the tails off five indian

It developed that the removal of the tails was a serious breach of conduct, as the only time an Indian bobs his pony's tail is when he's mourning the death of someone. There was no death to mourn. The Indians decided the only way to bring the thing to a balanced conclusion was to kill Mike.

This lively bit of Americana stems from the Tensleep creek sector near here. It is one of scores or readable incidents included in the United States forest service's history of the Bighorn national forest. In the last three decades the service has compiled millions of words on the backgrounds of its 19 forest preserves in the Rocky mountain area.

ties and councils of churches. Slogan of the campaign will be:
"Americans Demand Style — People in Europe and Asia Need Clothes!" Pointing up the idea that many out-of-style clothes are still in good condition and could be put to good use by destitute people abroad. The drive in Washington and northern Idaho will be conducted by United Church Overseas Relief of the Council of Churches, 312 Old Times Building, Seattle 1, Wash.

Interesting Animal

Never Been Claimed

During our past years here in the newspaper business we have advertised many lost and found items in the Want Ad. column, including keys, watches, rings, tires, chains, glasses, etc., and in most instances, there have been claimants — the exception seeming to be glasses, the last four pairs of these that were found and brought into the Gazette office, and advertised, never having been claimed.

This seems most peculiar to us, for it is a mystery how anyone same kind Petruchio tamed in who wears glasses can get along without them — but the glasses are still here at the Gazette.

SOCIALISM AND COMMUNISM

When the 3ritish Socialists boasted that they were opponents of communism, Winston Churchill observed that the Socialist parties in every country were the handmaids and heralds of communism. There is a theoretical difference between socialism and communism. The classical Socialists believe with complete sincerity that a nation can have government ownership of all instruments of prodution and distribution, and at the same time maintain, unweakened, civil liberties and representative government. That might be if all men had the honesty and the good will of Norman Thomas. But the point is that all men do notthat the lust for power grows as it feeds-and that socialistic governments always begin by promising, and always end by coercing. Much of the argument against socialism is based upon its demonstrated inefficiency, its wastefulness and its failure to produce promised material results. This is an important matter. But there is something infinitely more important still, and that is socialism's blighting effect on the freedom, the initiative and the spirit of the individual man. In the super-state, the greatest merit is mediocrity. The man who keeps out of Co.) trouble and toadies to his political betters is the man who goes ahead. There is no reward for taking chances, for striking out with bold innovations, for trying to do something better than it was done in the past. And that is one of the many reasons why socialism weakens a nation's

It is an interesting commentary on the world that most of the socialized nations -save those within the Russian orbit-look to the United States, the last great capitalistic power, for aid and survival. England herself might have collapsed financially had it not been for the billions she has received from America. The Marshall Plan is simply a means of using the economic strength of capitalism to help rehabilitate much of the socialistic world. And we are the only power on earth which can do the job.

Socialism is not a means of spreading the wealth, but of spreading the poverty. It is the surest way to kill the free, adventurous spirit of mankind. Despite this, the United States faces political programs pledged to extend the blight of socialism here.

Close Neighbors of Earth Discovered by Minnesotan

Discovery of a pair of stars believed to be nearer to the earth than any other star except one has been announced by Dr. Willem J. Luyten, chairman of the astronomy department at the University of Minnesota. The astronomer also reported that a tremendous atomic explosion occurred on one of the new stars last December. The new discovery, which is in the constellation Cetus (The Whale) was found, Dr. Luyten explained, by comparing photographic plates which he made at the Harvard university observatory station in South Africa in 1930 with plates taken at the same observatory in Further observation made with the 36-inch reflector at the University of Arizona's observatory at Tuscon indicated that these are among the very nearest stars, probably less than six light-years away. A light-year is approximately six trillion miles, and most stars are more than 100 light-years away from the earth.

If this preliminary determination is confirmed by further observation, Dr. Luyten pointed out, these will be the nearest stars known in space except for one and the nearest visible from most of the United States. Only Alpha Centauri, four and onehalf light years distant, is nearer. However, the earth's closest star neighbor is visible chiefly in the southern hemisphere.

Traffic Noise Tolerated More than Industry's

Although traffic noise generally is more intense than industrial noise, individuals consider it less objectionable, George Bonvallet, associate physicist at Armour Research Foundation of Illinois Institute of Technology, told the annual meeting of the Acoustical Society of America.

Bonvallet listed two factors which led to his conclusion: "1. The public may tolerate public transportation noise on the incorrect basis that it cannot be reduced, and

"2. Traffic noise, disregarding automobile horns and clanging trolley gongs, increases in intensity then decreases when the source is near the listener. Industrial noise, on the other hand, often changes abruptly. Generally it starts and stops suddenly and may be objectionable because of its characteristic quality recognizable in forging hammers, steam exhaust blasts, traveling cranes, whistles, bells,

"Factory noise outside plants is not as loud as it is reputed to be," Bonvallet said. "The few plants that make noise have given a bad reputation to industry in general."

Bonvallet pointed out that only about 6 per cent of industrial noise could be considered objectionably intense on the basis of his preliminary studies.

Sights in Arizona

The petrified forest is situated just 10 miles south of U. S. highway 66, near Holbrook, in northeaistern Arizona. Within a few miles of Flagstaff in north central Arizona are Sunset Crater national monument, Walnut Canyon national monument, Waputki national monument and picturesque Oak Creek canyon. The town of Williams, also located on U. S. highway 66, is the gateway to one of the most popular attractions in the nation—the Grand canyon. Each year thousands of people from all parts of the country and many foreign lands journey to the Grand canyon to view this breathtaking spectacle.

Overfire Jets Abate Smoke Improvement in furnace performance and smoke abatement have been shown on all types of stoker-fired and hand-fired furnaces by the use of overfire jets, William S. Major, development engineer for Bituminous Coal Research, Inc., Pittsburgh, reported in a fuels session of The American Society of Mechanical Engineers. He said maximum benefits from jets are most likely to occur on spreader-stoker fired furnaces. The use of jets has not only been effective in substantially reducing smoke density, Mr. Major de-clared, but it has increased boiler and furnace efficiency, reduced soot and slag deposits on boiler and economizer surfaces, reduced both the quantity and carbon content of the cinder carryover, shortened the flame and reduced the final temperatures when surfaces are of the same degree of cleanliness and enabled furnaces to operate with slightly lower excess air without unburned combustible gases.

New Finishes in Textiles Fabrics are appearing on the market today which offer the consumer value, durability and high fashion never before available in the history of textiles. It can be expected that these new fabrics will be available in increasing quantities of "finishing." For example, it is not only possible to obtain washtesian water, 20 acres prove that 50 acres pasture with never fail springs — $6,500. E. O. HELLO, THERE FOLKS:

About That Holiday:

Well, Folks, now that the long Well, Folks, now that the long Labor Day week-end is over and the resultant headaches for many have subsided, let's go back to drinking that good old "Potlatch Chief" brand buttermilk. The drink "that carries no regrets." You not only find it refreshing and delicious, but it's nutritious, too he gure you have at least too. So be sure you have at least a quart on hand all the time.

About Cottage Cheese:

Often feel the desire for a salad "that's different?" If you have, try a nice pineapple ring, topped with "Potlatch Chier" brand cottage cheese, topped with a bit of mayonnaise, a sprinkle of paprika, and the whole bedded down in a crisp lettuce leaf. Man, it's good.

Now's the time of year when a sizzling stack of hotcakes and maple syrup just hits the spot — but what good are they without lots of sweet butter — and so, be sure that you have plenty of "Potlatch Chief" brand butter on hand all the time. It's the tops for a topper.

About Milk:

Yes, every adult should have at least a pint of milk every day — and every growing child at least a quart. But when you buy milk, be sure it's "Potlatch Chief" as it's pasteurized for your protection

Betty: "Did you hear about the man who sat up all night trying to figure where the sun went when it went down?"
