Lots And Lots Of Colds
Americans have 500 million colds a year, taking an economic toll of $2,000,000, according to facts released this week by the U. S. Public Health service. "This common cold is only one of the many winter enemies that encounters everyone from the crib to coffin," the report said. Some of the others are influenza, bronchitis, ear infections, sinus trouble and pneumonia. These are all respiratory diseases and are caused by many different germs.

"Because you have just had a cold is no reason you won't catch another," the report emphasized. Two out of three people have three colds a year, and two out of eight people have four colds a year. Wet feet, drafts, chilling, exposure to bad weather, were not marked as causing colds, but as weakening the body's resistance to a cold. Following or during a cold, other serious illnesses such as pneumonia, tuberculosis or mastoiditis may gain a foothold.

Just as there are favorable conditions for germs; strength and number of the germs, and low resistance, stemming from undernourishment, fatigue, or chilling of the body, there are conditions unfavorable for germs. The best ways to avoid catching colds are to: (1) Avoid people with colds as much as possible; (2) Beware of fatigue, avoid overwork, get plenty of rest, exercise moderately out-of-doors; (3) Keep feet warm and dry; (4) Keep out of drafts; (5) Eat a well-balanced diet.

If you have a cold, help yourself and others by staying at home, eating light foods and calling your doctor if necessary.

Proper Milk Cooling Necessary for Grade Warm Milk Excellent For Bacteria Breeding

Milk must be cooled properly in order to be classed as Grade A. Unsatisfactory cooling can make good pasture, a healthy herd and observance of all health and management rules look mighty sick. To preserve quality, milk should be cooled to 50 degrees or lower soon after it is drawn. Milk is cooled in one of three ways on the farm: by water, ice and mechanical refrigeration.

Electric milk coolers are thermostatically controlled and use from 25 to 30 KWH per month to cool 10 gallons of milk per day. Even they, however, might be improved. One attempt to do this is illustrated in the accompanying photograph. It shows a farmer setting a timer to operate an extra agitator on a conventional cooler. By means of this special equipment, he starts building up the ice bank in the cooler the minute the milk cans are immersed. There is no waiting for the escaping heat from the milk to set the cooling mechanism in action.

Small Acreage Farmers Practice Conservation

Small-farm operators are beginning to change their belief that soil conservation is a luxury they can't afford. Thousands of small farms are now practicing all-out soil conservation with exciting results.

Back in the 1930's, a farming magazine recalls, farmers were told to cut down on corn and small grain. The idea was to keep more of the land in grass and most of the rest in hay crops most of the time.

After giving soil conservation a try, thousands of operators of small farms have now concluded, the magazine finds, that one can raise more of everything. Some have doubled production in just a few years under soil conservation practices.

Broilers Need Water

Broilers need water to put on weight. Laying hens need it to maintain satisfactory egg production. And they need it all year round—winter and summer.

In years past, poultry waterers required almost constant attention during the winter. Often the battle against ice was fought with steaming kettles of water.

One method of overcoming this problem is presented in the accompanying illustration. It shows the installation of a heat lamp over a common type of waterer. The warmth produced is sufficient to keep the water free of ice as well as to prevent litter from becoming wet around the waterer.

Dry Silage Sometimes Contains Few Vitamins

Dry silage, which has been subjected to long-continued, high heat of fermentation, has little carotene of Vitamin-A content left in it. Carotene usually is badly needed to supplement the other rations.

Seed Crops Worth Money
Idaho's seed crops of red clover, alfalfa and beans are highly regarded throughout the major producing areas of the nation. Eugene W. Whitman, University of Idaho extension agronomist reported on his return from the annual meeting of the International Crop Improvement association at Kansas City, Mo.

He said that of a national harvest of two and one-half million pounds of certified Kenland red clover, Idaho grew about one million pounds. Ten million pounds of certified Ranger alfalfa seed were produced nationally during the last harvest year.

largely in southwestern states. The registered seed for the certified plantings was grown in the northern belt, including Idaho.

Wyoming, Nebraska and Colorado he said, are still looking to Idaho for field bean seed. Strains of Great Northern and Pinto beans developed by the University of Idaho are the leading varieties.

Ten Firearm Deaths In 1951
The state fish and game department reported this week that ten persons lost their lives in Idaho through hunting accidents involving the use of firearms during 1951.

The department said that of this number, three were killed while hunting big game animals; two duck hunting; two during a rabbit hunt; one on a squirrel hunt, and two from unknown causes.

The breakdown for types of firearms involved showed four fatalities from shotgun, four from rifle, one from a pistol, and one unknown.

Five of the fatalities resulted when firearms were held or fired by another person. The remaining five persons were killed while removing guns from a car, or a gun falling when leaned against the side of a car.

The department said fatalities of this type had shown a sharp increase over last year, when four persons were killed through firearm hunting accidents. Records show seven fatalities in 1949; 15 in 1948, and 13 in 1947. It is emphasized that hunting accidents resulting from careless or improper use of firearms are the only ones involved, and do not include lost hunters or drownings while hunting.

Records are maintained in co-operation with the National Rifle association on a uniform hunter casualty report form to assemble the facts necessary for an education program attempting reduction of such needless accidents.
