found convenient to adopt and perpetuate. The truth is that the Russo-German war exploded despite Moscow's unlimited efforts to appease the Germans.

The Kremlin's one overt aggression was the invasion of Finland, undertaken because it seemed so easy and, moreover, launched at a time when the rest of the world was the Baltic republics in 1940 through intimidation. It grabbed the satellite countries with the tacit consent of its "democratic allies." It conquered China from within, largely through the default of American statesmanship.

None of these grabs involved the slightest risk of a showdown conflict challenging the whole Soviet military strength and economic resources. There is no reason to beblieve that this pattern of conquest without war, so successful and so cheap, will suddenly be jettisoned for Napoleonic adventures. Soviet Russia since the war's end has had the physical capacity to overrun all of Europe but has not guests of Mr. and Mrs. Robert done so. She might have swallowed up Finland, smashed the Berlin airlift, reinforced Greek Communist guerillas to the point of victory, taken Iran in a week. Most significantly, she could have over-whelmed Tito's Yugoslavia, the most serious threat to her totalitarian hegemony. She did none of these things for the plain reason that they packed the possibility of a real war to a finish.

Nothing has happened recently to change the picture. True, the Kremlin has apparently acquired the atom bomb but it knows that the United States remains superior in this weapon and, more to the point, has the ability to deliver it. U. of I., Moscow — Any farmer who destroys a colony of swallows—barn or cliff—actually is killing some of his best friends, declares Thomas D. Burleigh, bird specialist with the U. S. Fish and Wildlife service, stationed at the university. On his field trips last summer, gathering data for a book on the birds of Idaho. Burleigh noted a general anti-swallow sentiment among Idaho farmers. It traces to a belief

HELLO, THERE, FOLKS:

Here we are right in the middle of another basketball tournament - and we want to say right now that we're with the Tigers, 100. percent. We know they will put up a clean, hard scrap, win or lose — but we think they'll win. But folks, don't let tournament excitment make you forget that another forkful or two of hay for "old bossy" will get you just that much more cream — the more cream the more money — and the more money the easier it is to pay the entrance fee at the tournament. Try it for yourself. It's easy to prove.
